League play in horseshoes, volleyball, and bowling take the spotlight during the girl's first sports season of the year in intramural action.

In boys action, tennis completed their preliminaries in singles and doubles this week-end and fraternity basketball will continue to reign in Tully Gym for the next three weeks.

Mixie Thorpe, sports manager for the volleyball competition, states that more than 55 games have been played this year, with few forfeits. Four winners have been determined in League play. Reynolds 1 in league 1 has copped the honors; Phi Mu 1 are tops in league 3. Chi Omega is leading in league 4 and Alpha Omicron Pi is ahead in league 6. Tournament play is scheduled to end Nov. 9 while league tournaments are due to begin Nov. 2, 1961.

Scoring the highest team score in bowling, 504, West Landis has a head start this season in lane action. Rose Ann Dean has copped the highest individual score, 163. The bowling competition is done on the ground floor of the Women's Gym. Many teams are participating and few forfeits or cancellations have beeo evident thus far.

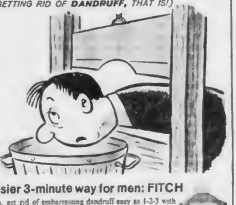
Alpha Chi Omega, Tri-Delt, Kappa Delta and West Landis will compete for the horseshoe trophy as the season closes for the year. Finals are to be played this afternoon with first and second place between the four teams. Bonny Jo Moore and Judy Zeis are the girls representing Alpha Chi Omega in League 1. 1 League II, Haley Hatton and Janet Weiland, representing Tri-Delt, are the winners.

Runners-up for League 1 are Mary Ann Thornton and Carolyn Duyke, of Kappa Delta. Carol Haught and Dorothy Jones are the runners-up pin League II, representing West Landis.

FOUR TEAMS SCORE VICTORY IN TENNIS FINALS SET

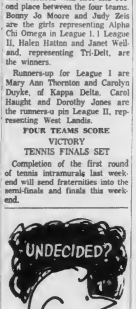
Completion of the first round of tennis intramurals last weekend will send fraternities into the semi-finals and finals this weekend.

Playing Friday afternoon, all day Saturday, and Sunday afternoon, 14 teams were classed as eligible for semi-finals competition. In the singles games, six teams finished, two teams coming out undefeated in their two matches. In doubles, eight teams were in the final competition, again with two teams undefeated.



Kappa Sigma, Phi Kappa Tau, Lambda Chi Alpha and Theta Chi had finalists in both singles and doubles play. Other single finalists include Tau Epsilon Phi, and Phi Delta Theta. Phi Kappa Phi, and Sigma Phi Epsilon did not appear for the singles matches.

Sigma Chi, Sigma Nu, Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Kappa Alpha were the doubles finalists, along with the double winners mentioned above. Sigma Phi Epsilon and Phi Kappa Alpha did not appear for the doubles matches.



PDT, DTD LEADS

Delta Tau Delta held on to their lead in the Gold League Thursday night, defeating Sigma Chi 61-55. Delta Chi and Kappa Sigma returned to the winners rank, knocking over Pi Kappa Alpha and Pi Kappa Phi, 46-47, respectively.

In the Garnet League Kappa Alpha and Sigma Phi Epsilon rolled over their opponents Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Phi Kappa Tau.

'Yankees' Expected Citrus But Can't Find Any Here

Five Massachusetts coeds on a new exchange program at Florida State University had one big disappointment when they stepped off the train at Tallahassee: there were no orange trees to be seen.

None of the five has seen one yet, in fact, although they've been here nearly two months. Tallahassee has very few orange trees—most of them satsumas—but the students are still hopeful of seeing a Florida grove.

FSU STUDENTS

In return for the five Massachusetts students enrolled at Florida State University, FSU coeds are now studying at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst, Mass.

The five at FSU, all elementary education majors, are Sharon Farbman, Union, N. J.; Mary Bliss, South Swansea, Mass.; Roben O'Brien, West Medway, Mass.; Judith Rajecki, Holyoke, Mass.; and Laura Goldman, Malden, Mass.

The exchange program is the initial experimental phase of what may become an extensive student-swapping program. According to Dr. Gifford Hale, professor of education at FSU, the exchanges will enable selected students to enrich their preparation in fields in which various institutions have some special contribution to make.

For instance, Miss Farbman is involved in the FLES (Foreign Languages in the Elementary School) and is taking, in addition to other elementary specialization courses, courses in Spanish and the teaching of foreign languages under Dr. Paul Dickson of FSU.

ELEMENTARY EDUCATION

Others are studying child development, education, social foundations of education and other subjects scheduled by elementary education majors.

Joan T. Monte, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., and Sara Mary Angelyn Smith, Jacksonville, Fla., are the FSU students attending the University of Massachusetts this semester. Letters from these students speak of the fine reception they received in Amherst and the beauty of the New England autumn.

of the New England autumn.

The northerners in Florida reported that they, too, had been well received and said Miss Marie Williams, University social director, has been particularly helpful.

Accustomed to cold New England winters, they are delighted with the mildness of Florida's "cold" months. However, they commented that, "The bugs are huge down here—it must be the heat."

JUNIOR MUSEUM

The coeds have already visited the Tallahassee Junior Museum and before they leave FSU at the end of the semester, they hope to sit in on some Student Government Senate meetings and watch some of the student publications being prepared.

They have already taken part in one of the main campus social activities when they journeyed to Gainesville for the FSU-University of Florida football game.

As part of their class work, the five have already visited Tallahassee Memorial Hospital and the University Nursery School in conjunction with the Child Development course.

Drama Cast Picked

Ronald W. Bartholf and Claudia Melton have been cast as the lead characters in the University Theater's production of the French play The Misanthrope by Moliere. The drama will be presented early in December.

Arthur H. Dorlag, director of the play, translated this particular script of the play.

Bartholf will star in the role of Alceste. Miss Melton will portray Celimene, principle female character.

W. Terry Rogers will play Philinte; Virgil Austin, Orontie; Tom MacDonald, Acaste; and Bill King, Clintandre. These four men will play roles of equal significance in the drama.

Carolyn Johnson will characterize Eliante, while Pat McCoy will represent Arsinoe. Ken Richart will play an officer, Mitchell D Franks was cast to play a dual role of DuBois and Basque.

The Misanthrope is considered by many critics to be the best work of the playwright Moliere.

Alceste is the misanthrope, a person that is cynical and a misfit. The play delves into his romantic and social life.

HUSBANDS, ANYONE?

It has been alleged that coeds go to college for the sole purpose of finding husbands. This is, of course, an infamous canard, and I give fair warning that, small and spongy as I am, anybody who says such a dastardly thing where I am around had better be prepared for a sound thrashing!

Girls go to college for precisely the same reasons as men do: to broaden their horizons, to lengthen their vistas, to drink at the fount of wisdom. But, if, by pure chance, while a girl is engaged in these meritorious pursuits, a likely looking husband should pop into view, why, what's wrong with that? Eh? What's wrong with that?

The question now arises, what should a girl look for in a husband. A great deal has been written on this subject. Some say character is most important, some say background, some say appearance, some say education. All are wrong.

The most important thing—bar none—in a husband is health. Though he be handsome as Apollo and rich as Midas, what good is he if he just lays around all day accumulating bedsores?

The very first thing to do upon meeting a man is to make sure he is sound of wind and limb. Before he has a chance to sweet-talk you, slap a thermometer in his mouth, pull back his eyelids, yank out his tongue, rap his patella, palpate his thorax, ask him to straighten out a horseshoe with his teeth. If he fails these simple tests, phone for an ambulance and go on to the next prospect.

If, however, he turns out to be physically fit, proceed to the second most important requirement to a husband. I refer to a sense of humor.

A man who can't take a joke is a man to be avoided. There are several simple tests to find out whether your prospect can take a joke or not. You can, for example, slash his tires. Or hide his "Mad" comics. Or steal his switchblade. Or turn loose his pet raccoon. Or shave his head.

After each of these good-natured pranks, laugh gaily and shout "April Fool! If he replies, "But this is February nineteenth," or something equally churlish, cross him off your list and give thanks you found out in time.

But if he laughs cheerily and calls you "Little Minx!" put him to the next test. Find out whether he is kindly.

What should a girl look for in a husband?

The quickest way to ascertain his kindliness is, of course, to look at the cigarette he smokes. Is it mild? Is it clement? Is it humane? Does it minister tenderly to the psyche? Does it soothe the synapses? Is it a good companion? Is it genial? Is it bright and friendly and filtered and full of dulcet pleasure from corkscrew till the heart of darkness?

Is it, in short, Marlboro?

If Marlboro it be, then clasp the man to your bosom with hoops of steel, for you may be sure that he is kindly as a summer breeze, kindly as a mother's kiss, kindly to his very marrow.

And now, having found a man who is kindly and healthy and blessed with a sense of humor, the only thing that remains is to make sure he will always earn a handsome living. That, fortunately, is easy. Just enroll him in engineering.

'Open Help Sessions' Clause Opposed By Several Deans

The proposed revisions of the testing system were presented to the deans of Florida State University by Men's Vice President Carl Kuttler and Sen. Don Thigpen at a meeting last week.

Student Senate made the recommendations for revision last Wednesday. It is now up to Faculty Senate to act on the proposals.

The proposed revisions include making old tests available for bookstores to reproduce, having professors file old tests in the Library, not giving old tests over again, having professors return tests promptly, placing more strict supervision over the mimeographing process of tests and open help sessions.

EACH PART DISCUSSED

The meeting was successful, he said, in that suggestions were made and each part of the resolution was discussed. He added that next week additional meetings will be held with other deans from representative departments.

Some of the six or seven deans attending the first meeting were opposed to the amendment to the resolution, which reads: that all help sessions should be open to all students involved in the course.

These deans stated that what a professor did with his own time was his own business. They added that members should be able to help students as they wished.

Student representatives replied that individual help was often necessary and that faculty members were admired for spending time with students who need extra help. It is the favoring of special groups that they considered unfair, they commented.

CAMPUS DECISIONS

In answer to the faculty comment that too many campus decisions were based on non-academic matters, Kuttler said that definite examples of faculty preference toward certain groups will be compiled and presented to Faculty Senate.

It was suggested at the meeting that a faculty-student committee be appointed by FSU President Gordon A. Blackwell. No committee was appointed at that time.

Other suggestions presented were that the resolution be made more specific and that it be adopted for experimentation in one school at a time.

OTHER OPINIONS

Kuttler hopes to gain other faculty opinions and suggestions through more meetings of this type. He also plans to send each faculty member a personal letter and a form requesting their comments.

The campus needs more meetings between students and faculty, Kuttler said. He said the meeting pointed out the gulf that exists between these two groups.

Brings Lawyer

Student Charges Violation Of 'Due Process Of Law'

A charge of failing to register a car with campus officials was answered not only by the student involved but also by his lawyer last Tuesday at the regular meeting of Traffic Court.

John Chason, a senior at FSU, was represented by Jim Richardson, who, in speaking for his client, contended the ticket Chason received was not a legal document. Richardson bases this on the fact that the campus police officer issuing the ticket did not sign the ticket but instead only put his badge number on it. This is in accordance with the procedure set down by the Traffic Office.

Chason entered a plea of "Not Guilty" to the charge and when asked by the court to present his case, was instructed by his lawyer to refuse to answer any questions.

According to Richardson, his client was being denied due process of law and he moved for acquittal. The Court denied the motion, after which Richardson requested the appearance of the campus police officer at the trial. His request was granted and the case continued until today.

No testimony has been offered to support the plea of "Not Guilty" other than questioning the legality of the ticket.

COURT WON'T RECOGNIZE

Bob Sooher, chairman of the Traffic Court, said of this case, which is somewhat out of the ordinary in procedure, "As far as we're concerned it's just another traffic case. If the student committed the violation, he's guilty. If he has any reasonable grounds for not registering his car then the charge will be dismissed. We refuse to recognize any illegality or violation of "due process of law" simply on the technicality that the officer did not sign the ticket. No substantial rights are being denied the student in question."

The decision on the case will be decided at the regular meeting of Traffic Court today.

"Your grandchildren will grow up under Communism!" SEN NIKITA KHRUSHCHEV

Will the Soviet threat come true? Will your grandchildren live under Communism? Forget God? Salute the Soviet flag? "Never!" you say. But are you sure? How can you oppose Communism? One sure way is to help Radio Free Europe.

The voice is that of Nikita Khrushchev. The audience is American.
"Your grandchildren will grow up under Communism!" he shouts.
Will your children live to see the Free World die?
Forget God? Salute the Soviet flag? "Never!" you say. But are you sure?
What can you do to oppose Communism?
There is one sure way.
Help Radio Free Europe.
What does it do?
Every day, to 79 million captive people behind the Iron Curtain, it broadcasts news of the outside world.
It helps keep these people from turning to Communism. The Poles, Czechs, Bulgarians, Rumanians and Hungarians. It keeps alive their friendship for America. It reaches over 90% of these people, despite Communist jamming.
Thousands of letters echo the plea:
"God Bless You! Please keep Radio Free Europe on the air!"
These people are the buffers between Russia and the Free World.
They pose a major obstacle to the Russians starting any war. And Radio Free Europe is their strongest link with the Free World.
But Radio Free Europe depends on individual Americans for its existence. How about it?
Will you help? . . . Give a dollar? . . . Give five dollars? . . . or more? Surely your heart tells you to give something so that our children—and all children—shall live in freedom throughout the world.

Classroom, Exam And Departmental Systems Cause Waste In Colleges

EDITOR'S NOTE: This article entitled, "The Wasted Classroom," by Nathan Claner, is the second in a series of six articles taken from a special supplement titled, "The College Scene," which is in the October issue of HARPER'S MAGAZINE. The article has been condensed and somewhat revised by Ana Carroll, FLAMBEAU staff writer.

There is so little fundamental criticism of our colleges and universities. Most original thinking still comes from them, but this is because there is hardly any place else with even the minor advantages they afford.

There are serious problems to the colleges. Despite the millions of dollars now being spent, we are not doing much too improve college education.

A very large part of what students and teachers do in the colleges and universities is sheer waste. It is not particularly vicious waste. Nor does it prevent useful and necessary things from being done in the colleges. But is it worth speaking about the waste because it is vast, and because so little is being done about it.

There are, I found, three main sources of waste in college teaching: the classroom system, the examination system and the departmental system.

No doubt certain college subjects do require both classroom teaching and as many classroom hours as are now given to them. But this is not the case with most college subjects.

A single classic mode of organization dominates our schools. Almost all classes meet for three hours a week. These classes are conducted by the teacher in a lecture discussion style. During most of the class time the teacher talks to the students.

There are, however, few college subjects in the humanities and the social sciences in which forty-five hours of the teacher lecturing and the students listening can be useful.

Now it is true that this strait jacket is broken at certain time by seminars in which smaller groups meet only once a week with teachers. The seminar system is an enormous step forward: via the teacher generally lectures only once a week (and can consequently lecture better), and (b) the students work in small groups. More important, the students have a better chance to discover that true education can only result from their own attempts to organize and clarify a problem.

If there is another way of making fruitful use of forty-five hours of class time, at least one can use this time to prepare the students for the examinations. I remind the reader that I have limited myself to the humanities and social sciences. In technical subjects—sciences, mathematics, languages—examinations are not only possible but necessary. One can arrange a language or a science or mathematical discipline into levels of complexity so that one must pass atest in step one before taking step two, and so on.

But in the humanities and the social sciences this kind of ordering often is literally not possible.

The nature of examinations in the humanities and the social sciences must be different.

Since teachers are required to give courses and grades, they too often run their courses by feeding out neat interpretations which can be properly regurgitated at exam times, and marked "right."

Not all courses are conducted like this. In some colleges the requirements for grades are met by something far more adequate than the usual examinations—the student's own work. He is asked to apply what he learns from reading and discussion to the analysis of a piece of literature or the consideration of a problem.

The answer to the problem is to substitute the demanding paper for the examination and the seminar for the class.

The entire concept of college examinations, in short, need drastical review. When students taking courses in th humanities and social sciences are asked challenging essay questions, they are being tested not on the specific course but on the sum of their work in the broad area of knowledge in question. Why have specific course examinations and grades? Why not give the student a limited number of general tests toward the end of his college career, with a few over-all grades? If colleges emphasized intensive reading and seminars rather than lectures—and individual papers rather than sterile course exams—this kind of examination would seem natural —if examinations were required at all.

Finally, the third evil of college teaching today is the departments. To be a member of a department means that a man owes his loyalty to his field of knowledge as well as to his university.

What this means is that if it is much easier for a man to think of himself as a specialist than as someone who is engaged in liberal education. And he is more concerned in communicating his discipline to the students than in educating them.

In effect, while graduate schools do produce some good scholars they produce many poor teachers. But there are more pernicious effects of the system of departments than the role of the discipline itself. There is competition among the departments for status, for students, for prestige. This means that there is constant bickering over how many courses a student must be required to take in this or in that subject. And the central concern of such arguments is the interests of the departments.

The question of building and teaching a curriculum relevent to the needs of the college-educated citizen is far less pressing.

Departmentalization thus means that educational programs not fitting into the departmental scheme are shortchanged. Everyone knows that sociology, anthropology, social psychology, political science and history today deal in large part with a common subject matter. But joint courses in this general field must usually be conducted by people whose primary loyalty is to their discipline. Indeed, it is almost impossible to find distinguished people who are ready to devote themselves to departmental courses in the social sciences.

As one looks over the American college scene, it becomes clear that American education has never been more conservative than it is today. Why is this so? It is not because the experiments in changing the undergrodaate program have failed.

In recent years emphasis on achievement in departmental disciplines has been reinforced by the enormous research funds which have been made available to the departments by government, industry and foundations. As a result, for a young scholar to devote time, thought and energy to developing general-education programs may well involve risk to his career. Then the general-education movement is being crushed, and the plague of departmentalization now grows even in the small progressive colleges.

Packard Claims He Is 'Status Seeker'

By GEORGIANA FRY BATEMAN
Guest Writer

People often become irritated when accused of seeking status.

But not Vance Packard, who admits somewhat unanimously that he is a status seeker.

The slightly balding, medium in stature, outwardly calm man is the author of a best seller, The Status Seekers, in which he argues that classless America is rapidly directing itself toward a rigid class structure.

MET WITH PRESS

Dressed in a dark businessman's suit, the social critic met with members of the press prior to delivering the fourth Beth Wallon lecture in Westcott Auditorium, Wednesday evening.

Packard disclosed that he lives in Fairfield County, Conn., with his wife and three teenage children in a "big white house on top of a hill. We bought it for a status reason."

When lighting up a Parliament cigarette, he added, "It reminds me of a farmhouse where I used to live. And I like the view from my wife, an artist who continually raises the price of her paintings every time someone inquires about them, does the housekeeping. They've never had a maid. In addition, Mrs. Packard manages a rental on an apartment and three houses.

MRS. PACKARD

All these functions combined to spot to make Mrs. Packard "more haggard than bored," her husband revealed.

What kind of a car does he drive? His wife's Daphne that "comes dumn close to being a motorcycle" and a Chevrolet station wagon. The latter suggests that he might "want to seem sociable and up-to-date but in a middle-of-the-road sort of way" according to his book, The Hidden Persuaders.

For the sociologist who ponders whether or not he might be the subject of Packard's next book the answer is definitely negative.

A treatise on the executive and how to rise in the corporation has been tentatively titled, The Way To The Top. He's spent the past year doing research and is starting to write it. Selections from it were with him in Tallahassee, neatly filed in his briefcase.

NEWSPAPERMAN

Packard, a former newspaperman with a master's degree in journalism from Columbia University, is not a social reformer or a man with a cause.

He is strictly a reporter of what he sees.

Business enterprises were not pleased with his latest book, The Waste Makers, where he comments on strategies developed to make the American people discard products before they have lived out their usefulness.

Packard believes there is more of a trend for quality in products now, though he doesn't begin to suggest that his book is responsible for this.

He cited the nation's fabulous airports as a good element that is resulting from the impact of the business dominated culture.

SOCIAL CRITIC

Packard became a social critic after writing for magazines, often on subjects related to the social sciences. Particularly interested in motivational research, Packard investigated the area himself when he couldn't encourage others to explore it.

Advertisers for Parliament would doubtlessly never portray Packard in one of their television commercials. The author-lecturer is quite disrespectful to cigarettes.

He fervently crushes the flaming tobacco, until the last spark is out.

VANCE PACKARD DISCUSSES HIS SPEECH WITH TWO FLORIDA STATE UNIVERSITY PROfessors just before he went on stage to deliver the fourth Beth Moor Wallon lecture Wednesday night. From l. to r. are Dr. Lewis Killian, who introduced Packard; and Dr. Gib DeBusk, University Lecture Series chairman.

Americans Support Hedonism: Packard

By JOAN ABBOTT
Flambeau News Editor

A redefinition of personal values and attitudes by the American people as individuals is needed to stem the rising tide of consumerism, social critic Vance Packard asserted Wednesday night.

The author of The Hidden Persuaders spoke at the fourth annual Beth Wallon Moor lecture at Florida State University on "The Changing Character Of The American People."

The destiny of the American culture depends on whether or not the American people "can overthrow Madison Avenue," he stressed. The "impact on our system of values of what I believe to be the over-commercialization of American life . . . is becoming, fantastic," he said.

ENCOURAGE HEDONISM

"We are seeing a deliberate encouragement of hedonism," he said, as the American people are being continually pressured to buy more and more. Advertisers attempt to "wear the product out in our mind" and to promote the concept that items are "out of style" in an effort to sell more products he said. The population explosion is being given "very little thought" except by business interests who look forward to it as meaning "100 million more customers," he said. One company has even gone so far as to post a billboard with a stork on it captioned, "This bird means business," he reported.

Packard was mainly concerned in his lecture as he is in his books, with pointing out the social trends, rather than providing a solution. There is no simple solution, he pointed out, adding that he chooses mainly to report on the problems.

VICTIMS OF 'COMMERCIALISM'

In his latest book, The Waste Makers, Packard says Americans have become victims of "consumerism" and that manufacturers are building obsolescence into their products in order to sell again. As a result, he said, waste has become a virtue and "product death" a watchword in American industry.

He does believe, however, some Americans are beginning to recognize the ways in which they are being pressured into buying in order to promote business which he finds to be encouraging.

But, he said, more and more people are getting life's satisfaction from consuming material goods. It is a "getting rather than giving" proposition, he said. Many people are getting no personal satisfaction from their job," he added.

This is a direct result from pressure to consume. Another manifestation of this is the fact that some people "trade in their cars every two years and trade in their friends every four years," he added.

HUMAN SPIRIT

The problem is also one of the human spirit, he said. "We need to develop deeply felt personal standards," he explained. He described himself as being vigorously in favor of effort to help create the public's conception of what the Good Life is."

He called for more moral education and emphasis by teachers on setting a "personal example." "Good citizenship requires a well developed ability to form and live by value judgments," he added. The "great challenge" is the formulation of personal philosophies."

The educational system has a big role to play in the future, he stressed. Unfortunately, "We spend more on liquor, cigarettes and gambling than we do on our entire educational system from kindergarten to graduate school," he added.

For the coming decade Packard, however predicted a continuation of the present shift of our creative activity from production and consumption of goods

Ticket Plan Changed Again

Starting Monday each student personally sign (sel ature) his own I B M card which he presents, with his I D card, to receive tickets for all University sponsored events for which tickets are required. If two or more students wish to sit together, each must sign his own I B M card. The student presenting the I B M cards for tickets must also present each student's I D card.

There has been some misunderstanding, and some those of the new ticket system, according to Mrs. Ruth Tate of the Westcott Ticket Office. The above proper procedure has been established by the student's protection, she stated.

Bond Machinery Approved By BOC

By BEN SHARP
And SHARON GAUSE

The Board of Control yesterday unanimously approved an emergency proposal to set up machinery to issue bonds to supplement monies appropriated by the Legislature.

But the proposal did not specify the amounts of the bond issue and left the $15 or $25 million question hanging until a later date.

Although the Board meeting began at 2 p.m. yesterday in the State Board of Control office at Florida State University, the Board did not vote on the proposal until almost 5 p.m.

"This simply sets up the machinery for borrowing up to $25 million in the future. Decision will be made later as to where buildings will be placed and what money will be spent," said Ralph Odum, Asst. Attorney General who drew up the proposal.

Frank Buchanan, Board of Control member, emphasized that this was only being done because of an emergency caused by the lack of Legislative appropriations.

"The Board should quality that we are only adopting this measure if the Legislature does not appropriate additional funds," said Buchanan.

"This is only good in case of an emergency," emphasized Florida State University President, Gordon W. Blackwell. "The emergency came about because the Legislature failed to appropriate money for the buildings needed.

"I do not give the Legislature an easy way out for the future. This is, in effect, letting the students finance the construction of academic building," he said.

The approval of such a fund, which would increase the measure to give the Board of Control more funds with which to "go ahead on building in the University System, is subject to approval by the State Board of Education and the State Budget Commission.

This plan is a projection of existing money and leaves no obligation on the 1963 Legislature. It creates a central fund which would make use of existing unused and unpledged student fees.

According to Dr. Broward Culpepper, this would only concern the provision of funds for acquisition and construction of capital improvements. State universities would still find it necessary to call on the State Legislature session by session, to provide additional operational costs which will come with growth.

In an estimate of unpledged building fees in the university system, the Board sees a surplus

Court Denies Dorm Appeal On Grounds Of Jurisdiction

By MILA ARNOLD
Flambeau Staff Writer

An appeal to Honor Court concerning infractions in the run-off election for Lieutenant Governor of Smith Hall was denied Tuesday when the court ruled that it lacked jurisdiction.

Bill Kahn, losing candidate for this office, stated that his main purpose in protesting this election was not to implicate one individual, but to point out the possibility that the election could very easily have been "tampered with."

The official opinion of the Honor Court is that it is not within its jurisdiction to render a legal interpretation of the results of this election, because no provision for election of dormitory officers is included within the Student Body Constitution and Statutes.

Under this condition, the residents of Smith Hall must abide by their dorm's constitution, and consequently by the ruling of the elections committee

OPINION

Apart from a legal interpretation, however the Honor Court rendered the following opinion:

"The Honor Court does not condone the faulty elections procedure which, to some degree, has taken place at Smith Hall. We are of the opinion that, in the best interests of sound dormitory government, a new run-off election be declared. We further recommend that an elections procedure section be added to the Smith Hall By-Laws, subject to approval by the Attorney General, to avoid the possibilities of any such complaints in the future."

ORIGINAL ELECTION

The original election was held Oct. 10, and the run-off Oct. 12. Kahn brought his appeal before an elections committee the day of the run-off to consider the infractions.

The committee's decision was that though there were possible infractions, they in no way affected the outcome.

Kahn's main stated purpose in appealing to the Honor Court was to clarify the situation and to prevent such situations from occurring in the future.

PROTESTS

Some protests that Kahn made to the Honor Court were as follows:

1. The By-Laws of the Smith Hall Constitution state that their regulations cannot violate any campus regulations.
2. Kahn's opponent in the election, John Glassgow, had pos-

Senate Acts On Official Non Feasance

The Student Senate tackled nonfeasance in its main legislative action Wednesday afternoon

The senators approved a resolution which will keep track of the absences that senators accrue in Student Senate, Men's or Women's Senates and committee meetings.

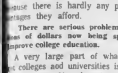
A total of five absences from Student Senate during one semester will constitute non feasance in office. An absence from Men's or Women's Senate meeting will equal one Student Senate absence, while absence from a committee meeting will equal one-half a Senate absence

ROLL CALL

A senator will be credited with a half absence if he misses either roll call.

Sen. Jeedy Smith proposed an amendment which said that a senator could be excused if he were confined in the equivalent of the infirmary. The amendment passed.

The bill, introduced by Sens. Arnie Gibbs and Gene Ferlita, came ueder fire from two factions.



One faction felt the bill was in imperfect state and that it needed to be returned to a committee.

Men's Vice President Carl Kutler continually attempted to get the resolution tabled.

"It seems that everything which

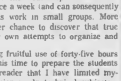
Adam Keefe To Perform For Homecoming

Adam Keefe
. . . in action

Comedian Adam Keefe, who specializes in satirical skits about old movies and does "curtain tures" of movie stars will be part of Florida State University's annual Homecoming Show.

Keefe's act will be combined with the entertainment of petite blonde songstress, Isobel Robins and the folk singing of the Limeliters for a double show presentation in Westcott Auditorium Nov. 18.

Keefe, who will appear on the Ed Sullivan TV Show, Nov. 12, is the first comic to reach the big-time night-club circuit via the Greenwich Village coffeehouses.



DEPENDS ON VISUAL

Using a technique that depends heavily on the visual, he applies a combination of wild pantomine, facial contortion, double-talk, vocal sound effects and rapid semi-stream-of-consciousness comment to such subjects as "Transylvania Avenue" or Horror-Movie Show on Forty-second Street, and Westerns.)

Another subject is Great Movie Comedians, among whom he lists Chaplin, W. C. Fields and Bela Lugosi — who was, says Keefe, a rare type.

He also includes in his repertoire, impressions of old movie sound tracks complete with scratches and splices.

Miss Robins, who began in the entertainment field as a night club "stool-singer" now specializes in comic song material. She does a takeoff on those Dick Powell-Ruby Keeler musicals which ran in the thirties. Pseudo —blues and burlesques on college songs are also often part of her act.

Late Night

Late permission has been granted to women students for the night of the Pow Wow, Nov. 17, according to Miss Katherine Warren, dean of women. Late permission allows women students a curfew of 1:30 a.m.

Flambeau Editorials

FLAMBEAU editorials do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the student body as a whole or the administration of Florida State University. Editorials represent only the opinions of staff members and the writers follows the editorial.

Lead On, President Byrd

Student Body President Bobby Byrd spoke out on issues which vitally need attention more firmly in his "State of the Campus" address than at any time since he moved into the presidency unopposed. His ideas of things which are needed on this campus are enlightening.

Significant proposals were:

1. "WE ARE NOW IN THE process of organizing an advisory committee from various living areas on campus.

2." INVESTIGATIONS ARE being made into the possibility of developing an exchange program with a foreign University.

3. "SCHOOL SPIRIT IS always a vital concern to Student Government. I have not been pleased with the support that our team (football) has received.

4. "WE WILL CONTINUE seeking efforts toward my suggestion for staggered lunch hours for University officials.

5. "OUR MOST IMPORTANT consideration should be in the academic order. In this respect, I believe that special interest groups for cultural interest should be encouraged.

6. "OUR MARRIED STUDENTS, which comprise a great percentage of our total university enrollment, deserve more attention from Student Government. They have problems which are common to no other particular group on our campus. I would like to recommend the establishment of a representative of this group in the executive branch.

7. "INTERCAMPUS communications and transportation are becoming problems with our expanding plant. With a campus car ban in the forseeable future we must plan now for a more adequate system of student transportation.

8. "WE HAVE THE opportunity of developing a model governmental system, based on trimester operation. We must be especially careful in our consideration so that we do not confuse what will be workable now with what will be workable in the future.

9."AN AREA, in which I believe that we should concentrate more effort, is the often neglected Foreign Students. These students which represent the top perceintage of students in their home countries are sometimes not made to feel a real part of our campus.

10. "OUR SUMMER GOVERNMENT is in dire need of reorganization. Much criticism has been directed at this past summer's council It is my feeling that Summer Government if it is to be continued at FSU must be reorganized and structured to meet the needs of our growing summer program.

But in his attempt to give the "State of the Campus," Byrd failed in one respect. He failed to give concrete evidence of any action taken on these proposals. He hinted that things were being done in several instances, but he failed to back this by telling the student body exactly what he was doing. This might lead some to believe that talk, not action, was eminating from the Presidents office.

THIS WE SINCERELY hope is not so. Words are hollow if they are not backed up with solid facts, sound proposals, and effective action.

Byrd warned the senators in closing that "Many of us can expect to be disliked by the people we have voted and unsettled from intellectual or powerful positions: yet if you do not perform this aggravation you will have failed to stir the force which can produce a student government that will justify its own existence."

"Being successful this year means working toward goals well established in our minds. It means being willing to sacrifice something of our popularity among fellow students, and it means sacrificing some of our own use of formal facilities of the University."

Byrd has set down a yardstick of sacrifice and courage with which to measure Student Government and himself. He has stated what he wants to do, but he has yet to say what he has done.

Lead on, President Byrd. The Student Body is waiting to follow—and to measure actions of you and the student government by your own words.

Packard Points The Way

The tremendous turn-out for Vance Packard's lecture Wednesday night proved one thing conclusively — prominent speakers can and will draw crowds of respectable size at Florida State University.

MANY CAMPUS organizations which have sponsored lectures have begun to despair of having a good turn-out after the repeatedly poor showings we have made for other visitors. The problem then, is not a lack of interest in lecture activities, but rather a lack of interest in the usual type offered at lectures.

The Lecture Series Committee is to be congratulated on the selection and presentation of a speaker who was of such interest to so many persons that Westcott Auditorium was filled. A feat few shows and fewer lectures can claim to have accomplished.

HOWEVER, THE FACT that Packard's lecture was of sufficient interest to induce approximately 1,629 people to take time out in the middle of a busy week at mid-term is hint enough that the potential interest in the speaker was far greater. Many faculty members and students simply may not have been able to schedule two hours for the lecture at this particularly busy time. Others may have come late and were unable to find seats. No doubt Packard's talk was, for one reason or another, passed up by many who would have enjoyed and benefited from hearing it.

In the future the situation perhaps could be corrected by having the speeches of prominent visitors recorded and made available to WFSU-FM and to interested classes.

FSU IS NOT so often privileged to have men of the prominance of Vance Packard on campus. We cannot afford to make less than full use of the opportunities their appearances present to us.

To make the recorded speeches of visiting personalities prominent in many fields available to the people who can't always attend the lectures, etcetera, would be a booster shot for general campus interest. And we think that when speakers with whom the student body is familiar come here, they can draw as large and as attentive audiences as Packard did. We are for anything that can stimulate student interest in events going on outside Westcott Gate.

Dean Looks Ahead In Moments Of Calm

By Dr. DONALD LOUCKS
Dean of Men

While sitting in my always turbulent and sometimes terrifying office during one of those infrequent moments of calm last spring, there passed through my mind a series of unrelated ideas and projects which, if they became facts not fancies, would enrich the lives of every member of our university family.

ADMITTEDLY, SOME are of more merit than others; some are more far-reaching than others; and some might even border on being purely machinations of a mind weakened by too long an association with the Dean of Men's office. All perhaps, are controversial; some for financial reasons, others simply because human nature is a variant.

Be that as it may, for what they are worth, here are four suggested ideas and/or projects offended to some extent by their originator but open to all for modification and criticism. A fifth idea which was originally included in these suggestions, a pedestrian underpass across US 90 near DeGraff Hall, has already come into being) These are separate, unrelated ideas; without regard to order or importance. This list might have been expanded; but that relative calm mentioned previously was, as it always is, short-lived.

THE FIRST OF THE fantasies concerns campus communications. Daily, we hear statements made by students and faculty along this line; "I wish I had known/or thus or that event was scheduled for today;" or "I didn't know Professor Charles-Hall was re-viewing that book;" or "I intended to see that basketball game last night but it slipped my mind."

Athletic events, musical recitals, stage productions, well-known lecturers, and multifarious informal happenings of note on our campus frequently come and go with far less support than they deserve and might have had if better means of communication had been available. All this despite a very excellent information service This Week, a widely read three-weekly Flambeau, eye-catching posters, multi-colored schedules and mimeographed announcements.

IT APPEARS TO ME that a much more effective method of spreading information of this kind to our university family would be one which includes not only our sense of sight but our sense of hearing as well. People don't have to read but they must listen to some extent. (College professors may disagree with this latter statement.) Simply closing your eyes during a TV commercial doesn't eliminate the sound. Why wouldn't it be practical for the University to set up a communication system geared to reach every area of our campus? Such a system would be used for periodic broadcasts of carefully prepared, concise items of interest and information to our student body and faculty. Some controls, obviously would have to be set up to prevent such things evening over the loudspeaker as: "For sale: one slightly used typewriter," or "To be given away: seven baby kittens," etc.

Times and frequencies of the newscasts for maximum consumption could easily be determined. Perhaps, at the end of a class period in the middle of the morning and afternoon while students were changing between classes might be a good time. Setting up a definite and exact time for each broadcast announcements would be necessary in order to establish the listening habit. A three-minute broadcast would permit approximately 330 words of carefully edited up-to-the-minute news.

THE SECOND PROJECT is one of public relations value. How many times have you driven through a city where there is located a college or university without taking the time to visit the campus, even though you would have enjoyed, at least, driving through the grounds? Here, with highly traveled US 90 bordering the northern edge of our campus, we have an excellent opportunity to render service both to our visitors and to FSU by making it possible for strangers to see the wonders of our campus. My suggestion is simply to have a small but attractive building called, perhaps, an Information Center, where travelers might be enticed to stop and visit. Here would be provided large scale maps of tours of the campus which the visitor might choose from with regard to his own time limitations. For example, with time being the most important item to most tourists, tours of ten minutes, twenty minutes, or an hour could be planned to fit the high points of our campus. In this way, a traveller, with an FSU student as guide, might see much of our campus and carry away many pleasant thoughts of our hospitality. With over 250 organizations on campus, it would not be necessary for one group to man (or to girl) the information station more than one day a year. This should impose little burden on any one group and would be a fine service project for many. Let us visualize a traveller, lured by inviting sign boards at the city limits and at the Tour Center, stopping to see what this was all about. Quickly he would be shown the possible routes about the campus and then be given a chance to make a selection. The student guide would ride with the family and be a source of much valuable information. Afterwards, a good selling job by a well-informed student would enhance the reputation of FSU and perhaps create good-will throughout the country.

The services might be extended even to the point of providing orange juice if financially feasible. There are a number of ways that could be explored for financing this additional service. In addition to on-the-spot information, kits containing brochures, pamphlets, etc., telling the story and the glory of Florida State could be available for interested parties.

MANY PEOPLE SHARE with the writer an annoying and often embarrassing weakness in remembering names of persons with whom they come to contact frequently. It is an unfortunate fact that quite often the person we cannot recall a name is because we never actually knew it in the first place. As a tragic but personal example of this failure to associate names and people, the following is cited.

There are a number of faculty and staff (including the writer) approaching the quarter-century mark in years of service to this institution. Among this group are those whom the writer has seen countless times over these twenty-odd years, yet cannot call by name these individuals. More serious in my estimation is for a faculty member to have a speaking acquaintance with a student over a period of four years and never learn this student's identity. Exaggerated you say, impossible! Hasn't this happened to you?

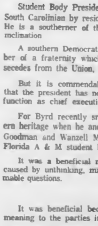
THIS TRAGEDY is compounded still more as those same students return to FSU over the years as active and loyal alumni. Once again you are in a dilemma, caught between the Scylla of steadfastly avoiding the alumnus altogether and Charybdis of putting up the best, but usually futile, bluff you can on the spur of the moment.

Again, what can be done? Perhaps, this plan would alleviate the problem to some extent. Why not wear name tags (with big print for eager but aging professors) for a period of two or three weeks at the beginning of the school year in the fall and perhaps a week at midyear?

IF THIS SMACKS too much of the army, balance the annoyance with the good that will be derived before condemning the idea. A recognized name and face, followed by a cheery greeting, will do much toward extending the well-earned reputation of FSU for being a friendly campus.

South of Tully Gymnasium and east of the athletic field is located a part of our campus seldom used by our student body, at least not by groups, yet representing potential for pleasure and recreation which surely should be exploited. This is the pleasant wooded area which serves primarily as a bird sanctuary at the present, a function hardly profitable in view of the 10,000 or more students and faculty who might well be utilizing the area in a number of ways.

HERE MIGHT BE located a dozen fairly elaborate and attractive outdoor cooking areas, landscaped to give privacy so that many groups might use the area simultaneously. Here, too, could be located a sufficient number of shuffleboard courts, horseshoe pits, tables and comfortable benches for use by groups of picnickers from the University.



Campus groups and organizations could be encouraged to schedule their outings for the area. Perhaps, one of here or the Dean of Men begins to show Blue Sink and similar places of amusement, despite their obvious advantages of distance and less restrictions, might lose a lot of their drawing power. This idyllic spot, so picturesue in its natural setting, could be made a showspot of our campus as well as serving our university community in a most practical way.

Southerner Bob And A Meeting

Student Body President Bobby Byrd is a Georgian by birth, a South Carolinian by residence, and presently a Floridian by choice. He is a southerner of the most partisan variety by birth and by inclination.

A southern Democrat, a southern Baptist, and an ardent member of a fraternity which waves the Confederate flag and yearly secedes from the Union, Byrd thinks and drawls like a southerner.

But it is commendable, and somewhat unbelievable to some, that the president has not let southern prejudice interfere with his function as chief executive.

For Byrd recently smiled off jibes about his "redneck" southern heritage when he and Ken van Assendorp met with Percy Lee Goodman and Wansell Mobley, president and vice-president of the Florida A & M student body.

It was a beneficial meeting, the type that soldiers racial rents caused by unthinking, militant partisans on both sides of the flammable questions.

* * * * *

It was beneficial because this was a meeting which had real meaning to the parties involved.

The four student executives discussed mutual problems like hours for freshmen, drinking at the stadium, off limit places, wearing apparel, and a student union.

The Florida State leaders learned that the hours for freshmen to be in their dorms at the cross-town university were 8:30 p.m. for women and 11 p.m. for men. They found that drinking at the stadium is not a severe problem at A & M because Rattler games are played in the adjacent county dry area.

Off limits however, is an acute problem. An A & M student is not allowed to go off campus except for certain reasons and at certain times. The Burrmuda shorts question has also arisen there.

A & M has already erected a new student union and the FSU leaders inquired about its material and size.

* * * * *

"I was very happy to meet with them and to discuss problems common to both schools," said Byrd. "I found them to be most cooperative, especially in the information they gave us concerning their existing union."

"I hope that we can continue the same cooperative attitude and we will continue to discuss with them any problem that may effect either school or of a common nature," drawled the southerner.

And so a meeting which had significance as a discussion by four students body heads ended on a friendly. More of these will be scheduled for the future.

Two conclusions might be drawn from this. Bobby Byrd, despite his cherished southern heritage, has initially indicated that he is willing, even eager, to meet Negro leaders on even pressing issues questions which need discussing. More important, collegiate leaders from both races have indicated a desire and willingness to sit down together and discuss intelligently meaningful issues which confront them.

This is a healthy sign for the future. For calm, intelligent discussion is the only antidote for racial strife.

The Games Of Indian Summer

By DOUG SMITH

It's been rather warm around these parts, lately — must be Indian Summer. The temperature always seems to go skyhigh after the initial cool spell.

WITH THE WEATHER so unseasonable, it's difficult to do anything. One just can't get into the swing of things during a heat wave. Nobody wants to study when the days, and sometimes the nights, are warm. There are so many other diversions such as Hide and Seek, Blind Man's Bluff, and Trick or Treat. Warm weather seems to bring out the sporting nature in just about everybody.

The only thing this Indian Summer has lacked so far is a good storm. And the way the clouds have been building up, it may not be too long in coming. We really need a good storm, complete with thunder and lightning, wailing and gnashing of teeth, and charge, recharge and counter-charge. It might clear the air and even turn the campus green again.

BY THE WEATHER stays hot, and things get dull, we'll forget the whole thing and go somewhere else? New York can be a Winter Festival too, you know, and at least the weather is consistent.

Think of all the advantages of a sojourn in the City. The museums, the plays, and the parties. It's rather like moving from the eighteenth to the twentieth century in two hours. (The time it takes to fly to New York.)

From Conradi

Open Letter To Robert Sanchez

I have read your recent comments on all and sundry, especially the hilarious one concerning the art department. The restraint exemplified by Stuart Brisley is amazing you was commendable. I am grateful to you for providing me with many hearty chuckles. However, after reading your recent thing on the Last Days of Lincoln, it occurs to me that perhaps you are the one thing but laughable Several questions about you and your "article" arise which I would like to have you answer. May I inquire about what training you have received in the theatre which makes you a competent critic? How much professional work have you done? How many academic hours have been devoted to a study of the theatre? What honors in this art form have been bestowed upon you which makes you a judge of this artistic endeavor? Or are your qualifications as theatre critic no greater than they were as an art critic? There is more to the theatre than mere attendance just as there is more to the production of graphic art than casual observation.

You mention the words "stationary" and "unanimated." Did you mean to imply an absence of movement? If so, was it due to direction in order to achieve an effect? Was it actually stylized blocking? Do you know what "blocking" is? You, Mr. Campbell was "ill prepared by rehearsal." Where is your support for this statement? On what do you base your judgement? Mr. Campbells timing? His vocal inflection? Technique? Or are you relying on rumor and word of mouth? After all, how many rehearsals did you watch?

"The other performances may generously be described as mixed . . . ." Whose generosity, Mr. Sanchez? Not yours. I hope "Mixed" ! Mixed how? Superior to excellent? Poor to fair? Poor to Superior? Or was the word "mixed" the best substitute for a lack of artistic criterion?

"As theater, it was an utter flop." What is theater, Mr. Sanchez? I notice you spelled it "re". Are you referring to an edifice for dramatic performances or spectacles? If you are, I agree. Conradi theater certainly has some drawbacks Are you referring to the performance of drama? If so, how many plays have you directed? Written? Acted in? Painted scenery for? Just what is your definition of theatre?

What night did you see the play? Did you return any other night to check your impressions? Are you aware that the play you so roundly censured no longer exists and was re-written over the weekend? Or are you not familiar with the process involved in producing a new play? And last, Mr. Sanchez, you mentioned an absence of criticism. I would suggest you at least glance before you leap. Dr. Allan Thomson wrote what I am sure could be considered a critical review for the Tallahassee Democrat.

Mr. Sanchez, I realize that you have a right to your individual opinion of the play. I also realize your right to communicate them, as an individual. However, your name appears on the Flambeau staff, you wrote as a columnist. May I remind you that some people who read your column don't realize that you don't know what you're talking about. Perhaps you might re-evaluate your professional ethics as a journalist. You must have some very strong ethics to compensate for your lack of knowledge and taste.

Mr. Sanchez, I implore you to return to the field of general social comment. You are so amusing It is a shame to waste your ability in artistic critique.

Bobby Byrd Says

Student Union Will Be A Reality

By HOWARD DENSON
Flambeau Staff Writer

The University Union is ...ally coming into the ...ages of reality, said Stu... Body President Bobby ...yrd in his State of the ...ampus address Wednes...

"We are still awaiting final approval on our loan from a national agency, but we are reasonably certain of approval and by the end of this month we should be able to start working toward release of final plans for bids," said Byrd.

UNION PLANNING

"Much work is yet to be done in planning our union program," he continued. The University Union's program "should revolutionize student activity at Florida State."

He added that a swimming pool was included in the plans for the union complex.

Speaking before the Student Senate, he also told of progress concerning the insurance program, Student Government functions, campus representation, exchange programs, school spirit, staggered lunch hours, academics, communications, transportation and married student problems.

The Student Body President said the Student Government radio show and the secretary of welfare's insurance program have improved. He also praised the committee planning the annual Student Government Retreat, which will be this weekend.

SPEAKER'S BUREAU

"The Speaker's Bureau, under the direction of Lyman Fletcher, has already outlined a more expansive itinerary and a more basically coordinated program than in the past," Byrd said.

The president also warned the senators, "Student Government is not a closed corporation, it is the responsibility of the executive, legislative and judicial branches to maintain equal opportunities for all students to participate."

There is too much power vested in the hands of the Summer Council, said Byrd. He recommended that Student Government revise the summer government to lessen its power.

EXCHANGE PROGRAM

"Investigations are being made into the possibility of developing an exchange program with a foreign university," he said. "To make FSU more universal, I hope that I shall be calling upon you shortly for the necessary approval of this project," he added.

Praising the university's athletic record, he said, "I have not been pleased with the support that our team has received. To expect our athletic teams to rise to national prominence without the enthusiastic support of the people they represent, is to expect a senator to be elected without any voters."

The Senate may be instrumental in accomplishing establishing staggered lunch hours for university officials, he said.

"Special interest groups for cultural interest should be encouraged," he said, stating that Student Government's most important consideration should be in the academic order.

"I seek your support in efforts to make more and better text books available at lower cost to the students," Byrd said.

MARRIED STUDENTS

Married students deserve more attention from Student Government, he said. "They have problems which are common to no other particular group on our campus; I would like to recommend the establishment of a representative of this group in the executive branch.

"It is my belief that an Under-Secretary of Married Students under the Secretary of Welfare could most effectively work with this group," he said.

Intercampus communications and transportation are becoming problems with FSU's expanding plant, he said.

"No program can be successful without adequate communication," he said, "with a campus car ban in the foreseeable future, we must plan now for a more adequate system of student transportation."

TRIMESTER PLANS

The president added that extensive research and study must go into Student Government's plans and proposals for operation under the approaching trimester system. "We must be careful so that we do not confuse what will be working now with what will be workable in the future."

The senate also passed two bills pertaining to polling procedures and length of office of precinct senators.

The polling procedure measure, introduced by Seo. Gibbs, required that members of the Elections Committee will be directly responsible for seeing that polling procedures are correctly carried out.

There was some opposition to the word "directly." "If polling workers go wrong, why should the Elections Committee be responsible. Something needs to be added to take the whole burden from the committee," said Sen. Johnny Smith. His motion to strike out "directly" failed.

The precinct senator bill said that an upperclass precinct senator would terminate his office at the installation of his successor, that a class senator and a precinct senator who graduated or changed residence at the termination of school year would have a successor appointed by the Student Body President. If this successor were not chosen within two weeks, an election would be called.

REPRESENTATIVES OF OMICRON DELTA KAPPA, MORTAR BOARD AND PHI ETA SIGMA talk over the drive to raise money for scholarships with the Director of Financial Aid, Dr. James Carr. Members of these organizations will sell Palmolive packets for men, worth $2, for $.25. Proceeds from the sales will be given to the scholar ship fund. Students are Duke Scott, ODK, Ann Brennan, Mortar Board, and Tom Hosney, Phi Eta Sigma.

...ission of the ballot boxes at one time.

3. The polls were closed from a p p r o ximately 1:45 - 2:15, thereby preventing some votes from being cast.
4. The ballots were kept in unsealed shoe boxes until 4:45.
5. Any male student could have voted in the election, because place of residence is not listed on I. D. cards.
6. At least one witness heard campaigning at the polls.
7. A list of poll workers was not posted.
8. A witness can state that at least one I. D. card was not punched, thereby allowing an individual to vote twice.

GLASGOW ELECTED

John Glasgow, who was elected Lieutenant Governor in the run-off election, replied in defense to these accusations that:

1. Two witnesses saw him take the ballot boxes from the switchboard to the table. He did this only in an effort to be of help.
2. It is extremely difficult to seal a shoe box with a padlock.
3. He and two others were asked to serve at the polls and had to back out because of candidacy for office or illness.

DISCUSSION OF INFRACTIONS

During the discussion of these infractions at the hearing, it was also pointed out that many of these instances could easily have occurred at any other election on campus. Mention was made that poll workers were picked, but not in time to compile and post a list.

The fact was also brought out that it is impossible to walk through the lobby of Smith Hall without being within 50 feet of the polls. Therefore, any conversation concerning the election could be considered campaigning at the polls.

Kahn's points were recognized as suitable grounds for appeal. Jurisdiction and responsibility remain, however, within each dormitory to provide its own election regulations and enforcement.

Lawyer Charges Injustice In Traffic Court Decision

"What is justice?" is a question that has puzzled philosophers for centuries. Tuesday at the Florida State University Traffic Court meeting the question was once again explored.

John Chason, a senior, who received a ticket for supposedly failing to register his car with the campus police is appealing his case with the Traffic Court.

Chason's lawyer, Jim Richardson, claims that there has been an injustice. He feels that the ticket issued to his client is not valid since Officer Cooper of the campus police did not sign the ticket but placed his badge number on it instead.

NO AUTHORITY

The Traffic Court claims that they have no authority to rule on the legality or illegality of traffic tickets. Whether the policeman signed his name or his badge number does not concern the court.

The decision for the case was postponed until the following week Tuesday at 5:30 p.m. at the Traffic Court meeting Counselor Richardson again presented his case, stating that he found no need to have his client enter a plea of guilty or not guilty concerning the registered his car since the ticket was not legal.

Richardson presented evidence that Officer Cooper when he issued a ticket had no idea whether the car belonged to someone directly concerned with FSU. Richardson explained that he had received the ticket Monday at 9:40 p.m. when he parked his car on Dogwood Drive, north of the Dining Hall. That, according to Richardson, was proof that the campus police have no idea of the ownership of the cars they fine. This he also felt was an injustice.

Traffic Court member Jack Smith answered this accusation by explaining that it is not the police officer's duty to determine who owns the car, but rather to determine what violation has been committed.

When asked whether his client pleaded guilty or not guilty, Richardson replied, "There is no case against us. We withdraw and have no plea."

The court rendered a decision of guilty.

Traffic Court Chairman Bob Sopher explained, "Mr. Chason's attorney has said nothing about his client's guilt or innocence. We attempted to be as fair as possible to all concerned in making our decision."

Richardson has filed for an appeal. Since the case has exhausted student facilities it will now go to the administration and the Dean of Men.

of $42,098, 306 for building accommodations, by 1981. This is in parallel with an estimated growth of student enrollment over the next twenty years.

Overall projected enrollments in the state's institutions of higher learning is seen as reaching the 90,000 mark by 1980-81. This is evaluated with the understanding that the universities will be on year-round operation as stipulated under the trimester system.

Under the machinery set up for the bond issue, there will be three steps the Board can retire the debt. The Board can ask the Development Commission to issue the bonds, they can issue the bonds themselves, or they can pay-as-you-go. The latter plan would allow the Board to pay off the debt with Legislative appropriations as they become available.

Without the emergency bond issue, the only construction that could go ahead immediately would be the completion of FSU's nuclear building and the construction of the nuclear building at the University of Florida.

Campus Groups May Decorate Windows

Campus organizations may paint store windows this year as a part of decorations for Florida State University's Homecoming.

Over 40 downtown merchants have given permission for the use of their store windows in the inauguration of this new activity. This new slant on decorations has been taken in hopes of creating more enthusiasm for homecoming among Tallahassee citizens Gene Brown, chairman of the project, said.

A student-faculty committee has been established to judge the entries on the basis of appropriateness to theme, appearance, and originality. Painting will not begin before Nov. 13 and all work must be completed by Nov. 17.

Any student organization is eligible to participate. Brown said that this particular activity would be especially good for dorms, religious houses, and service organizations. He also added that an activity such as this would not be very time consuming nor would it require the work of a large number of people.

First, second and third place winners will be announced at the Pow Wow and three trophies will be awarded.

Anyone interested in having their organization participate should contact Brown at 2240 or 2208 as soon as possible. The shop windows will be delegated on first come-first served basis.

THE PHI PSI'S HELD THEIR FIRST FORMAL PLEDGING ceremonies in the club room of pledges are Errol Greene, Danny Foss, Arnie Frankel, Bill Clarke, Cebron Fussell, Dave Arnold, Tom Burgess and Charles Heinberg.

Delta Chi Selects More' Little Sisters'

Late last spring, Delta Chi colony at Florida State University invited 13 coeds representing several sororities to be charter members of their auxiliary organization, "Little Sisters of the White Carnation."

The original members were Dorothy Brown, Linda Buhl, Mary Thomas Cox, Linda Craig, Mary Ann Ellis, Sue Ewing, Judy Goodman, Linda Hogan, Barbara Latimore, Pat Melton, Bunnie Patton, Lynn Thorp and Martha Tibbets.

These 13 members met and drew up a constitution and by-laws and elected officers. They then made plans for a program which will be followed by the other chapters of Delta Chi throughout the nation.

PROGRAM ENDORSED

This endorsement of the "Little Sister program by the national fraternity is a plaudit for the FSU group.

The auxiliary organization will work hand in hand with the fraternity in all its activities, assist them during rush and represent them in their respective sororities and campus activities.

Eleven additional coeds tapped for membership in October were Penny George, Judy Howard, Carolyn Jordan, Susan Mauger, Louise McPheeters, Pat Metcalf, Jan Monig, Emily Tyler, Shirley Valdes, Vicky Voyles and Dixie Zarle.

ACTIVITIES PLANNED

Delta Chi and the "Little Sisters" will be planning many activities throughout the year, to be climaxed by the annual "White Carnation Ball."

Bob Bagby, Delta Chi president, remarked that "This is a big advancement towards a closer relationship between the fraternity and the sororities." He added that he "Would like to see more fraternities on this campus adopt a policy of this nature."

Delta Chi was founded on Oct. 13, 1890, at Cornell University. The fraternity was established on the FSU campus in February, 1969.

'Last Days' Tours State

Mark Van Doren's new play, The Last Days of Lincoln has just returned from engagements at the University of Southern Florida in Tampa and the University of Jacksonville.

The play was presented at Florida A & M College last night and will be in Hollywood, Fla. tomorrow for performances.

According to Director Richard Fallon negotiations are under way for a Broadway production.

The Last Days of Lincoln stars Jim Campbell as Lincoln, two other professional actors, David Clark and Mora Dufee, while Florida State University students play supporting roles.

to production and consumption of services. He also forecast a "great explosion in world markets."

Packard attacked vigorously the trend that advertising is taking, calling television commercials the "most intrusive." Companies are using public owned airways and yet, "we get such thing as images of girls shaving their legs . . ."

ADVERTISING TREND

The head of the nation's largest advertising agency has gone so far as to advocate a fourth television network, he said, it seems they are "running out of ways to get at us."

Even the programs are dominated by what the sponsors want. Some companies won't allow violence, because it might present an unfavorable image of the sponsor. Cigarette manufacturers won't allow actors to "grind out or stamp out" cigarettes on the screen because "this is disrespectful to cigarettes," Packard said.

The country-sides are becoming "billboard" he said. With the present trend of advertising soon "literally, we will have no place to hide," he declared.

Packard condemned "the great exploitation of sacred holidays," by business and commercial interests. It has gotten to the point that, "Ministers across the land dread the approach of Mother's Day." "Christmas has become a seven billion dollar binge," he declared.

A former newspaperman in Boston and New York, Packard, in a series of magazine articles and books, has become widely known as a social critic.

His most recent book, The Waste Makers, has joined The Status Seekers and The Hidden Persuaders on the best seller list. The latter has been translated into nine languages and has sold nearly a million copies.

Many Florida State Gridders Gone
Injured Seminoles Seek Wildcat Win

By BILL CHEEK

An upset-seeking Florida State football team moves into Kentucky without the services of some important regular starts.

The kickoff will be tomorrow afternoon at 2:00 p.m. (EST) on Hall Field in Lexington, Kentucky.

Without the services of Keith Kinderman, Y. C. McNeese, Richie Huber, and doubtful starting of Tom Hillabrand, John Levings, Don Donatelli, the Seminoles will be facing the powerful Southeastern Conference team at more of a defective handicap than was earlier predicted.

Kinderman was dismissed from the football squad Monday after violation of training rules. He was a big factor in the Seminole offensive unit. Labled "the workhorse", Kinderman had totaled 81 yards in three games His dismissal will leave the backfield fairly unexperienced hands.

The injured knee will leave McNeese out indefinitely for the Kentucky game with a doubt as to whether he will play for the Citrus Bowl game.

Huber, a promising sophomore, dropped out of school because of personal problems. Weber had seen action in most every game so far. His total yardage for the times rushing is 17.

Hillabrand, Levings, and Donatelli will be doubtful starters according to Coach Bill Peterson. "They will be used to limited duties." As for Donatelli, who picked a touch of the flu, "He cannot play up to capacity," commented Peterson.

The Seminoles boasting a 3-2-1 record will be out to claim victory number 4.

Injuries in the backfield have resulted in a change every week. Only two consecutive games will be the same starting backfields have been used. This week being no exception a different set of backs will once again start.

According to the University of Kentucky's head Coach Blanton Collier, "We know we can expect a lot of offense from Florida State and it could be the most exciting test of the season for our tough defensive line. I have received at least 30 different formations or variations of offense that they have used in their first four games."

The Seminole outlook for tomorrow afternoon is bright, due to the fact that we have the one of the best weeks of practice since I have been here," stated Peter-

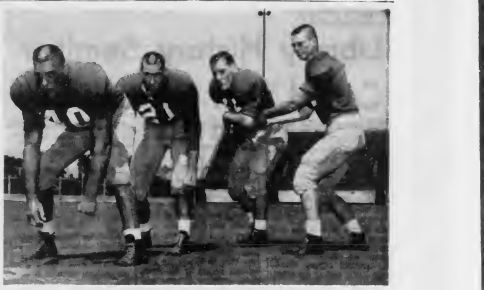
Frosh Meet Miami

By SHIRLEY HARDISON
Flambeau Sports Writer

Five freshmen Seminoles will be playing in their hometown area Saturday when the Baby Seminoles attack the Baby Hurricanes in St. Petersburg.

Kick off time is 8 p.m. at Stewart Field. Coach Charlie LaPradd says his freshmen are "raring to go." Team spirit is high despite the three week lapse between games. The Baby Seminoles played their last game in Columbus, Ga., against Mississippi Southern's frosh eleven.

Facing a line average of 203 lbs. and a backfield that tips the scale at 185 lbs., the Baby Seminoles must live up to their reputation of being one of the biggest and fastest teams ever fielded at FSU.



In a tie game with Mississippi Southern earlier this year Jim Loftin, of Pensacola, made the only TD. Florida State had 7 first downs while the Southerner's had 8; yet in total net yards FSU had 249 over 175 for their opponents.

Using a different backfield, with the exception of Loftin, Coach LaPradd is hoping to find the right combination for the Miami frosh.

Start at the quarterback slot will be Steve Tensi, rated as one of the best out-of-state backs to be found in Florida, according to a Miami newspaper. Tensi, a 6-0, 185 pounder is from Cincinnati, Ohio. Filling the fullback slot will be Johnny Roberts, a 6-0, 187 pound demon from Orlando. Starting at left halfback is Jim Loftin. All-State candidate last year from Pensacola, Loftin is 6-1, weighing 176. At right halfback will be Phil Spooner, a 5-11, 161-pound speedster from Fort Myers.

Holding the end spots for the Florida State line will be Fred Bilentnikoff and Tom West. Bilentnikoff has been changed from halfback to end, because of his speed and agility. Hailing from Erie, Pa., Bilentnikoff is 6-1 and weighs 185 lbs. West is also an out-of-stater, from Headland, Ala. West is 6-4, weighs in a 187 pounds. Jack Revell and Woody Benson are the starting tackles. Revell, a Tallahassee boy, was changed from end to tackle and according to Coach LaPradd is working well at this position. Revell stands 6-3 and weighs 205 pounds. Benson, a standout lineman from Gainesville, received compliments from LaPradd in the Mississippi Southern game. Benson stands 6-1 and tips the scales at 222 pounds. First string guards are Dick Hermann and Joe Parrish. Hermann is a 6-2, 190 pound stickler from Marianna. Parrish is a 6-2, 188 pounder from Auburndale. Wallace Cooley holds down the center spot. Cooley, a 6-3, 194 pounder, is from Dothan, Ala.

Coach Whitie Campbell has made a shift in his starting line-up since the University of Mexico game. Miami won the game after being defeated by the Florida freshmen, 42-0. The potential of the starting line-up for the Florida State game is the best he had put together this season. In his opinion.

Mural Tennis Play On Tap

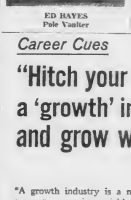
League play in the fraternities tennis matches plus the basketball action will be on tap this week-end as well as the first of next week.

Volleyball games in teh girls competition plus teh final results of the horseshoes match will highlight the weekend also.

In league basketball ATO and Delta Chi are the leading teams. Both teams have come up to the leading position in the last two games, defeating some of the top teams in the league.

In Tuesday's basketball game Sigma Alpha Epsilon defeateed Phi Kappa Tau 46-24. Lewis, of SAE, made 28 points during the night. Sigma Phi Epsilon won a forfeit over Pi Kappa Phi and Alpha Tau Omega rolled over Phi Delta Theta 55-36, using a "go" defense most of the night. Kappa Sigma eased by a close one with Delta Tau Delta 44-42 with Samek, of Kappa Sigma, making 18 points. Pi Kappa Phi defeated Phi Kappa Alpha 41-25 for their first win of the sea son. Delta Chi also had a close game with Theta Chi, slipping by with a 33-43 win at the last mimute.

According to Mr. Elton Hinson, assistant director of the 1961 Intramurals, fraternities will begin golf competition Nov. 11 and 12th in Quincy. All fraternities will have at least two entries.



The finals for fraternity tennis will be Sunday afternoon, Nov. 5, at 2 p. m.

In dorm actioo, the golf schedule will be Nov. 4 and 5 in Georgia at the Attapulgus Golf Course. The last round of dorm basketball will resume Nov. 6.

The leading scorer for the Garnet League thus far is Teagle, of Lamba Chi Alpha, with 79 points. Second is Lewis, of Sigma Alpha Epsilon, with 68 points to date. Allen, of Alpha Tau Omega, is third with 65. Barley of Sigma Phi Epsilon is fourth with 58. In the Gold league, Hatfield of Delta Tau Delta is leading the scorers with a double scoring mark of 70. Kennedy of Delta Chi is second with 61, while Newman, of Pi Kappa Phi is third with 60 points. Grechicki, of Sigma Nu is fourth in the league with 57.

Thinclads Run, Lift Weights In Preparation For Season

FSU's Thinclads are in full swing with the fall practice workout. Coach Mike Long and Asst. Coach Vernon Giles have the Cindermen practicing on both running and weight lifting, with a three-day week practice.

This year's team's strength will depend upon sprinters Craig Johnson, who's best time last year was 9.8 in the 100 and 21.1 in the 220. Hurch Johnson and Jackson Edwards.

Quinton Till, ace quarter miler and post Georgia AAU champ, will be a key man to this year's team. Last year Quinton ran one of the best 440's in the Southeastern U. S. at 47.7. Till has been a reliable man for the last two years.

In the 880 Bill Davis and Jack Brockschmidt will be the standout men in middle distance running. Karl Bockaleer, fro mthe freshman team, is also expected to help out the team in the middle distances.

At the high hurdle positions the team's strength is expected to rely on Bill Welch the school record holder in high hurdles, and Dave Ellis.

Running the low hurdles will be Terry Long and Herb Kraft.

Coach Loog is looking forward to getting a lot of help from several returning men, transfers and freshmen this year. Long hopes to get his depth from Dick Roberts, Jimmy Langford, Jim Bishop, Bill Collins, Spike Olson, Bill Crasty, Jeff Clark, Barry Topper, Allen Williams and Jack Brocksmith.

Pole vaulting will be up to Ed Hayes, whose best jump last year was 13 feet, 4 inches against LSU. With him will be Franklin Ford, who also jumped over 13 feet last year.

Broad jump depends upon Herb Kraft and Gene Giddeon.

High jump will feature returning letterman and school record holder of 6 feet 6 inches, George Smith. Along with him will be Mike Olivero and Tommy Bourne.

Throwing events: Backbone of the throwing events will be Jeff Clark, Berry Topper and Allen Williams who are expected to add a lot of strength to the FSU squad.

FSU's track squad will conclude its fall practice workout on Nov. 21 when the Gold team challenges the Gray team in an intersquad clash.

FSU, Locals Plan Match

THE FLORIDA STATE freshman squad will have a practice match with the Tallahassee Tennis Club this week-end on the varsity courts on campus.

The practice will be one of the many Coach Cubbon has scheduled for the frosh. This fall practice will keep the team in shape, plus broaden the experience of the freshmen team. Practice matches with teams from Alabama and southern Georgia, plus surrounding teams, will be played up to the month of March. At this time the tennis schedule with teams of other schools will begin.

Playing in the number 1 spot for Florida State will be Paul Bennett. The number 2 slot is being played by Matt Suber; number 3 by Mike Sterrie. The number 4 position is held by Dick Newcomb; number 5 by Ken Alcorn. The number 6 spot is Dick Fisher; number 7 Allen Gurevitz. The number 8 position is John Aikin; number 9 is Reggie Dickie; number 10 by Don Compton.

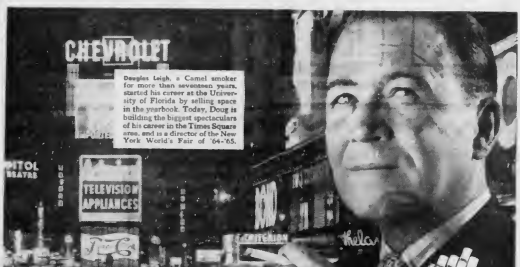
Career Cues



"Hitch your wagon to a 'growth' industry— and grow with it!"

Douglas Leigh, President
Douglas Leigh, Inc.

"A growth industry is a new industry that is on the way up — moving quickly, expanding fast. When you join a company in one of the growth fields you have something extra working for you . . . you grow up with it. To find out which industry is right for you, try this: Ask someone in a good investment office to give you a list of the industries he considers 'growth industries'. Data Processing, plastics, and electronics are a few examples. Then pick the one you have a leaning toward, and get the names of the most progressive companies in that field.

One thing I'd like to point out from my own career is . . . a growth industry may also be an old business that's on the verge of new development. Shortly after leaving college I found this situation in the Outdoor Advertising field. What my associates and I did was to employ color, action and motion to dramatically personify the product, brand or services being advertised. In doing so, we developed the modern type 'Spectaculars' that talked, blew smoke rings, soap bubbles, etc. . . . signs that changed the face of Broadway and the famous Times Square area.

This is just one example. The really important thing to remember is this: When you set your sights on a career, aim for an industry that is going to grow, so you can grow with it. It's the difference between a rocket that blasts off, and one that just sits there. Good luck!"

Plan your pleasure ahead, too.

Library History Seminar Called 'First Of Its Kind'

Representatives of 20 libraries in the Southeast are attending a Library History Seminar at Florida State University. The seminar which began yesterday will conclude tomorrow.

The working conference is the first of its kind according to Dr. Louis Shores, dean of the FSU Library School. It is sponsored jointly by the FSU Library School, Library, the History Dept. and the American Library History Round Table, part of the American Library Association.

Guest lecturers for the seminar include Dr. Willard Mishoff, librarian, Mississippi State College for Women and formerly library specialist with the United States Office of Education. and Dr. Frank Sessa, director of the Public Library, Miami.

Members of the FSU faculty on the program include Dr. Weymouth T. Jordan, professor and head of the History Dept: Dr. Earl S. Beck, professor of History; and N. Orwin Rush, director of libraries.

Miss Margaret Keyes, FSU doctoral student, is one of 200 invited to participate in a meeting on "The Future of Fabric Design Education in a Changing Technology" at Philadelphia tomorrow.

Miss Keyes is assistant professor of home economics at State University of Iowa at Iowa City. At present she is a doctoral student of Dr. Janet Smith, professor of home and family life at FSU.

Jacqueline Louise Dupont, a graduate assistant at FSU, has been named the 1961 recipient of a $1,000 Mead Johnson award for graduate education in dietetics.

Miss Dupont plans to use the fellowship to continue her work toward a Ph.D in nutrition and metabolism. She received a bachelor of science degree in 1955 from FSU and in 1959 completed a master of science degree at Iowa State University.

She is now on leave from the Institute of Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture, Beltsville, Md.

ETHEL DONALDSON, ELENA NIKOLAIDI, DIRECTOR, AND Jury Davidson work in the ancient Greek setting of "Orpheus and Euridice." the opera which will be presented in Westcott Auditorium Nov. 9 and 10.

Herndon To Speak

"Those Incomparable Correspondents" is the title of the lecture to be given by Dr. Sarah Herndon, at the English Coffee Hour at 4 p.m. this afternoon in Westminster House.

Letter writing has become pretty much a lost art today, according to Dr. Herndon, who is chairman of humanities at FSU. Lack of leisure time to carry on long correspondence has made letter writing become purely utilitarian, she said.

Dr. Herndon will read letters written by Jonathan Swift, Thomas Gray, Lord Chesterfield to his son, Dr. Johnson, William Cowper and others.

Les Jongleurs To Present Two Readings Nov. 3-4

Call Me, Call Me, The Ugly Duckling, and Perfect Day for Banana Fish will be presented at the BSU House tonight and tomorrow night at 8 p.m. by Les Jongleurs, dramatic honorary.

There will be a $.25 admission charge.

Call Me, Call Me by John O'Hara which appeared recently in The New Yorker will be read by Ken Richard, president of Les Jongleurs, and Stephanie von Lackum. This reading which was adapted from a short story is a commentary on the life of an aged actress who is no longer able to obtain good roles.

The Ugly Duckling is a one-act comedy by A.A. Milne. It is the story of a hen-pecked king of the middle ages who is trying to find a husband for his ugly daughter. Ken Richard will direct the production and Grankue Walker is the assistant director and stage manager.

FEATURED PLAYERS

Featured in The Ugly Duckling will be Carl Stewart as the King, Claudia Melton as the Queen, Alice Marshall as the Princess, Walter Newsome as the Chancellor, Chico Walker, as the Prince, Kathy Arey as Dulcibella and Henry Hair as Carlo.

A reading of J. D. Salinger's Perfect Day for Banana Fish will close the program. This reading will feature Cliff Geiseke as narrator; Tony Wells, Muriel; Kris Rosbalt, Muriel's mother; Abbie Mitchell, Sybil; Mary Byrd, Sybil's mother and elevator operator; Linda Markgaf, Hubbell and woman in elevator; and Nik Maffei, Seymour. Jim Rayford will direct the reading.

Research Aid Offer Made To Scientists

Postdoctoral research fellowships for study in natural and applied sciences are available from the National Academy of Science.

All persons who can produce evidence of superior training in one of the various branches of the natural and applied sciences or in areas overlapping several of these fields equivalent to that represented by the Ph.D. or Sc.D. degree are eligible for a fellowship.

The fellowships are open only to citizens of the United States.

Applications for the academic year 1962-1963 must be filed on or before Jan. 12, and must be accompanied by complete college transcripts, the names of at least four references, a plan of study and research, and the name of the institution in which the applicant proposes to work. Appointments will be made for one year only and awards will be made on or about April 1.

The basic stipend will be at the rate of $6,000 per annum with an additional allowance of $600 for a married fellow. Costs of travel and transportation of household effects will be paid for by the association.

The meeting will be at 7:30 p.m. at the Alpha Gamma Delta house. The tentative date for this year's Derby has been set for December 2, at 1:30 p.m.

Students Told:

Music Viewed As Common Language Of The World

By LANA MURRAY
Flambeau Staff Writer

"In music, we must speak an interna tional language that may be comprehended all over the world," Dr. Wiley Housewright told music students Tuesday.

Dr. Housewright, Florida State University professor of music, spent the summer in Europe where he spoke at the International Society of Music Education, in Vienna, Austria.

USING CULTURE

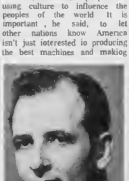
Harry Schmidt and Dr. Housewright both spoke to a group of music students about their experiences with music overseas. Schmidt, also of the music faculty, spent last year in Asia.

Dr. Housewright pointed out that the Americao people are using culture to influence the peoples of the world It is important , he said, to let other nations know America isn't just interested in producing the best machines and making the most money.

Describing Vienna, "the music capital of the world," Dr. Housewright said that the music-consciousness of the city, not its physical characteristics, make it charming to music lovers. The Opera House, which is in the heart of the city, has a stage two or three blocks long, he added.

MUSIC IN DAILY LIFE

He also said that innumerable monuments, plaques and street names commemorating famous composers make music a part of the daily life of the Viennese.



Citing other highlights of his trip, Dr. Housewright mentioned the USSR Orchestra from Moscow, which he described as noisy"; a Basque chorus in Segovia, Spain, and Aida, performed against the background of ancient Roman ruins.

Schmidt, who was sponsored on an Asian fellowship last year by the International Educational Exchange related his experiences in Indonesia.

"MUSICALLY ENDOWED"

Describing the Indonesians as a very "musically endowed" people, Schmidt characterized their native music as "plaintless and interesting, but monotonous and reiterative."

Of his work with the Radio Indooesiao Symphoey, Schmidt said the musicians were art students, but had no consideration for time and schedule. He said he thought music could be used as a tool to teach the Indonesian people organization.

Economic Must Rise Steadily Or It Falls

"Economic activity exo decay merely from a decrease in the rate of increase." Dean of the School of Business Charles Rovetta said Thursday during a panel discussion on "The Economic Development of Tallahassee."

Other panel members were Dr. John Griffin, director of University Relations, who served as moderator; Frank Deller, executive head of the Tallahassee Chamber of Commerce; and Hugh Williams, Tallahassee businessman, mayor and city commissioner.

BIG BEND ASSOCIATION

They spoke at a meeting of the Big Bend Association of the American Personnel and Guidance Association.

Dean Rovetta said that all industries in the Tallahassee complex should grow together to maintain a balanced economy. in this way, he said, the disastrous effects of any decline would be minimized.

Williams commented that the city's primary interest is in protecting and promoting industry presently located in the city.

Speaking of the necessity of bringing new industry into the city, Williams said, "We are forced to be somewhat selective." He added that the city's facilities, location and the University of au industrial park 'the old airport' offer an attractive opportunity to industry.

LIKE FIGURES ON A GREEK VASE ARE, THESE GIRLS AT FLORIDA STATE UNIVERSITY who are costumed as Orpheus, left, and Euridice for the opera ORPHEUS AND EURIDICE to be presented by the Opera Guild Thursday and Friday nights, Nov. 9-11. Orpheus, played by Joy Davidson, has won his wife Euridice back from the underworld with his song but one look at Euridice, played by Ethel Donaldson, right, will send her back.

Orpheus' Cast Readies For Show

Director Calls Story 'Most Human And Enduring' Of All Greek Myths

By ELENA NIKOLAIDI
Professor of Voice

The story of Orpheus, his lyre, and his imperishable love for his wife, Euridice, is one of the most enduring and perhaps most human of all Greek myths, and because of its humanity and innate pathos it was intensely appealing to operatic composers of the Baroque era.

Significantly, the two most important operas before Mozart's time were the Orfeo of Monteverdi and the Orpheus and Eurydice of Gluck. We are presenting the Gluck here at Florida State University. Nov 9 and 10, and I must confess that I am largely responsible for selecting this opera to be done here.

I am understandably attracted to the opera because of its Greek background, and also it is an opera in which I have performed the title role many times. This however, is the first time that I have ever participated in Orpheus as stage director and for that reason the current production is particularly exciting for me.

I first sang the role of Orpheus at the Vienna Staatsoper a number of years ago, and the production was a new and uniquely beautiful one which was prepared and conducted by Bruno Walter. The stage director on this occasion was the famous Marguerite Wallman, who is now the principal stage director at La Scala in Milan.

After the war I sang the role of Admetus at the opening of the new Greek Festival, which has since become something of an international institution. Since coming to this country I have performed the role twice in New York City, with the Lttie Orchestra Society under Thomas Scherman and with the American Opera Society, both concert versi-

Student Tickets Available For $1

Orpheus and Euridice, a two-act opera by Gluck, will be presented at 8:15 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium Thursday and Friday nights.

Tickets for the program are now on sale at the Central Ticket Office in Westcott. They are $2 for adults and $1 for students.

A chorus from the University Singers and a 14-member dance team from the Theatre Dance Group will combine with the cast of the opera for this presentation.

Elena Nikolaidi, Florida State University voice professor, who has appeared as Orpheus at the Vienna Opera and the Greek Music Festival in Athens, is director of the production. The Opera Chamber Orchestra, directed by Richard Collins, provides the musical background.

PERFORMED IN VIENNA

First performed in Vienna in 1762, the opera has two main characters. Orpheus, the Greek musician, is sung in the FSU production by Joy Davidson. Ethel Donaldson, sings the part of Euridice, the wife of Orpheus. Completing the all-female lead cast in the role of Eros, is Patty Sue McCarty.

Art Exhibit Opens In Museum Thursday

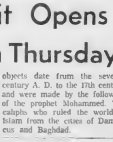
One of America's largest museums, the New York Metropolitan Museum, has loaned Florida State University a part of its collection of near eastern art for an exhibit which will open at the FSU Art Gallery Thursday.

Sixty-one art works have been borrowed from the extensive Metropolitan collection.

GALLERY HOURS

The exhibit will open at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, and will close Nov. 29. Gallery hours are 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. daily, 9:30 a.m. to noon on Saturdays and from 1 to 4 p.m. on Sundays.

Dr Gulnar Bosch, professor and head of the FSU Art Dept., a specialist in near eastern art, will give a lecture on the art of the ancient Near East at 8 p.m. Monday.



The time span of the exhibition represents thousands of years in the history of man. The ancient Near East is the world of the Old Testament, stretching from the eastern shores of the Mediterranean to the highlands of Iran and from the steppes of central Asia on the north to the deserts of Arabia on the south.

BEFORE ABRAHAM

Some of the objects in the exhibit date 3,000 years before the birth of Christ. They were old when Abraham left Ur for the land of Canaan. Cuneiform tablets religious idols, and household pottery in the exhibition recall the civilization born in the valley of the Tigres and Euphrates rivers and long since vanished.

Art by the peoples of the Iranian highlands is also represented. The bronze jewelry and weapons decorated in the so-called animal style of the peoples east of Samarra and Susa represent a technical skill and artistic talent unsurpassed in the ancient Near East.

A large part of the exhibit is devoted to the art of Islam. These objects date from the seventh century A. D. to the 17th century and were made by the followers of the prophet Mohammed. The caliphs who ruled the world of Islam from the cities of Damascus and Baghdad.

Kellum Keeps Title By 44 Point Margin

A new unofficial intercollegiate sport has been added to the athletic roster of events in which Florida State University participates.

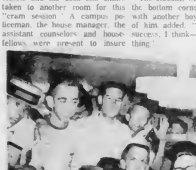
It's called room stuffing.

So far FSU leads the league. Kellum Hall recaptured the championship late Friday afternoon when 209 men were crammed into one room. The dormitory's previous record of 215 men in one room had been broken only hours earlier at Auburn University when students there jammed 225 men into a room.

Room stuffers at Kellum, however, claimed to have more than ample broken the Auburn record since the Kellum room was seven square feet smaller than the one at Auburn.

The stuffing game began at Kent State where 141 men were crammed into a two-room suite.

Two Life Magazine photographers, Lynn Pelhan from Miami and Bob Delaney, an area correspondent, as well as a Flambeau photographer, were on hand to snap pictures of the record breaking room jam.



The site for the room stuffing was Rm. 816 Kellum, the room of Pete Podes and Benjie Lebow, the eighth floor house fellow.

Clothes were removed from the closets and the desk and chairs taken to another room for this "cram session." A campus policeman, the house manager, the assistant counselors and housefellows were on hand to insure that order was maintained and safety precautions were taken.

The stuffing project began at 8:15 p.m. when the first room was full. However. Lebow claimed that there was still room for at least 30 more in the suite by 23 foot room. But he added that he hopes no one else breaks that record. it's just "too hot to do again!"

As the number of men to fill the room began to dwindle, "More! More! More!" began to rung through the room The windows and mirror were all fogged up and a few students began to feel dizzy as the air seemed to disappear, one sufferer reported.

The student, who was sitting in the bottom corner of the closet with another boy sitting on top of him added. "It was a great success, I think—I couldn't see a thing.

Ticket Plan Is Changed Again

Since Monday each student must personally sign receipt for his awa I B M card before he presents with his card, to secure tickets for university sponsored events for which tickets are required. Previous or more students wish to get together, each must sign awa I B M card. The student presenting the I B M cards for tickets must also present each student's I.D. card.

There has been some misunderstanding. a o d a n m e of the new ticket system according to Mrs. Ruth Cole of the Westcott Ticket Office. The new procedure has been established for the student's protection, she stated.

Alumni Fund Drive Plans Aid For Future Campaign

Plans for the 1962 Greater FSU Alumni campaign to begin in April are being made through the Alumni Association of Florida State University.

Usually, the fund campaign is often an effort to assist the university financially to areas normally governed by legislative appropriations. These areas have included the Graduate Library, scholarships, fellowships, art collection, and sports. The 1961 campaigns were over $10.000, toward this past.

This fund will give the alumni a greater part in contributing directly to a fund that will provide financial aid to deserving students.

The goal of $25.000 has been set by the association for the 1962 drive. In developing the Student Government will return $9 for every $1 made by the association. up to $250,000 if the 1962 goal is attained, this will mean that about $250.000 in funds for scholarships will be available for FSU students.

The Alumni Association no longer bills Alumni for membership dues. Instead, each of the 20,000 alumni is asked to contribute at least $10 per year.

This contribution entitles the alumni to an annual membership as an active member of the Alumn Association, to vote and hold office in the association to receive the quarterly Alumni Bulletin and to ticket preference at University sponsored functions.

Red Feather Ends Thursday

Thursday will be the final day on which pledges and contributions can be made to the Red Feather Drive.

So far $9,085 has been collected at Florida State University towards the fulfillment of the $12 421 goal for FSU.

Faculty members have been making contributions through their individual offices Students contribute through the Campus Chest Fund.

Students and faculty members have been active in forwarding the campaign in Tallahassee Students in the public relations classes, working under Dr. S. Kobre of the School of Business, prepared a film documenting the community concerning the work done by each individual agency receiving money from the fund.

Representatives from the various community organizations were interviewed by students who then prepared a script and collected colored slides to illustrate the work of each group. Howard Zipin, head of the Community Fund, recorded the script and synchronized it with the colored slides.

Student Killed In Accident

Lucas, 20, a Florida State University junior, was killed in an automobile accident near Ga., early Sunday morning.

Two other FSU students, Karle Lucas and William Bradley of Miami, were seriously injured in the accident.

Lucas, Students, all three members of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity, left Tallahassee at 1:30 a.m. Sunday for Atlanta to visit a friend of the students.

The car apparently hit a tree at 3 a.m. The Georgia Highway Patrol did not discover the accident until about two hours later.

Burklew was taken to St Francis Hospital in Columbus Ga., where he underwent brain surgery to remove a blood clot at noon Sunday. He also suffered a broken ankle. He will remain on the critical list for about a week.

Munroe is in the hospital in Americus. Ga., with a broken leg and scratches.

Funeral services were held for Lucas at Turner's Funeral Home in Decatur, Ga., yesterday afternoon.

Two chartered buses with SAE's and Chi Omegas left FSU early Monday morning to attend the funeral. Lucas was Chi Omega Owl Man last year.

He was the son of Mrs. William Greenfield of Decatur, Ga., and the late J. P. Lucas.

He was sports chairman of SAE this year and was chairman of the Intramurals Board last year. His sophomore year he was SAE eminent recorder. During the summer of 1960 he attended the SAE leadership school, representing the local chapter.

Dean Blackburn went on to comment that "Students of our society are demanding more and expecting more of the higher educational experience. This change in attitude will necessitate changes in our college society and in our "Student Governments."

CHANGE IN ATTITUDE

Blackburn mentioned the relationship between Student Government and the personal qualities of ethical values and human relations and the responsibility of Student Government to encourage and develop these values.

FACULTY RESOURCES

In changing the concept of Student Government, Dean Blackburn suggested that the goals and aims of the institution must be determined and the Student Government function re-evaluated in the light of these aims and goals. The role and philosophy of the Student Government must also be defined and faculty resources utilized in a professional capacity in the development and re-evaluation of this program.

Concerning specific recommendations to the session, Dean Blackburn suggested at the close of the retreat that a joint committee comprising the three branches of government be appointed to investigate Student Government changes in the trimester system. He also suggested that a central organization be instituted in Student Government to coordinate campus activities according to the academic and social calendar.

Approximately 130 students attended the retreat at the Reservation according to Bobby Byrd, student body president. The retreat consisted of discussion groups on the three major branches of Student Government plus studies concerning the role of class officers and a Board of Publications program on campus publications.

Answer With Action

Dean John Blackburn brought out some important points for thoughtful college students in his address at the student government retreat this weekend.

Student Government should help develop a student rationale to cope with moral and ethical problems. More rules will not help solve problems like cheating.

Students are ready to search out reasons why an action is right or wrong. Student Government should be ready to show them answers. This cannot be done through the dean's office, but must be handled through the student culture.

Social fraternities and sororities must find their place in the realm of educational pursuits as well as that of social activities.

Student Government should give more consideration to the married students on campus.

Student Government should be interested in "international education" giving attention to the exchange students.

"Discussion is the fruit of Student Government." Student Government can not expect support of a program from the students unless they are allowed to enter into the discussion before it is accepted.

This is a tall order for any Student Government to undertake. It places on the agenda a series of problems which concern college students all over the country. They can not be totally accomplished immediately, nor can it be totally accomplished over the course of one year, or one administration.

But Blackburn's address, along with President Bobby Byrd's "State of the Campus message," outlines a clear plan for action. This action should follow immediately.

Blackburn concluded with a challenge. "What are you giving to the education of the students at Florida State University? If FSU could succeed as an educational institution without Student Government help, why are you here.?"

This is a good question for Student Government to answer with action.

Maturity, Medical Excuses

A few words of clarification to both students and faculty might help clear up any misunderstanding and confusion regarding student medical excuses.

Professors from various parts of the campus have caused mild confusion by failing to honor a student's word in regard to excuses for medical reasons and have demanded a written excuse from the infirmary.

However, the faculty handbook state clearly on page 41, section 5, under "Class Attendance" that:

THE HEALTH SERVICE does not issue excuses to students. The student is given a card indicating the time of admission and discharge when hospitalized. Also a report will be given to a faculty member on request, indicating the hours and dates of treatment to help faculty members evaluate absences.

In other words, if a student is admitted, he has written proof of that admission. But if a student is treated without admission and misses a class as a result, he must report this to the professor. It is then the professor's obligation to verify this report, if he has reason to doubt the truthfullness of it. Furthermore, if a student is unable to fully participate in the class activities, this is to be reported to the professor and the professor can verify the report in the same manner.

THE ARRANGEMENT is not a new one.

"The idea is that attendance is a matter between professor and the student. If the professor needs information we will confirm the student story," said Dr. Dehart Krans, head of the hospital.

The arrangement was devised to alleviate jams at the infirmary caused by students attempting to get written excuses. The hospital cannot afford to hire two more doctors just to write excuses.

Notes from "doctor" went out with high school days. A little mature understanding between faculty and students should promptly clear up any difficulty.

We Need Quimmleyism

The John Birch Society is not the answer. The NAACP is not the answer. Both are grimly aware of their own importance. What we really need is Quimmleyism.

Founded by Long Beach State College journalism teacher Dixon Gayer, Quimmleyism is a "tongue-in-cheek organization aimed at satirizing foolish-mouth political groups." Starting, therefore, from such a broad base, Quimleyism might be used towards any number of uscful ends.

IT. LIKE ANYTHING else left in America that is capable of laughing, is religiously knocked fro right and left. The humbugs of "modern" mat-looks can't take spoofing, be they political quacks or other brands of the "celebrity" so common to us. They are homemade through diligent labor directed at making them household names. Too much light hearted retiling might make them appear as serpents as old Warner Brothers films—and even less palatable. Therefore we have the spectacle of ultra serious world-moulders smoldering and blasting away at a completely in-fun organization based on a mythical nonhero. The Quimmley society has been described as being about as dangerous as Donald Duck. That it can earnestly be knocked by people who supposedly knew better is merely indicative of the merry sort of crusade all over each other and rest of us in the guise of dedicated people with goals.

Probably Quimmleyism gets knocked because it holds secret meeting . . . so secret that even the members don't know about them. That, you know, would irritate both left and right. They probably misconstrue Quimmleyism as free advertising for people who believe in compromise in spite of all the roadblocks and ill-feeling thrown up by self-styled Caesars.

Let's Get Serious

Dobson At Random

By GERRY DOBSON

THERE'S ONE SURE WAY to tell a one-cheek town from the two-cheek variety, and Tallahassee is a clear-cut example of the infallibility of the rule: The city fathers of a one-cheek town are always afraid that those passing through will miss the glorious sights available to the tourist. For example, in this metropolis, one might be interested in seeing Pork Chop Hill, at the corner of South Monroe and the Apalachee Parkway. The possibility that one might careen through the city without seeing it is eliminated by the clever staggering of lights; no one in Tallahassee has ever gotten a green light. And, of course, it would be a positive menace to switch to blinkers late at night. Why one might easily fall asleep if not made to stop for a waitbreak at every corner. Our thanks to the City of Tallahassee.

The tenacles of the administration are slowly closing around that last bastion of college freedom, the graduate student. This year, for the first time, women graduate students living in De-Graff hall are required to keep hours if they don't sign out for the night. If late, they too face the bright lights in the Dean of Women's subterranean interrogation chamber. Rumor has it that next year, single women faculty members will have two o'clock permission (except on the nights of home football games).

Student Senate is a hallowed institution. The Senators will argue for days over whether to delete the words "Mickey Mouse" from the third line of the fourth paragraph in subsection "ate" of article three of the campus sanstation code. But you should see the bills come through when six o'clock . . . chow time approaches.

Any algebra student becomes infuriated when the ten cute cheerleaders yell "gimme an eff, gimme a ness gimme a you. What have you got? Eff ess you." Anyone in Math 105 can verify that if the crowd gives the ten cute cheerleaders an eff, a ness and a you, it has mmm an FSU left. This cheer should be corrected if FSU is to become a great University.

Mesbers's title helper corner: Some students have been worried because all transcripts sent from the registrar's office list all the places to which other transcripts have been sent. This can be bad. A graduate school might look at your application with a jaundiced eye when it sees that you have applied to six hundred other schools too. Or, during a job interview, the ignorant might say something like: "Yes, always wanted to work for Amalgamated Mercury, only place I applied." Not so good when the interviewer sees on your transcript that you also applied elsewhere. Those who do not wish this information included on their transcripts should specifically ask that it be omitted. The Registrar's Office will be happy to cooperate.

Ideology

Reds See Man's Identity As Cell Arrangement

By ALLAN DERMOTT

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of a five part series on Communist Ideology. The forthcoming second part will deal with Communist strategy with intent to conquer the world.

Edward Hunter, whom the Committee on Un-American Activities of the House of Representatives refers to as foreign correspondent, author, editor, world traveler, and specialist in propaganda warfare" "which qualifies him as an authority on Communist propaganda techniques," says in his book, Brainwashing: "The ideology of the Communist Party —by teaching that truth is what promotes the revolutionary political line and that good is what helps the party—excuses any lie, atrocity or aggression so long as it is pro-Red in intent." This type of reasoning leaves the Communists with a clear conscience to do anything to accomplish whatever the Communist Party desires.

WHAT IS PEACE? The great American philosopher, Emerson, said, "The good of victory is said to be one-handed, but peace gives victory to both sides." And centuries ago the eminent Shakespeare wrote, "A peace is of the nature of a conquest: for both parties nobly are subdued, and neither party loser."

What is the Communist objective? No one could state it more clearly than how George Orwell puts it in his novel "1984": "The Party seeks power entirely for its own sake. We are not interested in the good of others: we are interested solely in power. Not wealth or luxury or long life or happiness; only power, pure power. From this we can clearly see that this urge for power is not congruent with the western thought of peace.

WHAT, THEN, is the Communist concept of man? The Christian Science Monitor of March 9, 1961 states it perfectly: "Both nations (Russia and Red China) base their thinking about material power on their pseudo-scientific processes which plainly argue against mankind as anything except brochemical beings subject to electronic impulses.

"Both nations deny spiritual achievements. Even their literary, artistic, musical, athletic prowess —even their skill in chess—is attributed to a mechanical arrangement in the human brain of electronic neuron cells which generate electricity and produce their results."

WHAT A HORRIFYENG and demoralizing concept of man! Individuality depends upon the activity of cells alone! Identity depends upon the arrangement of cells alone! The only power is the electronic neuron cells, and thinking is nothing but the results of electricity put out by those cells! Man's talents are nothing but the results of electricity!

With such conceptions of man, power, and party ideology, what degrading types of strategic planning are the Communists employing to devastate the United States? Their method is most deceitful and as subtle as anyone could imagine

The Rainmaker

Forty Days Reversed

By BOB FOSS

The legendary forty days and forty nights in reverse! Do you realize that it has been over that long by the time this epsale reaches publication, smce the city of Tallahassee has had even the slightest drop of precipitation? So when the clandestine cloud does drip by, what happens? It rains on a Monday . . . that's what. This I understand, is quite disrupting to the young gentlemen warriors who wake up every Thursday morning, rush to the window in hopes of sighting a stray rain cloud and despondently drag back to the sack. "Another sunshiny day."

ALL HOPE IS NOT lost, which is a perfectly feasible optimistic view of looking at things, there is a certain contingent on the campus that has taken it upon themselves to keep our little oasis of education alive vegetatively alive. Their leavings are everywhere in evidence as might be attested to by any observant campus. Their symbol is an impossibility to dash hurriedly across campus without running head on into a mass of irritated and often wet collegians yelling some vile slogan about "That ^!<$&?, why'd he put that ^!<$&? rain machine in the middle of the walk." Why is it that the hoses never seem to reach far enough away from the walks to keep the innocent passers-by from getting rained upon?

Reality though, all is not a loss because there has developed in our midst a new college craze, "bypass the sprinkler" It's really quite challenging if you are an advocate of such crazes, and to top it all off, it is very simple. To begin with you have to get the simple knack of it by cutting a couple of classes and dashing wildly back and forth through the supposed path of the sneaky little rain machine To complicate it a little more you can possibly strap some willing coed on your back and do handsprings through the sprinkler or even double up with some sweet loving hoomember on a pogo stick Don't stop there, there are many variations in the new sports and if you promise to keep it quiet I'll tell you that there is a possibility of the national office for sprinkler dashers being established right here on our own campus. Tough sledding.

BEWARE! There always comes some bad along with the good With the approaching frigid season upon us, who's to say that some bright brisk morning Florida State University won't be the unsuspecuus of a huge glacial ice mass moving ever slowly southward to annihilate the sunshine state. Think of the world acclaim the rain makers of FSU would bring us! It's great. Out of gratitude, the next time that you see one of these rain makers out nursing one of his cratic little machines, bound up to him, slap him on the back and congratulate him on a job well done.

The Univisities Had To Be Saved

An air of importance, bordering on urgency, hung thickly over the spacious, pale-green room. A emergency session of the Board of Control had been called and the men that decide the fate of the four-member Florida university system were huddled around a darkly-oiled conference table.

The steady throb of a laboring air conditioner, attempting to prevent the formation of a haze of smoke caused by multiple varieties of tobaccos backgrounded the men posing the resolution.

Every man present, dressed neatly in a conservative business suit, was at home in the distinctively official room. Each fit in with the floor-to-ceiling book shelves which carefully encased books whose pages have turned cream with age. Each was at ease in a room with block-framed citations and certificates hung on panel walls.

The spectators and the four university presidents and aides formed a gallery facing the conference. They leaned forward eagerly, their faces reflecting the importance of the gathering.

The men around the table were more relaxed. The Board members joked lightly with each other, showing the familiarity of past associations. But joking was not their purpose. They were serious about their task

They were charged with a mission of saving universities.

* * * *

One by one the chief executives of the Florida universities arose to make their pleas for more money. They emphasized the importance and need for pump a transfusion of cash into the system in order to salvage the quality of their institutions.

Lanky Gordon W. Blackwell, towering over the assembly, injected a touch of bitters in his quiet subdued tones in asking for money to supplement appropriations shy of the need. Blackwell did not refrain from placing the blame for the financial problems squarely on the Legislature

Poultney Blackwell warned against "giving the Legislature a way out."

J. Wayne Reitz, president of the University of Florida, bounced on his toes while addressing the Board. A slight smile, possibly a subconscious gesture, played across the lips of the thin president. Old-fashioned glasses perched on his thin nose as Reitz asked for immediate action. Talk of "two years" in fund procurement wagered the UF president. He needed money and he needed it immediately.

Both John Allen, president of the University of South Florida and George Gore, president of Florida A&M, also pleaded earnestly.

All were championing different needs. But the presidents had one thing in common.

They were all concerned with saving their universities.

* * * *

The men around the oblong table listened and then discussed. A man with thinning blond hair edged with gray picked at the edge of the table with a long, recently-sharpened pencil, then crossed his legs and looked thoughtful

A tall, completely white haired man paced in back of the table, fluffed his cigar rapidly, paused to think momentarily, and then discussed a point, animating his words with hand gestures.

A short paunchy man in a brown suit answered every query or challenge from the floor with a slightly impatient reply. He had spent a good deal of time drawing up the proposal and was in no mood to compromise on a single point. He answered Gore shortly and exchanged caustic words with Blackwell.

The talk droned on Financial figures and terms like bonds, retirement, revolving funds, millions of dollars, and surpluses whirled into the discussion. Listeners shifted wearily in their seats.

After the drifts of discussion, the decision was anticlimatic. The motion for adoption was made, seconded, and passed unanimously. Seven months that had taken only (10) minutes to discuss, and countless hours to prepare, had passed in just 24 seconds.

But after all was said, everyone assembled knew from the onset that this passage would take place.

The universities had to be saved.

Letters

Leadlined Bluejeans

TO THE EDITOR:

An interesting schizoid effect prevails in American life and letters. We have on one hand the "Toughs" — militant "anti-Reds" who denounce Russia for her latest atomic tests. They point quivering fingers of fear at the lowering cloud of international fallout—while arming to the teeth.

On the other hand are the "calm ones." These are the "existentialists" E. J. Gore who, Geiger counters in hand, scientifically monitor the physical data of our fading materialism. They freely admit that their figures have no informed referent, but they are impressed and publish-de-gook-reasure Toughs who have "straight backbones and red blood and will go the full distance for Uncle Sam."

The calm ones are describe and measurers par excellence (sic). As the worth of the w goes down the atomic drain, the swarm everywhere in the leadlined bluejeans, measuring the rate of flow

What is a Christian nation in the Atomic Age? Will America slaughter millions of innocent Russian women, men and children? Their hospitals, as at Hiroshima, would be lost in the blo and the blaze . . . Their fields, soned . . . while cities smashe flat . . . fires wide-spreading the inexorable march of wide starvation, disease and death.

There are still honorable alternatives to this unspeakable this still the land of the spiritually free—the home of the bravunderground resistance!

Tough Being Preacher's Kid

TO THE EDITOR:

In many magazines I have read articles about what ministers dislike and like about the ministry, the problems of mental health and the minister, and the cause of Christianity in our country. But, to date, I have never seen the first article about the plight of being the child of a minister. Having had almost twenty years of experience as the son of a minister, who has served as a pastor, army chaplain, and an executive officer for CCD church, I feel that I can, with some authority, tell of the dilemma of the PK (Preacher's Kid).

From birth the PK is both the most attractive, and yet the most neglected child in the church. The parishioners fail to realize that their pamperings, pettings, and misguided attention to the young PK makes the child a potential egomaniac. His first public temper tantrum usually sets up a shock wave from the congregation.

Upon entering school the PK is informed that he is the preacher's child, so he has to be good so as to set a good example for other children. Never once is he told to act normally.

By the time the PK has reached junior-high-school age, he has the reputation of being the worst brat in town. What the parishioners fail to realize is that the monster is their own creation . . .

When the PK is in high school the gossips invariably circulate a rumor that the PK is now smoking and was actually seen drinking an alcoholic beverage. They usually fail to consider that their own children are probably doing the same things, so they direct their feelings against what is supposed to be an example. The PK is excluded from many social functions because the church does not support certain recreational activities in which the parishioners and their children happily participate.

Now, in college, it never fails that just as I light my cigarette at a dance or fraternity party somebody comments through with "and what does your dad do for a living?" Hundreds of times a point at me and hundreds of times request, "You can always tell a preacher's kid." Hundreds of times. Actually, what we do is considered to be normal for everyone except us.

Maybe the answer to the whole problem is the formation of a society for Preacher's Kids. After all, what we want is to be regarded as normal and want to be regarded as such, but it seems that we must act abnormally to fulfill what is expected of us.

Cats Down FSU; Star Breaks Leg

By BILL CHEEK
Flambeau Sports Editor

The University of Kentucky aimed their long rifles at a Seminole raiding party Saturday and turned the war party into a 20-0 defeat.

On a cool, cloudy but rainless afternoon, 20,000 fans gathered in Stroll Field to witness the contest.

Though defeated, the Seminoles did considerable damage to their Kentucky foe.

Jerry Woolum, ace passer for the Wildcats, received a fractured leg in the second quarter. Woolum will be lost for the remainder of the season.

Tom Hutchinson, a 20 year old junior from New Albany, Indiana, in making a strong bid for All-American honors to follow up his feat of attaining first team All-Conference recognition as a sophomore last season, was held to one completed pass for six yards.

Darrell Cox took an early punt and returned it 29 yards to the Kentucky 43 yard line. A touchdown followed a 55 yard drive. Gary Stewart received a Woolum pass and carried it to the FSU second yard line. Stewart then crossed the goal line. Clark Mayfield put the extra point through the uprights with the game only eight and one half minutes old, to give Kentucky a 7-0 lead.

Cox returned a punt to the FSU 43, where he was stopped by a lone defender, Charlie Calhoun. Kentucky drove to the 34 before they were stopped. Feely passed to Roberts for 11 yards plus an 11 yard holding penalty placed the Seminoles to the Kentucky 33. A Calhoun punt put the Wildcats on their own 20. The Kentucky crew started a drive that yielded 79 yards putting the ball on the Seminole one inch line. The Renegades held. As the half ended, FSU was advancing to the 13.

A fired up Kentucky ball club took the kickoff deep in their own territory, returning it to their own 33. A series of passes and short drives put the ball on the Florida State nine yard line, where Howard Dunnebecke scored. The following PAT by Mayfield brought the score to 14-0.

The Seminoles returned their kickoff to the 37 where they hit a brick wall. Calhoun sent Co. running backwards with a 50 yard punt. Cox fielded the ball on the 16 yard line, hesitated a minute, and returned it all the way for a touchdown. Mayfield missed the extra point, giving the final tabulation 20-0.

Florida State played well enough to have had a happier fate.

Jr. Tribe Breezes Past Miami 13-0

By SHIRLEY HARDISON
Flambeau Sports Writer

Florida State's freshmen football-ers tore into Miami's freshman team Saturday night 13-0 in St. Petersburg. The Paladins of Furman University will be the opponent Thursday night in a Kwanis benefit game at Campbell Stadium.

The FSU defense had complete control of Miami as they sustained the Canes running game to 11 yards. The men resembled LSU's "Chinese Bandits," robbing Miami of 3 close gains to the goal inside the 10 yard line. Holding the Hurricanes at the 3, the 6, and a last minute stand at the 1 were defensive standouts such as Mac Farring-ton, Bill Bourroughs, Dale Mc Kenzie, Vic Seelman, Avery Sum-ner, Ralph Norman, Jack Ed-wards and Jack Shinholser.

A 78 yard drive starting in the first quarter and ending in the second, resulted in Florida State's first score. Halfback Phil Spooner went around left end for the final seven yards. Terry Hollman kick-ed the extra point.

Johnny Roberts, fullback, made the second tally as he battled over left tackle from the 6 yard line. Hollman's try for the extra point was wide but the Rene-gades took over to hold their lead 13-0.

Miami created a big sensation as the second half began. Ronald Matteucci returned the kick 45 yards to the FSU 6 yard line But Florida State's defensive half-back Winifred Bailey intercepted Bertanti's pass on the next play and ran it to the 33, putting the Seminoles back in the game

In the closing minutes of the first period the Seminoles got possession of the ball at their own 22. Halfback Charles Story ran around left end for 28 yards to midfield. A recovered fumble by Ed Loveless and the Semi-noles were on the Miami 36 Three plays later, Loveless threw a screen pass to Earl Hawkins.

Hawkins poured on speed for 19 yards. George D'Alessandro knocked over the Miami line for 6 more; Hawkins added 5, Love-less was thrown back to the 14 when he attempted a pass. Haw-kins darted over tackle for 7 yards and on the next play Spooner slipped around end to score.

Miami's Fred Bertanti passed 55 yards to Bill Spe arlate to the second quarter to put feal to the

Cagers, Linkers Hold Fall Drills

By DALE MARLER
Flambeau Sports Writer

Florida State University's basketball team is in full swing with their fall practice work out. With thirteen men reporting on the varsity team Coach Bud Kennedy and Assistant Coach Hugh Dur-ham are working this years team on the fundamental and defen-sive patterns of the game.

Coach Kennedy plans to keep the same pattern of offense, which is similar to Auburn Uni-versity's, and which is called the Seminole Shuffle. The major change this year will be in the Seminole defensive game.

Coach Durham reported that this year's team will be one of the most experienced of any pre-vious teams. With all but one player back from last year's squad the teams strength this year will relay upon Dave Fedor, Ray Swain, Charlie Long, Tim Edney, and Dale Reeves. How-ever, a lot of strength will be added by players returning from last year's team and the fresh-man squad.

Coach Kennedy praised the high spirit of this year's team and feels it will be a key to the building of a stronger squad

The fall work out of the Semi-inol golf tea mis being con-ducted at the Tallahassee Coun-try Club with a 144 hole qualify-ing match. With 77 holes com-pleted, Coach Bill Odem feels that this year's team is one of the best in FSU history.

Leading the 77 holes tourna-ment thus far is Bryan Berger-on, who is a senior and the top man on this year's squad. In second place is John Kindred, a freshman and is the number one player on the freshman team.

This year's golf team plans to open the season against the Uni-versity of Florida on February 26, here in Tallahassee The team also plans on playing in the Florida Collegiate Tourna-ment, Miami Tournament, Bun-ton All-American Match, South eastern Conference Tournament, and the National Golf Tourna-ment, to be held on June 13.

Composing this year's team are 18 varsity players and 9 fresh-men. The main strength of the varsity squad consists of Bryan Berzeron, Doug Davis, Chuck Keating, Manny Nardone, Dave Onstead, eGne Page, Dave Phi-lo, Dick Sullman, Dick Whitmire, and Richard Waterworth.

Coach Odeneal said, This year's team has more spirit and the boys are able to get along with each other better than any other team I have coached.

POVERTY CAN BE FUN
It is no disgrace to be poor. It is an error, but it is no disgrace.
So if your purse is empty, do not skulk and brood and hide your head in shame. Stand tall. Admit your poverty. Admit it freely and frankly and all kinds of good things will happen to you. Take, for instance, the case of Blossom Signfore.
Blossom, an impecunious freshman at an Eastern girls' college, was smart as a whip and found as a dumpling, and scarcely a day went by when she didn't get invited to a party weekend at one of the nearby men's schools. But Blossom never accepted. She did not have the rail fare, she did not have the clothes. Weekend after weekend, while her classmates went frolicking, Blossom sat alone, carved from ottar deepair only by her pack of Marlboros, for even an innerspring we sem as Blossom's can afford the joys of Marlboro — joys far beyond their paltry price: rich, mellow tobaccos, lovingly aged and carefully packed, and an exclusive selectsafe filter. Cerwent himself could not buy a better cigarette.
However, Marlboro's most passionate admirers — among whose number I am paid to count myself — would not claim that Marlboro can entirely replace love and romance, and Blossom grew steadily morose.
"Accept these Gifts from Tom."
Then one day came a phone call from an intelligent freshmore named Tom O'Shanter at a nearby men's college "Blossom," said Tom, "I want you to come down next week for the barley festival and I won't take no for an answer."
"No," said Blossom.
"Foolish girl," said Tom gently. "I know why you refuse me. It is because you are poor, isn't it?"
"Yes," said Blossom
"I will send you a railroad ticket," said Tom. "Also a hard-boiled egg in case you get hungry on the train."
"But I have nothing to wear," said Blossom
Tom replied, "I will send you one suit of cashmere, two gowns of lace, three slacks of velvet, four shoes of calf, five socks of nylon, and a partridge in a pear tree."
"That is most kind," said Blossom, "but I fear I cannot dance and enjoy myself while back home my poor lame brother Tiny Tim lies ailed."
"Send him to Mayo Brothers and put it on my tab," said Tom.
"You are terribly decent," said Blossom, "but I cannot come to your party because all the other girls at the party will be from rich, distinguished families, and my father is just a humble woodcutter."
"I will buy him Yosemite," said Tom.
"You have a great heart," said Blossom. "Hold the phone while I ask our wise and kindly old Dean of Women whether it is proper for me to accept all these gifts."
She went forthwith and asked the Dean of Women, and the Dean of Women had her wise and kindly old hand on Blossom's cheek and said, "Child, let not false pride rob you of happiness. Accept those gifts from Tom."
"Oh, bless you, Wise and Kindly," breathed Blossom, dropping grateful tears into the Dean's retinole. "I must run and tell Tom."
"Yes, run, child," said the Dean, a smile wrinkling her wise and kindly old eyes. "And ask him has he got an older brother."

lons in Town Hall.

As evidence of the multi-lingual demands made on a singer - sang the role in German in Vienna, in Greek in Athens, and in Italian in New York, and now I am directing it in English, which means virtually learning still another translation. At least I now feel very well acquainted with the opera.

Probably the greatest difference in performing a role and directing an opera is in the dimension of responsibility. A performer is responsible only for creating and perfecting a single characterization. If he has a strong nerve as a professional must, he can totally depend on producing the effect he has planned, even under the stress of performance.

A stage director, on the other hand, must work through others to achieve the total dramatic and visual effect he wants. He must rely on the nerve and professionalism of a number of people, none of whom he can reach once the performance begins. For this reason I expect the excitement to be greater for me on Nov. 9 than at any time when I myself performed the opera.

ROLE OF ORPHEUS

As most people know, the role of Orpheus, a man is almost always sung by a woman. Gluck of course composed the role for castrato but this type of musically produced voice quickly went out of existence and subsequently women have assumed the roles which were originally written for castrati.

In later centuries both Mozart and Richard Strauss wrote male roles which they intended to be sung by women—for instance, Octavian in The Marriage of Figaro and Octavian in Der Rosenkavalier.

Concerning the question given a no less worthy an authority than Aristotle as they are called to Athens or Rome (music in Aristotle's era was a part of the curriculum) I can say that I of course never sing to myself but when I am in the right mood I could sing for a man in some other tongue. Any language of interest can best be acquired through actual contact with native speakers and of course I have some.

ONLY PART OF MYTH

Gluck in his opera uses only a portion of the Orpheus myth. That which tells of Eurydice's death on the wedding day. Orpheus' subsequent descent into the world of the dead to reclaim his wife, in the Furies his magical lyre there regaining opera has consistently been produced in opera houses around the world because Gluck created in Orpheus and Eurydice a timeless and beautiful music.

He tells a simple love story that transforms mythological characters into human beings and sets them in a lovely theatrical background which employ dance and song to evoke atmosphere and emotion. Because of these elements, the opera should have a continuing appeal for present and future audiences.

interest in steam industries. Iran would be compatible with state institutions located here. Chief among new industries being sought are research companies that could take advantage of the watch circuits being built in the Florida State University complex.

Formerly citizens of Tallahassee wanted no part of industry. Heller said. He traced this attitude to a faulty conception of the word industry.

To them, industry meant a paper mill on the corner of Park and Adams, he said.

Now, he added, those who have seen the state's young people come here to get educated then seek job opportunities in other towns are beginning to be interested in new industries to keep some of them here.

"A community either prospers or fails back. We must have new industry to bolster its business economic development," he concluded.

Ticket Sales Start For FSU Homecoming

Tickets will go on sale at Westcott Ticket Office Tuesday for the Florida State University Homecoming game, dance and the show in Westcott.

The Alumni Office will sell the tickets for the banquet, barbecue and alumni breakfast and will make reservations for alumni for other events.

Student tickets for the FSU-Mississippi Southern game may be picked up at the Westcott Ticket Office on presentation of a personally signed IBM card with an I.D. card. Date tickets for non-students are $2.

Adult tickets for the game are $4. The game will be at 2:30 p.m. Saturday.

Tickets for the Homecoming Show, which will feature Adam Keefe, coffee house comic, Isobel Robins, comedienne, and the Limeliters, are $2 for students and $2.50 for the public. There will be no reserved seats for the two performances, scheduled at 7 and 9 p.m.

Homecoming Dance tickets are $3 per couple. The dance will feature Buddy Morrow and his "Night Train" Orchestra as well as the performers featured in the Westcott show. The dance will be from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. in Tully Gymnasium.

The Homecoming Banquet will be Friday at 6 p.m. in the Suwannee Room, with Governor C. Farris Bryant as principle speaker. Tickets are $2.25 per person.

NO TICKETS FOR DOG

No tickets are needed for the Pow Wow which will be at 8:30 p.m. Friday.

Tickets for the Alumni Breakfast, which will be held at 8:30 a.m. Saturday are $1.

Barbecue tickets are $1.50 per person for the barbecue to be held at noon at Tully Gymnasium Saturday.

Dr. Janet Wells, 1961 Homecoming Queen, urges all persons to make early reservations for the weekend.

Stuff It, Boys

Auburn University yesterday hurled a new challenge in the race to cop the world record-stuffing title with a long distance phone call to FLAMBEAU Editor Ben Sharp.

The title, currently held by Florida State University, was challenged by Ray Bowen and Virgil Owens of Auburn who claimed that the room they "stuffed" with 225 men is 86 square feet smaller than the room in Kellum Hall which squeezed in 289 men.

2nd Debate Rages Over 'Who's Who'

By HOWARD DENSON
Flambeau Staff Writer

The Who's Who controversey exploded again in the Student Senate Wednesday afternoon.

Sen. Jeanie Ferlita reported that two nominees to the Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities did not have the required 2.5 grade point average which the Student Body Statutes demand.

One of the two students received the most votes in Tuesday's balloting and the other ranked third, Attorney General Marion Clark said.

STRICKEN FROM LIST

Sen. Dusty Boyd moved that the two illegal names be stricken from the list.

Men's Vice President Carl Kuttler, after two unsuccessful attempts, got the Senate to send the proposal to committee for study.

The Senate also moved to send a letter to the Honor Court requesting an opinion on the situation.

Who's Who committee ill-self, however, was extra-legal, Sen. Ron Jones pointed out near the close of the meeting. The committee members, which the student body president appointed, were never confirmed by the Senate, according to Sen. Don Thigpen, elections and appointment committee chairman.

Agreeing that the Senate should not take on executive powers, Sen. Jones said a case should be brought before the University Court.

Who's Who committee representative, Secretary of Student Evens Ivyln Frazier said that the statutes did not say that exceptions could be made. "We were merely going on precedents of the past," she said. She assured the Senate that the exceptions were justified.

Sen Joedy Smith, agreeing with the policy of the committee, asked the Senate to allow flexibility in choosing the "very exceptional cases."

Letters were sent out to all campus organizations, telling them they could nominate Who's Who candidates, said Miss Frazier. But those groups were not told in the letter that exceptions could be made, she said.

Students who were not eligible to be candidates were removed from the list by the registrar, she said, adding that the committee also considered those students to see if exceptions should be made.

No student was removed from the list for lack of activities, she said.

Clark urged that the Senate allow a certain degree of generalities. "There should be no such thing as black and white legislation," he said.

SENATE FLEXIBLE

"The Senate should be flexible," urged Sen Joedy Smith. "This is not like watching television where all the bad guys wear black hats and all the good guys wear white hats. There are certain areas of gray in between," he said.

Sen. Ferlita said there should be no exceptions allowed and the committee should not lower the grade average.

It was a falsehood and a lie to present the two candidates to the students, said Sen Carol Ferlita. "The students have been treated unfairly," she said.

Despite past events and precedents, the Senate should uphold the rules it passes, Sen. John Schaffner said

Other senators felt the investigating committee could only find out that two candidates were illegal and that the illegal candidates might be confirmed before the next meeting.

Kutter pointed out that the university makes exceptions and permits students with low grade averages to enroll and that the Senate shouldn't be so strict in this case.

Bulletin

Senator Ron Jones has filed a case with the Honor Court concerning the Who's Who nomination. The case will come up some time next week.

"Then the concerned representatives from the legislative and executive branches will be consulted," Jones said." The statutes and constitution will be studied and the final decision by the Judicial branch will be handed down as soon as possible."

Public Relations Day

Group Brings Out Problem Solving By PR

FSU Public Relations Involves Everyone: Hogan

"Every word spoken by a faculty member or student, every act of kindness or impoliteness a visitor walking across the campus, every letter or piece of printed material which goes out from every office may be an important factor in projecting (Florida State University's Director of Public Relations, yesterday.

In a speech at the Public Relations Day luncheon, Hogan explained that getting the best possible public relations for Florida State University must be a "concentrative venture" on the part of everyone concerned with the institution.

He said that in all institutions it is essential to have a service organization that presents a unified picture of the total university and to police it. Hogan then states that at FSU the Division of University Relations under the direction of Dr. John Griffin has that function.

Although a major portion of the responsibility for public relations is one of communication, Hogan was quick to point out that this responsibility goes beyond that. He explained, "The execution of this function involves a total effort that is applied objectively to every detail of university life with a view of correction and improvement."

Hogan stated that if shared responsibilities of public relations are well coordinated, with well defined goals and objectives, then the greatest possible strides can be taken in the direction of total institutional advancement."

The primary goal in the public relations program, according to Hogan is an off campus "image" which will lead to public support. He explained that in part this "image" is created through personal contacts. The primary means of creating this "image" however, is through the mass media of communications such as newspapers and magazines and radio and TV.

Hogan explained that the principle product of the News Bureau are mimeographed news releases. These new releases are sent to local newspapers, radio and television stations and out-of-town communication centers to inform them of happenings at F.S.U.

According to Hogan, other functions of the news service include providing news photographs and information to the public concerning coming events and gathering information concerning spot news.

Although much attention is given to the "outside public," he feels that attention is given to the "inside" also. "The task is not to 'win over' the faculty or to 'educate' them," Hogan said. "The challenge consists of arousing interest and achieving total identification, a realization that both faculty members and public relations personnel are equal members of the University team," he explained.

Hogan then said that the News Bureau must always serve as a liason between media represent-

Official Charges Drug Industry's 'Distorted Image' Is Due To Kefauver Group's Anti-Patent Investigation

A drug industry representative who said one of the industry's public relations goals is to "correct the distorted image of our industry created by our recent trial by headlines," today blamed the Kefauver committee Investigation on "anti-patent forces."

Fred C Sumners, professional service representative of Smith, Kline and French Laboratories, Philadelphia, was one of the speakers at the second annual Public Relations Day held at Florida State University yesterday.

'SOLVING PROBLEMS'

"Solving Problems Through Public Relations" was the subject of the program, co-sponsored by the Tallahassee chapter of the Florida Public Relations Association, the FSU School of Business and Alpha Delta Sigma and Gamma Alpha Chi business fraternities.

Dean of the School of Business Charles A Rovetta opened the day-long program with a special greeting. Included on the program's agenda were four guest speakers and panel discussions following the first and last talks.

Anti-patent forces, said Sumners, have been trying to "get their foot in the door" and Sen. Kefauver saw an opportunity for publicity by panning the pharmaceutical industry. The public is quite ready to believe attacks on "people who charge too much for their pills," he said.

Kefauver stated prices were too high at the start and was quite successful in getting headlines, said the speaker. "The distorted headlines that appeared in the papers were largely the result of the clever scheming and maneuvering of Sen. Kefauver and his staff and were not the product of careless or biased reporting," he said.

But as a result the pharmaceutical industry, which he described as the prescription drug industry, is having to engage in a big public relations effort including one to defeat the Kefauver-Celler bill.

"This bill actually contains important provisions that weaken

Marching Chiefs To Salute All Armed Forces Personnel

"Salute to the Armed Forces" will be the theme of the Florida State University Marching Chiefs halftime show Saturday night.

Since FSU plays Vanderbilt on Nov. 11, when the entire nation is honoring the armed services, the band will march with a strictly military style and play traditional military music.

The show will tell the story of the Armed Forces from their birth in 1776 to the present. To commemorate this birth, the Chiefs will play "Chester" and form the numbers "1776."

Next the band will salute those soldiers who displayed valor and bravery during the Civil War with "Dixie" and "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp, the Boys Are Marching." At this point a map of the United States will be formed, which the band will alter temporarily by separating the North from the South while playing "When Johnny Comes Marching Home Again" and "The Civil War."

Moving from this formation into that of a soldier, the band will depict the spirit of the fighting men of World War I with the music of "Over There." The soldiers of World War II will be saluted with the "Air Force Song" and the forming of an airplane which moves across the field.

As a grand finale, the letters ROTC will be spelled out on the field as the band salutes all active members of the Armed Forces everywhere, as well as those devoting their time in college to military participation. Marching Chiefs will honor them with "America The Beautiful."

Sophomores Give Dance Tomorrow

Big John and the Untouchables will be featured at a dance in the Suwannee Room tomorrow night after the Citadel game. Entertainment during the dance and door prizes are added attractions. All students are invited to attend.

Gen. Mark Clark, Gov. Bryant Attend Military Day Ceremony

Florida State University Military Day will be observed by the combined cadet corps in pregame ceremonies Saturday at 7:40 p.m. in the Doak Campbell Stadium. General Mark Clark, U.S. Army retired and Governor Farris Bryant will be the presiding dignataries at the formation.

This will be the second observance of FSU Military Day in which the cadet corps has appeared during an athletic event. Last year the cadet corps attended the FSU-Florida freshman football game as a unit.

PRESENT ARMS

After forming his men on the field, Cadet Staff Commander, Cadet Colonel Kenneth B. Cone, will direct the participating, to present arms." At this point the Marching Chiefs will play "Ruffles and Flourishes" and the "General's March" in honor of General Clark, U. S. Army Retd, and Governor Farris Bryant.

The Band will play four "Ruffles and Flourishes" as tradition dictates, during that a four star general is the presiding military officer.

Following the salute to General Clark and Governor Bryant, the Marching Chiefs will play the National Anthem and then leave the playing field.

Before the cadet corps march off the field the FSU cheer-leaders will lead the ROTC in their green winter uniforms and AFROTC, in their blue winter uniforms, in a victory cheer. On exiting the cadets will sit as a unit in the stands until halftime

FSU'S ATTENTION

It is hoped that the ceremony, which was suggested by the Athletic Dept with the backing of President Gordon W Blackwell, will focus attention on the service units at FSU and help to create a greater Esprit de Corps in the student body.

Also, in observance of Veterans Day the ROTC and AFROTC drill teams along with the Angel Flight Corps will march in the local Veterans Day Parade.

Saturday at 1 p m the Angel Corps and the ROTC Glee Club will be featured on WCOV-TV in a further tribute to the country's veterans.

Harper's Claims Action Is Needed On 'Sex: The Problem Colleges Evade'

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article entitled, "Sex: The Problem Colleges Evade," by Milton I. Levine, M.D. and Mayo Pines is the third in a series of articles from a special supplement titled, "The College Scene" which is in the October issue of HARPER'S MAGAZINE. The article has been condensed by FLAMBEAU staff writer Ann Carroll.

When college girls by the dozen come to their childhood pediatricians desperate and in tears because they are pregnant, it is time to question what is being done in the colleges to protect them.

. . . as the Harvard Crimson put it in a recent article, "in sheer wildness, today's college students do not compare with their fabled predecessors." Two factors, however, make the current crop different: (1) premarital sex in all its forms is much more widespread and openly discussed among students; and (2) in the midst of this apparent sophistication, at a time when highly reliable methods of birth control exist, the majority of students are nearly as ignorant of the facts as the poorest, illiterate Indian peasant.

The girls who get pregnant usually tell the doctors that they thought they knew how to prevent conception. Some had gone through early sex-education courses . . . All these courses had remained on such a high plane, however, that the students' ideas about how conception actually takes place were incredibly vague.

As a result, the students are no better off than in the quaint old days when hygiene courses simply taught girls to say something like, "I am a Wellesley girl and, I hope, a lady." They are worse off, in fact, since times and the definition of a lady have changed and, in the words of one college physician, "the attitude of the younger generation today is pretty much free-for-all sex."

Few colleges have any clear-cut policies on how to deal with this attitude. Some are downright contradictory . . .

Other colleges limit themselves to the role of policemen. They have a wide and rather comical array of regulations . . . While boys are given considerable freedom, the girls' dormitories impose strict curfews—which occasionally backfire, as when girls stay out all night rather than be punished for coming in too late . . . If nothing else, such restrictions may succeed in obstructing ordinary friendly relationships.

Carelessness is not an uncommon reason for college pregnancies . . . all evidence points to the fact that the girls' paternal ignorance about how to protect themselves is the chief factor involved. The result, according to rough student estimates, is four to five unwanted pregnancies per year for every thousand coeds. If this is true, and one adds the pregnancies in women's colleges, it comes to a total of well over a thousand pregnant and unmarried college girls each year.

When such widespread tragedy occurs, how can institutions of higher learning be excused for their suppressions of information on this vital aspect of life?

College pregnancies seldom appear in the published figures as illegitimacy . . . because the majority of them end in abortions.

Other girls decide to have their babies. They drop out of school and out of sight, then usually surrender the child to an adoption agency. As psychiatrists have found out, however, few young women who give up their own babies ever recover completely from the feeling of guilt and remorse.

The third possibility is for the couple to marry—even though they may be far from ready for it emotionally, or may be totally unsuited to each other. This sort of beginning loads the dice against them and their children from the immediate parenthood, a disproportionate number of early marriages end in divorce.

Colleges should face these facts realistically. Besides their primary purpose, education, they cannot escape responsibility for the emotional and physical life of young people on their campuses. Since they know that a certain number of students will have premarital sexual relations despite official disapproval, the colleges should try to make sure that all students know how to avoid the most serious consequences . . .

The administrators themselves are sometimes quite aware of this problem . . . College officials are afraid of pressure . . . From a public-relations standpoint, they are afraid that merely mentioning the words, "birth control," would tarnish the good name of their college.

Human reproduction is still a taboo subject in some of the nation's public schools . . . on the college level, biology teachers often skirt around the subjects of reproduction and contraception.

. . . Every college student should be exposed to . . . an objective review of the facts, presented in a climate of free discussion.

Whoever undertakes to guide such a session should be prepared to face without blinking . . . typical questions.

. . . Some colleges create a very tense and punitive atmosphere in their "sex education" lectures . . .

All too often lectures selected by the colleges are more interested in upholding conventional standards than in presenting any facts

One way to answer many of these questions in advance would be to provide each freshman with a recommended reading list of reliable, forthright books . . .

To help students use this book knowledge wisely and well, the colleges should provide easy access to a sympathetic adviser for individual counseling . . . Another important function of the colleges would be to sponsor frank, open discussions of the whole subject.

For a good many students, this would simply be a useful introduction to family planning in marriage. The others would have a chance to weigh their actions without benefit of half-truths. As Kinsey found out, fear of pregnancy has never been a major factor in preventing premarital experience. When the new oral contraceptives become widely available, as they soon will be, pregnancy as retribution and as a deterrent will become even less significant. The major influence then, as now, will be what Kinsey classified as "moral considerations."

Certainly the colleges could help students understand better the psychological, social, and moral implications of their sexual maturity. To do this effectively, however, they should take into account the sexual activity that exists on campuses today and try to match their policies to deal with it as realistically as possible. As a practical matter, all the colleges in America are still a long way from this goal.

Decision Belongs To Court

The situation surrounding the Who's Who debate is muddled beyond recognition. Charges and counter-charges have been hurdled and re-hurled by both members of the legislature and members of the executive branch. Now it is time for the judiciary to step in and make a decision on the case.

The controversy began when Senator Carol Ferlita made a motion to ask the vice-president to write a letter to the chief justice asking him to rule on the exceptions the Selections Committee made to the statute requiring Who's Who candidates to have a 2.5 scholastic average.

Later, Senator Ginny Boyd moved that the senate instruct the Selection Committee to remove the names of these two individuals from the Who's Who list.

Debate insued. During the course of the discussion, many points were voiced. Some senators felt that their laws were being ignored and were upset about it. Some watned to strike the violators down immediately. Some wanted to allow the committee to make the exceptions to the statutes. Il watned to have their say.

The senate, however, can neither strike the violators down nor let the nominees stand. Both are impossible. There has been no formal resolution introduced on the matter nor would any such resolution carry any weight. The Senate is not in a position to instruct an executive committee to do anything. This is not their function. All a resolution would do is express the opinion of the senate, and the senate's opinion is not a factor in this case. A judgment on violations of the Student Body Statutes must be referred to the Honor Court, as Senator Ferlita suggested.

Furthermore, it was stated during the Senate meeting by Senator Ron Jones that the appointments of the Selections Committee members had not been approved. This was verified by Senator Don Thigpen, chairman of the Elections and Appointments Committee. In fact, no committees had been approved. Vice-President Ken van sendergh had been slow in appointing the committees because of the election of the new senators and this committee was just beginning to approve executive committees which had been functioning since the beginning of the year.

However, the Who's Who committee is not among the past lists submitted to the Senate by the president. rticle II, Section 4 of the Constitution states that any "regular appointments" of the Student Body president must be approved by the Senate. However, Byrd contends that this is a special committee. The president says that in the past a precedent has been set that "special" appointment do not have to be approved.

So there are two questions the Honor Court must rule on: Whether to allow the committee to make an exception on the Who's Who nominees, and whether the Who's Who committeeappointments require the approval of the senate.

The first is clear. Regardless of the individuals involved and their merits, exceptions can not be allowed if there is no provision for exceptions. This is a government of laws and not of men and these laws must be enforced. The committee was clearly in the wrong in making the exceptions without authority.

The Who's Who Selections Committee should be made a regular committee and be approved by the senate. approval is routine usually and the committee is vital enough to warrant such consideration.

But regardless of the action taken, both these decisions should be left to honor court. This function belongs to the judiciary, and not to either the legislature or the executive.

Communism Aims To Conquer World

By ALLAN DERMOTT

EDITOR'S NOTE: Second of a five part series on Communist Ideology. Next: Examples of the changing American character.

Communist ideology, materialistic in every aspect, opens the door for the Communist strategy with its aim to conquer the world. After you have read the following three laws of Communism, which were put forth from the May 29, 1957 meeting of the Committee on Un-American Activities, and have read the first of this series, you will clearly be able to see how the strategic planning, which the Communists are employing against the United States, has evolved.

"THE FIRST ONE is 'There is no God.' They are proudly, unashamedly atheistic in theory and in practice. When they deny God, they simultaneously deny every virtue and every value that originates with God. They denv moral law. They deny absolute standards of truth and righteousness. An entire civilized code of moral and ethical values is destroyed so that thev are free to erect in their place new moral and ethical standards as the occasion demands.

"The second law of Communism is that man is a material machine. He is matter in motion and nothing more. Man is a body, and he is completely describable in terms of the laws of chemistry and physics. Man has no soul, no spirit, no significant individual value, no continuity of life He is entirely an evolutionary product, the specie Homo sapiens, and subject to modification, adaptation, and transformation by the applied, established laws of animal husbandry.

"THE THIRD law of Communism is economic determism. It state that the qualities of human intelligence, personality. emotional and religious life merely reflect the economic environment: that in the last analysis what we think, what we feel, what we believe, whom we love, and whom we worship is simply an expression of the environment in which we are raised, and since the environment is primarily concerned with economic forces, in the final analysis, man is a determined economic being." (The three laws were stated in testimony by Dr. Frederick C. Schwarz, executive director of the Christian Anti-Communist Crusade.)

Khruschev, if possible, does not want an all-out war. There is too much for him to risk. He therefore, must use another plan, and this plan is now in operation. It has been in operation for more than ten years: to insectivize the American people, that is, to make our people like a colony of ants or bees—just working day to day without thinking.

Coma Goes To An Opera Rehearsal

BY LESLIE POWELL

Coma blundered into the opera rehearsal. Prepared to be overawed by the magnificence of it all, she had covered up her best tattoos and condescended to wear shoes.

HAVING BEEN BROUGHT up from her rush basket on stories of prima donna's and claw-marks from ceiling to floor in staging areas around the world, Coma was unprepared for the cordiality expressed by cast and crew of Orpheus and Eurydice—especially considering the long hours of rehearsal and inevitable differences of opinion on everything from arias to eye-shadow.

STAR ETHEL DONALDSON was particularly pleasant. During breaks, she chatted and joked with visitors and squads of the task force of talent at work on the opera. The one hitch to this happy interlude was laughter.

"You aren't supposed to make me laugh," Ethel said. "It's bad for the voice."

"SO WHO CAN help laughing?" Coma asked. "This is the only orchestra I've ever seen that insisted on waving a white flag of truce on a violin bow. It's like the conductor was sitting in the balcony lobbing grenades at the string section or something."

From somewhere further along the row of dimly lit seats came the cherubic voice of Little Floyd Patterson: "You do that again and I'll slug you," she said in diminutive tones. "Whata you anyway, some kind of nut?"

COSTUMER ARLENE Dallas Houston bounced by, arms waving, talking madly to herself: "Costumes, crooked shepherds or shepherds crooks, wigs, figs and gigs. Some fun, but I love it!"

"That's right Abilene," Coma yelled after her, "you love it, but I got news—one sprung sacklcloth opening night and your production is ashes!"

COMA REFERRED to the abundance of flowing robe in evidence about the auditorium. Dancers flowed down the aisles in ripples of fabric; singers Davidson, Donaldson and McCarty were appropriately clothed in costumes suitable to their roles — masculine, feminine and God-like. Coma approved heartily of the basically Greek costumes. "I don't mean like The Corner variety, but like the Pericles herself wore. Plenty of drape and flow but nary a circle pin in sight. Not one sweater in expensively chic style I'm impressed. Considering this is FSU I wouldn't have been surprised to see Ethel peopled by Furies in fashionable above-the-knee skirts and coiffed to beat a Kennedy."

"I must quit think of chocolate nut sundaes," Ethel murmured. "I'll have to keep telling myself to put down that sundae and pick up an aria."

"You opera people," Coma said, "you turn me out."

"ON, OAF," Little Floyd Patterson piped.

"On? On?" Coma replied. "You mean Ethel is on? You can't refer to ladies as oafs. Whata you? Some kind of nut?

"On, idiot, on, on, on," Little Floyd reiterated in blinding belligerence. "Opera people turn you on. Not out, not off, not nowhere never but on."

"SO, ALL RIGHT, opera people turn oo me." Coma yelled. "Come outta your oxygen tent and listen once. That's what I said in the first place."

"I'll be all turn on anybody." Ethel said. "I'm friendly."

"Sez," said Lutelst nee harpist Marilyn. "I'm still twanging from the last scene. Couldn't we be friends again?"

"I CAN'T BE FRIENDS with this collegiate type here." Coma shouted, making hex signs in the direction of Little Floyd, "always calling names, making cracks, she oughta get on somebody's staff."

"I'll put somebody's staff on you," Little Floyd said, fracturing Lutelst nee Harpist Marilyn's left crutch on Coma's shinbone, thereby bringing on the highest note hii during the entire rehearsal- It was repeated in this column but edited out. We have to save the presses from pressure and all that jolly rot.

"WELL, NOW YOU' lovely children don't have to fight," observed Cotton Conservative. "You all join new-era club: The Royal Society of the Brother Karamazov for Call-biters, Feather Tickling and Toe-bonebreaking. Fun for everyone including the pimple squeezers."

And, as the directors called everybody back to work, and the white flag was again flying from the depths of the fiddle filled orchestra pit, Coma and Little Floyd left arm in arm in arm swearing they'd never enjoyed anything so much as the opera rehearsal and swearing to see both performances, hades rasers and all.

"LUVELY PEOPLE." Coma chortled, "opera people are luvely people."

And from the stage some little lady was waving a shepherd's crook and calling "Bye sheeps."

Syllabus

A Matter Of Terminology

By ROBERT SANCHEZ

Adlai Stevenson relates that he once asked his father the difference between a convert and a traitor, whereupon his father explained that "if a Republican becomes a Democrat, he is a convert; if a Democrat becomes a Republican, he is a traitor." The story works both ways, of course. The interesting thing about this little commentary on semantics is its applicability to "The Cold War With this in mind, let's look at a few of the issues of The Great World Conflict.

AS EVERYONE this side of The Iron Curtain knows, the Cold War is a melodrama in which there are Good Guys and Bad Guys. We are the Good Guys, quasi-ly referred to as "The Free World," whose leader is The United States. "The Communist World" or Bad Guys are led by "The Kremlin," which rhymes with "gremlin" and sounds altogether rather evil.

The United States has followers —other nations who do exactly as we wish. They are called "Allies." The Kremlin also has followers. They are called "Satellites." Among our Allies in The Free World are Democratic, Anti-Communist Spain, Democratizing Nationalist China, Progressive South Korea, Gay Enlightened Portugal, and Stable, Popular South Viet-Nam. The Satellites of The Kremlin include Aggressive Red China, Suppressed Red Hungary, Puppet Red North Korea, and Treacherous Red Cuba, a nation which is presently exploiting OUR oil, sugar, nickel, and other resources heretofore protected by our naval base on the island.

IN THIS GREAT WORLD Conflict, The United States is, above all, Peace Loving. That is why we spend most of our national budget on Defense. The Kremlin, on the other hand, is Agressive, spending great sums on Preparations for War. That we know because some of our planes have made Overflights in the International Air above The Kremlin. These flights were necessary to protect ourselves from Spying and Subversion, favorite tricks of The Kremlin.

The Impracticality of Communism is demonstrated each year as Thousands of Refugees Escape to the West, whereas there are only a few Turncoats Defecting to The Kremlin These Refugees Flee Communist Terror for they know, through our Free Press, Broadcasts and in spite of Communist Propaganda, that The United States is A Land of Freedom and Democracy where All Caucasians Are Created Equal. Meanwhile, the people Behind The Iron Curtain remain Enslaved By Their Communist Masters.

OF COURSE, the foregoing comments only serve to highlight The Really Big Difference between The United States and The Kremlin. The people of the Communist world may criticize their bosses only within narrow limits. We Americans, on the other hand, are Free To Criticize the actions of our government, subject, of course, to the approval of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, the FBI, the CIC, the Supreme Court, and their less restrained imitators. We wouldn't want, however, to go so far as to criticize The System, for that would be Revolution, something we haven't approved of since 1787. In fact, that is the great issue of The Cold War. When The Kremlin fanally understands this and ceases to Foment Trouble, we may at last have Peace in Our Time, for at least they will be Speaking Our Language.

Anything Goes

The Neglected Wood

By DOUG SMITH

A good recreational area nowadays is hard to find, excluding the sink and the coast. However, it has recently been brought to the attentuoo of the student body that there is a veritable virgin forest adjacent to campus that is, according to some sources, virtually neglected. The potential of the place, known as Games' Woods, is being wasted on a few birdwatchers and naturelovers.

ONE WOULD BE amazed, and maybe even horrified, at what could be done to the area with a little impetus from some civic-minded and well-meaning group. All those mossy old trees which have days, and besides, Lunds and the Library are going to be pretty crowded.

The bomb shelter would also serve as an excellent foundation for a building. But it must be in keeping with the rural and Southern landscape as are the rest of the buildings hereabouts. Maybe a log cabin building in the International style would be appropriate. The offices could be used by the Air Force and the Air ROTC (with a launching pad on the roof), and the Civil Defense people.

That should take care of any eventuality.

OUR NEW swimming pool, which we obviously need more than we need more classrooms and professors, could be put over there—far away from the antiquated model in the women's gym. It might be a good idea to beat it for water polo in the winter. Why have a plain white building when for a few thousand dollars more, you can have one with purple polka-dots, too. And getting rid of those ugly, useless, trees, Games' Woods could become the campus Coney Island with its own Air Defense Command. Who could ask for anything more?

Forecast

By BONNIE FREEDMAN

Tallahassee was about to set some sort of record for itself, and then my people had to ruin it. It seems that we had gone for fifty and then some days without rain. Then, Sunday at the Hillel brunch at the temple, poof! There was innocent Israeli dancing going on and we seemed to hear anyone malice.

THEN SOME CLOD suggested that we do Mayim. "Wait a minute." I cried, putting down my glass of sacrificial wine "Don't you clods know what that is?"

Indeed we don't and we don't really care," they replied in unison, beginning to form a circle.

"WAIT," I SCREAMED, "That is the Israeli rain dance—" which indeed it really is.

"So what," they said.

"Don't you clods realize that Tallahassee has gone for fifty and then some days without rain?" I asked.

"HEY," SOMEONE said, "You don't really believe in that sort of thing, do you?"

"Well," I muttered, "being relatively well-oriented into the scientific world and all that, I don't really believe it with all my heart, but then, we are taking a risk because that same Man in the One rumored to have made it rain toads, turn sticks into serpents, and part seas."

"OH, PHOO," they said, and then they began to dance.

I sat in a corner quietly sobbing. Monday morning it happened—the sky grew black and angry. at ten it rained. It rained hard. and it rained cold, and it rained an everything: the BSU, the Administration building. Dean Warren, Dorman Hall. everything and everybody.

It's going to be a long winter.

Review

'Splendor'

BY FRANK AQUENO

Elia Kazan brings to the screen a powerful love story in his Splendor in the Grass. The film is comparable to such epics as Gone With The Wind and Peyton Place.

KAZAN, YOU recall, introduced James Dean in East of Eden. In Splendor he brings forth a burst of new talent headed by appear in many movies to come.

A most convincing performance is given by Warren Beatty in this, his first role. Like the late Dean, Beatty conveys much with expression; he doesn't have to talk. He is not acting—he just is. His body speaks for him; his facial expressions are natural. In short, Beatty's style is fresh, clean and sparking with promise of a fine new future.

NATALIE WOOD does her best job of acting to date while facing a camera. From her first scene she captures and holds the audience in her control and has them laughing, crying and hoping with her. The Oscar awarders should take her performance into consideration next April.

The film itself is beautiful. The direction is superb, the story believable and the acting excellent. Some will think the movie shocking, but it must not be condemned ed ont his count alone. We need movies like this one. Some scenes are very frank, but this doesn't make them dirty I recommend Splendor in the Grass as one of the best films of the year—one you'll remember for a long time after.

Confused By Fact

TO THE EDITOR:

For some time now I have been aware of unjust decisions and of the unwillingness of the FSU Traffic Court to hear further argument toward appeal. It seems to me that maybe the time has come when something should be done to remedy the situation.

I fully realize that the traffic problem on this campus is an ever-growing complexity and that the need for strict rules is apparent. However, I do feel that one of the main purposes of student government is to teach the students the proper procedures of government The blank refusal to any appeal and refusal to recognize legal points of law or legal council, is not, in my mind, the teaching of Democratic principles. If FSU is to be a "Great University" and if the civil minded little girls on the Traffic Court are to fulfill their mission, then we must not act like the little tyrant who says, "Don't confuse me with facts, my mind is already made up."

Concerning The Pertinence

TO THE EDITOR:

When will the Flambeau cease to breach the purpose for which it was created? Was it not to: "Provide information for and to the students, and express student opinion"?

May I submit a list of questions concerning the pertinence of some of your material in the Tuesday issue?

2). Does "Orphesus" (sic) actually deserve a half page?

3). What was the homecoming theme doing on the back page? Isn't this small event worthy of student attendings?

4). Was Dobson trying to tell us something; or was this just nonsense?

5) What was a picture of editor Sharpe (sic) doing on the editorial page? . . . to be running for president or something?

Although this letter contains a note of cynicism, I feel that if it stimulates an improvement in the Flambeau, it is justified. Here's to a better Flambeau!

JIM CASWELL

EDITORS NOTE: Ans.: 1. We don't know, ask the administration. II. Yes. III. Probably not; it's one subject every red blooded, ethical, moral student is updated on. IV. That is your opinion. V. You've only just noticed? Thanks for the friendly sentiment.

Cawthon Hall Parking Problem

TO THE EDITOR:

Once upon a time the parking lot of Cawthon Hall must have been in much better shape than it is now. But its present state is quite sad!

When one goes driving into this parking lot, she may as well consider it a risk to limb, at least. Bump goes the car as you enter the lot, and all the passengers get thrown to one side and then the other. Bumpety-bump-bump go the car and passengers as you hopefully and courageously drive along looking for a vacant spot. Crunch go the tires all under the lacerated tires as they plow through holes and jagged areas, and ooh go the heads as the passengers get thrown together.

Actually the situation is not really this bad; however, we are sure that many others feel as we do—something should be done to improve the parking lot at Cawthon Hall. Here's hoping that this letter will contribute toward that end.

If you happen to see a small car under the lot that doesn't come out again, it's probably fallen in a hole.

HERE'S HOW WESTCOTT BUILDING LOOKED UNTIL SIX-inch-high letters were chipped off two months ago.

'FSCW' Remnants To Go To Alumnae

A souvenir from the days of "Florida State College for Women" will go to the first 100 FSCW alumnae registering for Florida State University's Homecoming next weekend.

The souvenirs will be stone chips from the "Florida State College for Women" sign recently carved off the front of Westcott Bldg.

The class of 1911, oldest class coming together for a reunion at this Homecoming, was the first to use the recently completed Westcott Bldg. for graduation.

FSCW changed to co-educational FSU in 1947 and most people had forgotten about the tag "FSCW" above the front entrance of Westcott until workmen last spring cleared the ivy away for a waterproofing job. The six-inch high letters then stood out like a slip showing.

Comments poured in from the present student body, which is predominantly male, and FSU chisels went to work on the letters two months ago. The pieces were gathered up and a first-class jig-saw puzzle fan could put them together nicely.

Pat Hogan, director of public relations at FSU, was the speaker at a luncheon in the Trophy Room. His topic was "Synopsis of the FSU Public Relations Program."

Other speeches included those by Carol B. Foster, chief of information services for the Martin Co., Orlando, and John H. Beach, advertising sales representative for the Saturday Evening Post, Atlanta. Foster's speech concerned "The Evolution of a Weapon System." Beach spoke about "The Creative Story Behind the New Post."

"We should strive at all times to be a professional, to be abreast of the latest thought and movements in the field, by taking advantage of clinics, conferences, and workshops where we can find new and exciting ideas," he concluded.

Garnet Key Taps

Garnet Key, women's leadership, service and spirit honorary, has tapped 16 junior and senior women.

Seniors are Dorrie Chazel, Penny Cowell, Caryl Lenahan, Andrea Powers, Saralee Smith and Karen Thureen.

Juniors are Joan Abbott, Judy Cox, Jeanie Ferlita, Evelyn Foy, Diane Goodwin, Kay Isely, Barbara Norman, Jean Sauer and Mary Jo Webb.

The women were tapped Thursday night and will be initiated Sunday afternoon.

THIS GROUP PLANNING ALUMNI ACTIVITIES FOR FLORIDA State University's Homecoming Nov. 17-18 could use the help of a jig-saw puzzle expert. Spread out before them are chips off the "Florida State College For Women" sign which until recently adorned Westcott Building. The chips will be given to the first 100 or more FSU grads who register for Homecoming next Friday. Left to right are Mrs. Helen Fine, 1916; Mrs. W. J. Ovca, 1965; Mrs. William Graham, recent alumna; and Miss Judi Holder of Charlotte, N.C., FSU student on the Alumni Activities Committee.

Faculty Notes

Rustad Gives Paper

Dr. Ronald C. Rustad, assistant professor of physiology at Florida State University, presented a paper at the first meeting of the American Society for Cell Biology in Chicago, Ill., Saturday.

The paper was based on research on pinocytosis, or the way cells take in their food. Dr. Rustad was assisted in the research by his wife, Mrs. Lynne C. Rustad, a graduate student in experimental biology at FSU. A special polarizing microscope, provided by a $2,000 grant from the Florida Division of the American Cancer Society, was used in the study.

Earlier phases of their research was reported in August at the International Congress of Biophysics in Stockholm.

Following the Chicago meeting, Dr. Rustad spoke on "The Chemistry of the Cell Division Apparatus," at the first annual symposium of the Wayne State Recognition Award in Detroit, Mich., this week.

Dr. Charles Alex Shivers of Lehanon, Tenn., is conducting post-doctoral research in embryology at Florida State University under a U.S. Public Health Service post-doctoral fellowship.

This two year fellowship allows the student to select the university at which he wishes to pursue his studies.

At FSU, Dr. Shivers will continue research begun at Michigan State University on the inhibition of fertilization in some species of frogs. His research will be carried on in association with Dr. Charles B. Metz, associate director of the Oceanographic Institute and a leading authority on fertilization studies.

Dr. Shivers received his Bachelor's and Master's Degrees from George Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn., and his Ph.D. from Michigan State.

His research has concerned the process by which an antisera prepared against the surface coating of frog eggs can render the eggs incapable of being fertilized by the sperm.

Dr. Russell Middleton, FSU associate professor of sociology, has received a National Science Foundation post-doctoral fellowship. This fellowship will allow him to spend the 1962-1963 academic year conducting research and studying the theory of multivariate analysis at the University of California at Los Angeles.

Only six NSF postdoctorate fellowships were awarded this year in the field of social sciences, and Dr. Middleton's was the only one given to a sociologist.

He spent one year of postdoctoral study at the University of Oxford on a Fulbright grant.

KA Flag Flies As Parties Start Again

By BETH STEPHENS AND FLO NEILSON

The Campus is coming alive once more this weekend with the sound of combo parties and other festivities as the football team returns to Campbell Stadium and the flag flies high over the Kappa Alpha house again.

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

Dean of Women Katherine Warren, Director of Student Activities Marie Williams and various faculty members will be guests at dinner Sunday afternoon.

ALPHA XI DELTA

The Alpha Xi's are having an open house tomorrow from 2 to 5 p.m. in honor of the Citadel football players. The Embers will provide the music and everyone is invited.

CHI OMEGA

The Chi O's and the Delt's are having a Western party at the Delt house Wednesday night. Sunday there will be a reception at the Chi house from 2 to 4 p.m. in honor of the new housemother, Mrs. Janette Robinson.

DELTA CHI

Dave Stromberg is a new Delta Chi pledge. There will be a party after the Citadel game at the house. The "Dellones" will play.

DELTA DELTA DELTA

New initiates are Kathy Adkins, Barbara Buick, Trnna Bunker, Alice Davis, Elas Coleman, Marreen Leino, Priclla Kelly, Linda de da Rua, Kim Stratton, Judy Howard, Rosemary Hand, Annette Gladdeo, Allice Marshall, Susie Summers, Babs Watts and Ann Streckland. The best pledge award went to Annette Gladden. The Tri-Delt's have a social with the Phi Delt's Wednesday.

DELTA GAMMA

The pledge class is sponsoring a Spaghetti Supper Sunday night from 5 until 7 p.m. The price is $1. Everyone is invited.

DELTA TAU DELTA

Tonight the Delt's are having their "Roman Party." Tomorrow the Delt combo, the "Embers," will play. Mike Long is a new pledge.

DELTA ZETA

New initiates are Kay Gibson Carolyn Jordan, Linda Lindsey, Rosalie Lasalta, Lyn MacReynolds and Janet Schuff.

GAMMA PHI BETA

The Gamma Phi's will attend St. John's Episcopal Church together Sunday.

KAPPA ALPHA

The KA's get an early start on Homecoming this weekend with a "Ranch Party" tonight and a "School Spirit" party tomorrow afternoon. After the game, a combo party will be held at the house.

KAPPA SIGMA

A swing theme party will be held at the house tonight for Kappa Sig's and their dates. A combo party after the game tomorrow will complete the weekend activities. The ADPi's and the Kappa Sig's will have a joint work party Wednesday. New pledges are Virgil Scott, Pud Palmer and Danny West.

LAMBDA CHI ALPHA

Tomorrow there will be a combo party at the house after the game, Roy Rolls combo will play.

PI KAPPA ALPHA

Bea Lister is a new Pike pledge. Tomorrow night the Pikes will have a combo party following the game.

PI KAPPA PHI

Chick Wolf is a new pledge. Tomorrow, there will be a combo party after the game. The Pi Kap's and the Tri-Sigma's will have an exchange dinner Wednesday.

PHI DELTA THETA

Bobby Carns and the Chaotics will be featured at a party at the Phi Delt house tomorrow night.

PHI KAPPA TAU

Tomorrow night the Phi Tau's are having a combo party with Lawyer Smith supplying the music. The Phi Kappa Psi's have been invited to attend.

PHI MU

New initiates are Bonnie Binns and Ann Spencer. The Phi Tau's will be guests for lunch tomorrow. Dr. Bartlett, faculty advisor, will be a dinner guest Sunday. Tuesday the Phi Mu's will be hostesses to their Alumnae at a dessert party.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

New little sisters for this year are Sharon Gause, Peggy Simpson, Phillis Gregory, Valerie Bishop, Karren Capell and Dorothy Roberts. A party will be held after the game tomorrow night.

SIGMA KAPPA

Thursday the Sigma Kappa's will observe their Founder's Day with a program for the advisory board alumnae and pledges.

SIGMA PHI EPSILON

The K D's were serenaded as the Sig Ep sorority of the month. There will be a record hop after the game tomorrow night. There will be an Alumni Housholding Corporation dinner and meeting at the house next Tuesday.

SIGMA NU

A party with a military theme will be held after the game tomorrow night. The Ramblers will provide the music. New initiates are Bobby Gray, Ray Grodzick, Toby Harris, Tommy Pepper, Steiner Pfluger and Richard Zipperer.

TAU EPSILON PHI

Robert Baum is a new initiate. The "Roman Toga Party" is tonight at the TEP house. Tomorrow J. Box and the 45's will provide the music for a party.

Cheerer Also Sings, Plays Spanish Guitar

By MARTHA ROBERTS
Flambeau Feature Writer

Helping to cheer the Seminoles on to victory is one of the favorite pastimes of Myra Morris, a new cheerleader this year.

Playing the Spanish guitar and singing Spanish folk songs is another.

Originally from Tampa, Fla., Myra's family moved to Havana, Cuba, when she was ten years old and then to San Juan, Puerto Rico, where they now live.

Myra speaks with enthusiasm of the eight years she spent in Havana. Living in the American colony, she attended a tri-lingual American, French and Spanish high school.

While in Havana, Myra studied Spanish guitar and learned many old Spanish folk songs. She finds these much more expressive than other folk songs because of the beauty of the Spanish language. She hopes someday to learn to play the Flamenco guitar.

Myra is also skilled in Latin-American dancing. She especially enjoys the Cha-cha-cha.

Living in Cuba during the revolution, Myra has had some very interesting experiences. Once as she was walking alone in downtown Havana, an anti-American demonstration began and had it not been for a shopkeeper taking her into his store, she could have found herself in real trouble. Being of Spanish descent, she could not have been readily identified as an American. However, she speaks with a definite American accent.

One amusing incident demonstrating the Cuban peoples' true feelings toward Americans occurred at a picture show at which Myra and some of her friends had gone. Throughout the audience the Cuban government had placed people to begin cheering and applauding loudly whenever a picture of Fidel Castro came on the screen. In a similar manner one of Myra's American friends began cheering and applauding when a picture of Eisenhower flashed on the screen and soon the whole theatre joined in vigorously.

In addition to being a Florida State University cheerleader, Myra is also Social Chairman of Dorman Hall and chairman of Homecoming decorations for Dorman.

Since she loves international travel and speaks three languages fluently, Myra hopes to be a foreign exchange student. She is planning to major in Italian and would love to study in Italy. She feels that living abroad will give her a better background for the foreign service work she would like to do.

FSU Meets Citadel

By BILL CHEEK—Flambeau Sports Editor

The Tangerine Bowl Champions of 1960 will meet the Florida State Seminoles in Campbell Stadium tomorrow night at 8:00 p.m. (EST).

The Seminoles wear a 3-3-1 season record. Winning over George Washington, Georgia and Richmond; losing to Mississippi, Virginia Tech and Kentucky; FSU's record stands with only one tie by the Florida Gators.

Roy Bickford, a senior from Miami, leads in two divisions of the statistical tabulations. In pass interceptions Bickford has snatched three, gaining a net total of 28 yards. Returning punts he has accumulated 31 yards in two ties.

Eddie Feely leads the individual categories in three fields. Feely leads in passing, rushing and scoring. The 5 ft. 7 in. junior from Gainesville has completed 32 in 56 pass attempts to make him the top percentage passer in the state. Adding his 255 to passing and 245 in running Feely has totaled 540 yards. This puts him in second place in the state for total offense with only George Mira of Miami ahead of him. Mira has completed 36 of 79 passes and accumulated a total of 620 yards.

Jim Daniels still retains his pass reception lead with 10 completed passes for 113 yards. This gives Daniels an average of 11.3 yards per pass reception. Daniels may be assigned to limited action tomorrow night because of a chest injury received in the Kentucky tilt.

Head Coach Eddie Teague remarked, concerning the loss of tailback Keith Kinderman from the FSU roster, "Of course the loss will hurt tl~m—but not as bad as some might think. He is a hard runner /to the tune of a total of 385 yards and an average of 4.8 yards per carry; better than any back in the state of Florida/ but so are all the FSU backs. They're big and fast. The kind that will run over you rather than around you.

In regard to Feely and Trancygier he said, "Trancygier is a big boy and he throws the ball well. Feely can pass, too, and he is always a threat on the roll out. Feely can hurt you with his running."

Frats Play Golf

By SHIRLEY HARDISON
Flambeau Sports Writer

Fraternities will begin golf tournamnots this weekend in Quincy while the dorm-independent league will be kept busy in basketball and tennis action on the varsity courts.

In women's intramurals, volleyball ranks as the only sport which has continued up till this point. The horseshoe victors were selected last week as Helen Hatton and Janet Weiland of Tri-Delts defeated Bonny Jo Moore and Judy Zeis of Alpha Chi Omega. Tied for third place are Mary Ann Thornton and Carolyn Duyke of Kappa Delta and Dorothy Jones and Carol Haught of West Lassis. First place in the singles competition for the horseshoe tournament goes to Mary Ann Courtey of Alpha Chi Omega.

In the volleyball competition, winners have been established in most of the leagues. Playoffs next week will be held for three of the league winners. Reynolds I copped the title in League I; Carethon has the title in League 3; in League 4, FSO reigns as the champion while in League 5, Pi Phi has the honor. Alpha Chi Omega is the title holder in League 6 and Alpha Omicron Pi does the same in League 8. Playoffs will be between Reynolds II and Jennie Murphree in League 2; Tri-Dell and Alpha Delta Pi in League 7; and Delta Gamma must play Alpha Gamma Delta for the championship.

The tennis finals were played last week-end; Kappa Sigma topped the fraternity play by taking both championship trophies. Charley Bartlette, of Kappa Sigma, defeated Lloyd Sharp, of Lambda Chi Alpha, in the singles competition while Dean Coffee and Greg Greathe combined efforts for the team to defeat the Sigma Chi double semi-finalists.

Meanwhile back at Tully Gym basketball looms once again in the spotlight as the dorm-independent league began their second round of play, and fraternities continued to battle for the first place in their individual leagues.

In the first game of dorm-independent play the Majors defeated BSU 53-47; Geology topped the Villagers, 63-42 and AKP won over the FSO team by a forfeit. In the Gold League, Kellum added a game to their winning list when the Newman team failed to show for the game as did Wesley, who were to play the Dean of Men's Staff. The Yankee Doodlers won their contest over the Celts 38-34.

The next night play loomed for the fraternities. In the Garnet League Phi Delta Theta defeated Sigma Alpha Epsilon 44-40; Lambda Chi Alpha was rolled over by the Kappa Alpha team 72-38 and Alpha Tau Omega moved up another notch in winning bracket, 30-26, over Sigma Phi Epsilon. Gold League action found Delta Tau Delta over Theta Chi 59-46; Sigma Chi over Sigma Nu 89-47, and Delta Chi over Pi Kappa Phi 53-44.

Back to the independent leagues on Wednesday night the Majors topped the Villagers 50-38 while BSU trounced Alpha Kappa Psi 50-23 and Geology had the highest score of the night, thrashing the FSO team 90-22. Kellum defeated Wesley 54-42 and the Yankee Doodlers topped the Dean of Men's Staff. A double forfeit occurred when neither the Celt team or the Nedman quintet were in the gym at game time.

Kiwanis Club Holds Benefit

The Baby Seminoles will face the Baby Paladins in a Kiwanis benefit game at Campbell Stadium Thursday night. The Furman freshmen have a total scoring mark of 73 points to date, with a record of three wins and one defeat. The Seminole freshmen are working on a third straight undefeated season under Coach LaPrade. The FSU freshmen tied Mississippi Southern 6-6 earlier in the season and thrashed the Miami freshmen 13-0 in a game last weekend in St. Petersburg.

The game is being sponsored by the Capital City Kiwanis Club, the proceeds to go to the Camfle of Hope School for mentally retarded children.

The results of the freshmen game are not in today's paper because the paper was put to bed before game-time. The results will appear in Tuesday's edition of the Flambeau.

Dr. Lensen Returns After Year Spent In USSR Working On Next Book

By JOHN M. JERKE
Flambeau Feature Writer

After a half year in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Dr. George A. Lensen, Professor of History and Director of Asian Studies, returned to Florida State University.

As a post-doctoral student and a participant in the official Soviet-American Educational Exchange Program, Dr. Lensen lived at Leningrad University where he collected research material for his forthcoming book which, with his earlier volume, The Russian Push Toward Japan, will complete his two volume history of Russo-Japanese relations.

THREE DEGREES

Holding three degrees from Columbus University, including a Ph.D. from the Department of Chinese and Japanese, Dr. Lensen joined the faculty at FSU in 1940. He revisited Japan during the academic years of 1953-54 as a Fulbright Researcher. Among his books are The World Beyond Europe, An Introduction to Africa, India, Southeast Asia and the Far East, and The Meaning of Yalta.

Mrs. Lensen is presently teaching Chinese at FSU. Dr. Lensen will speak in the Last Lecture Series during the coming year on "The Nature of the Soviet Challenge."

The faculty of Asian studies at Leningrad University is the oldest and best known for Asian studies in Russia. There were seven other Americans, three faculty members and four graduate students, at the University for research purposes during Dr. Lensen's stay. One of these, an assistant professor, and a Russian graduate student lived with Dr. Lensen in one of the University dormitories. Their room was located on the sixth floor reached only by ramps adding to the general primitive but inexpensive living conditions which Dr. Lensen found.

RED TAPE

Even though much of Dr. Lensen's time was spent in obtaining permission for access to archives and material in libraries and museums, he was never really refused this permission. However, he was forced to go through so many channels that this became a search for the right official rather than the material.

Dr. Lensen explained that since the time of the U-2 Incident, no American or Englishman had been granted permission to see a single state archive. However, he was able to read the archives of the Institute of the Peoples of Asia. Here he copied material by hand and placed orders for some on microfilm. Dr. Lensen added that he has received part of that order since his return.

PUBLIC LIBRARY

The public libraries were also a rich source for research and from these Dr. Lensen has brought back microfilms of articles in journals not accessible in the West. He pointed out that these libraries are guarded by militia and to gain entrance one must be a bona fide student or professor. Once inside he soon discovered that the alphabetical card catalog is available only for recent periods (since 1934-35). Earlier publications must be obtained through special permission. On the other hand, the subject card catalog goes further back, but it is still a difficult matter for a Soviet student to find much material on Western history. However, many of these sources are unheard of in the West.

The treatment which Dr. Lensen and the other Americans received from the academicians was by no means discourteous but was still maintained on a strictly business-like level.

DISLIKE GOVERNMENT

The Russian encountered on the street was quick to express his love for the American people but in the same breath questioned, "Why do you want war?" They have separated the American people from the Government and directed their dislike towards the latter.

Dr. Lensen gave several examples showing how the opinions of the Russian on the United States and its way of life had been dangerously warped. He are still living in the Depression of the early 1930's and the common people are burdened with a low standard of living, while the country is being run by Rockefeller and his capitalistic exploiters.

Dr. Lensen

STUDENT CONDUCT

When Dr. Lensen conveyed to the students of Leningrad University some of the general opinions which Americans held toward them, they were not only surprised but found it amusing. They are not all extremely bookish students, and Dr. Lensen felt that the students of Leningrad University would compare favorably with those at FSU. However, he was appalled at the conduct of some of the students in classrooms. Some would completely ignore the professor and express this disconcern by reading newspapers and playing transistor radios. However, in elementary schools strict discipline was the rule.

CO-ED DORMS

The dormitories at Leningrad University were co-educational with no separate wings or floors. The Russian people are still generally Victorian in manners and such "frivolities" as jitterbugging in public places and playing progressive jazz is taboo.

One of the few foreign publications which finds its way to the Soviet man is The Daily Worker in English. The Russian feels that he is reading the correct American viewpoint as expressed in this publication and is given the illusion of having a true foreign publication.

SINISTER CHARACTER

Dr. Lensen explained that Russian students would come up to his room at night after classes to sit and to discuss for four and five hours. Dr. Lensen soon discovered that we have more in common with the Russian people than we would imagine. He commented, "We think of Communists as subversive, international, immoral, sinister-looking characters. He is actually a super-duper patriot, extremely proud of everything Soviet. Furthermore, he has a great deal in common with the violent anti-communists."

When an American attempts to sell the American way of life with special emphasis on the materialistic phase, the Russian feels that these material products are unimportant for it is his way of life which matters. Almost every single Russian believes the future is definitely his. Even though there were those who felt that some officials in the government were incompetent, they too, did not hesitate in expressing their belief of a great Soviet future.

WARPED OPINION

In concluding, Dr. Lensen strongly believes that one way to help dissolve and finally change the warped opinion of the Russians toward the West would be to bring more Soviet students to this country to let them form their own first-hand opinions.

'Campus Pacs' Go On Sale For Men

Campus Pacs for men will go on sale Monday at Westcott and the Student Center to benefit the University Scholarship fund.

For a donation of $.25, each male student can receive a Campus Pac containing about $4 worth of drug and toiletry products.

The pacs are being sold by Omicron Delta Kappa, Mortar Board, Phi Eta Sigma and Alpha Lambda Delta. They will be sold from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at both locations through Friday.

The products are supplied by such nationally advertised manufacturers as Gillette, Colgate-Palmolive, Schering, Pharmcraft, Louis Howe and many more.

The pacs contain Right Guard Deodorant, Palmolive After-Shave Lotion, Ting Athlete's Foot Remedy, Mixture No. 79 Pipe Tobacco, Stanback Aspirin, Brylcreem, Tums, N.R., Coricidin Cold Tablets and record coupons.

Campus Pacs are being distributed to 100,000 students on college campuses throughout the country for advertising purposes.

Dr. Rush Speaks At Coffee On 'Wiester And Remington'

"Owen Wister and Frederick Remington, The Story of a Friendship" will be the subject of a talk at the English Coffee Hour today by N. Orwin Rush, Florida State University, director of Libraries.

The Coffee Hour, at 4 p.m., will be in Westminster House and is open to the public. Program Chairman Dr. W. H. Rogers said.

Wister was primarily a writer, while Remington was a writer, sculpturer and artist. They became acquainted with each other through their work in Harper's Magazine. Both lived at the time when the old West was disappearing because of the railroads and both were interested in preserving the old West for future generations.

The two collaborated with Wister writing The Virginian and Remington doing the illustrations for it. Remington also did some writing with Wister for the magazine productions.

Remington is considered to be the outstanding artist of the American West. This past month the government issued a stamp commorating Remington's birthday.

Ceremony Is Tuesday

Dr. Thomas F. Malone, president of the American Meteorological Society, will be principal speaker Tuesday night when the Mathematics-Meteorology Bldg. is officially dedicated.

Ceremonies for the recently-completed $900,000 building, which houses the Mathematics, Meteorology and Statistics depts. and the Computing Center, will begin at 7:30 p.m.

The dedication will be held during the American Meteorological Society's 107th national meeting, Tuesday through Thursday on the Florida State University campus.

One of the organization's principal speakers will be U. S. Sen. Spessard Holland, who will address a banquet at the Capital City Country Club at 7:45 p.m. Wednesday.

BEGIN TUESDAY

The society meeting will begin in Longmire Auditorium at 9 a.m. Tuesday, with greetings from Dr. Werner A. Baum, professor of meteorology and dean of the faculties.

Some 200 scientists are expected to attend, and about 50 professional papers will be read during the three-day convention.

HERE IS FLORIDA STATE UNIVERSITY'S NEWLY OCCUPIED MATHEMATICS-METEOROLOGY Bldg. which will be dedicated in ceremonies Tuesday. The building has a basement with IBM 7090 computer and hydro-dynamics laboratory, four floors with classrooms and labs and an observatory on top with teletypes, facsimile weather map machines and other equipment.

EVERY COLLEGE STUDENT needs this book
SCIENCE AND HEALTH WITH KEY TO THE SCRIPTURES to increase his ability to learn
An understanding of the truth contained in Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy can remove the gloom which concerns today's college students upon whom increasing demands are being made for academic excellence.
Christian Science calms fears and gives to the student the inner assurance he needs in order to learn easily and to evaluate what he has learned. It teaches that God is man's Mind—the only Mind—from which emanates all the intelligence he needs, when and as he needs it.
Science and Health, the textbook of Christian Science, may be read or examined, together with the Bible, in an atmosphere of quiet and peace, at any Christian Science Reading Room. Information about Science and Health may also be obtained on campus through the

Buddy Morrow To Play Here

Buddy Morrow and his "Night Train Orchestra" will play for the formal Homecoming Dance in Tully Gymnasium, Saturday night from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Featured vocalist with the orchestra will be Carol Knight. Morrow's band is noted for recordings of the many TV show themes including "Hawaiian Eye," "Racket Squad" and "Peter Gunn." The band's latest, "Impact" and "Dancing Tonight To Morrow," have been high on the best seller lists.

"DIXIE FUN"

"Dixie Fun in '61" is the theme for the dance, as well as the overall theme for Homecoming Weekend. Dance decorations will include a Southern mansion and large Confederate Flag.

Appropriate dress for the dance includes formals or dressy cocktail dresses for women and dinner jackets or dark suits and ties for men.

All University women will have a 1 a.m. permission for the dance.

Tickets for the dance are $3 per couple and are on sale at the Westcott Ticket Office. Tickets also be sold at the door.

QUEEN AND COURT

The Homecoming Queen and her court will be presented at the dance by Master of Ceremonies Carl Kuttler. The Limelighters, RCA recording artists, will entertain.

The football team and their dates will be special guests at the dance and will be seated in a special reserved section.

Co-chairmen for the dance are Barbara Hornbeck and Jim Blue. Other committee chairmen are Judy Harnage, Gayle Mores, Miles Williams and Janet Schulz.

FSU Debaters Take First In Emory's Peachtree Meet

A first place trophy for over-all debating and five certificates were won this weekend by the Florida State University Varsity debate squad at the Peachtree Debate Tournament at Emory University.

The first place over-all debating trophy is given to the school that gains the most points at the tournament through their win-lose record, the over-all placings of both their affirmative and negative teams in their divisions, individual speaker ratings, and the total number of speaker points gained by the school.

The last time that FSU won a trophy at the Peachtree tournament was in 1958. They also won the over-all trophy that year.

LABOR TOPIC

The topic debated was "Resolved: that labor organizations should be under the jurisdiction of anti-trust legislation."

The silver-plated trophy is in the form of a loving cup. It will be on display in the Speech Office in the History Bldg. The certificates will be on display on the debate team's bulletin board in the same building.

FSU's affirmative team of John Schaffner and Richard Root ranked second among the affirmative teams in the tournament, and had the highest number of speaker points received by any team in the tournament. Root received a superior debater award, and was tied in speaker points for the top debater award at the tournament. The tie was broken by the team's win-lose record and Glen Holmes from Mercer University was given the award.

RANKED FOURTH

The FSU negative team of Charles Cetti and Victor Paredes, ranked fourth among the negative teams. Cetti received a superior debater award in the negative division.

Both the affirmative and negative teams compiled a record of four wins and two losses.

The affirmative team debated under quite extraneous circumstances. Immediately preceding their first debate almost their entire case and evidence was stolen. This material was never returned and they debated without it.

Miss Jeanne Graham, a graduate assistant in speech, accompanied the team on the trip.

FIFTEEN SCHOOLS

Fifteen southern schools entered in the tournament, which included 25 four-man teams.

Other teams attending the tournament were Sewanee College, Mercer University, Reinhardt College, Agnes Scott College, Alabama State College, Carson Newman College, Spring Hill College, West Georgia University, Emory University, Howard College, Auburn University, University of Georgia, Maryville College.

The University of Georgia and Emory University entered four teams each, Maryville College entered three teams and Howard College and Alabama State College entered two teams. FSU entered only one team in the tournament.

The tournament was run on a "power-matching" basis. This means that winning teams are matched against winning teams and losing teams are matched against losing teams. The first two rounds were matched prior to the tournament, but each of the following rounds were power-matched.

At Westcott Ticket Office

Homecoming Ticket Sales Start Today

Tickets for "Dixie Fun in '61" are on sale this week through Friday, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Westcott Ticket Office and the Alumni Office.

The tickets for the Florida State University-Mississippi Southern football game, the Homecoming Dance and the Homecoming Show may be obtained at the Westcott Ticket Office. Tickets for all other events and for alumni may be obtained at the FSU Alumni Office in Longmire

All classes will end at 12 noon Friday, due to Homecoming.

RESERVATIONS

The Alumni Office has been accepting reservations through the mail for Homecoming events and these tickets will be distributed when the alumni registers, according to Miss Rena Ratcliff, chairman of alumni affairs.

The Homecoming weekend events will begin officially at noon Friday when classes are dismissed.

The initial activity will be the Homecoming Parade at 2:30 p.m. The parade, which will begin at Westcott Gate and proceed down College Ave., will include fraternity and sorority floats, the Marching Chiefs, the cheerleaders, high school bands, the Honor Alumni Class of 1911 and the Homecoming Queen candidates' float.

Following the parade, members of Garnet and Gold Key will host at the Homecoming Banquet in the Suwanee Room at 6 p.m. Gov. Farris Bryant will give the main address. Tickets are $2.25 each.

POW WOW

The traditional pep rally, the Pow Wow, will be held at 8:30 p.m. in Campbell Stadium. Included in the entertainment will be the Marching Chiefs and the majorettes and the Women's Glee Club. No tickets are necessary for this event.

After the Pow Wow, fraternities, sororities, and residence halls will have open house.

President and Mrs. Gordon Blackwell will be special guests at the Alumni Breakfast at 8:30 a.m. Saturday. The breakfast will be held in the Suwanee Room and will be followed by the Alumni Business and individual class meetings.

No tickets are necessary for the alumni lectures from 10:15 a.m. to 11:45 a.m. in Longmire. Dr. N. E. La Seur, Dr. Wiley L. Housewright and Dr. Anna Forbes Liddell will give the talks.

Tickets for the barbecue at noon at Tulley Gymnasium, are $1.50 per person.

FOOTBALL GAME

The highlight of the week will be the FSU Mississippi Southern game at 2:30 p.m. Saturday at Campbell Stadium. Student tickets may be purchased at Westcott Ticket Office upon presentation of an I D Card and a personally signed IBM card. Date tickets are $2. Adult's tickets are $4 and may be purchased at the Tully Gymnasium Ticket Office.

Following the game, an alumni-faculty reception will be held in Longmire Student Lounge at 5 p.m. No tickets are necessary. At 6 p.m. the Leon County Alumni Club will be hosts to all visiting Alumni at a buffet dinner. The dinner will be at the Holiday Inn and tickets will be available at the door.

HOMECOMING SHOW

Tickets for the Homecoming Show are being sold at $2 for students and $2.50 for the public. The two scheduled performances at 7 p.m and 9 p.m. will feature Adam Keefe, coffee house comic; Isobel Rohms, comedienne; and the Limeliefers.

The final event of the weekend will be the traditional Homecoming Dance at Tully Gymnasium, from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Music will be provided by Buddy Morrow and his "Night Train" Orchestra. Tickets are $3 per couple.

Toys Sold For Fund

The Marketing Club toy sale to benefit a scholarship fund began yesterday.

The toys are being sold from a trailer parked by the Student Center from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. this week.

A variety of toys are offered for sale with most of them priced under $10 and the majority of them priced from $1 to $7. Other gifts may be special ordered from the club.

The Marketing Club will give discounts to groups ordering large quantities of toys.

New Name Added To Ballot Of Homecoming Finalists

JOYCE STORY

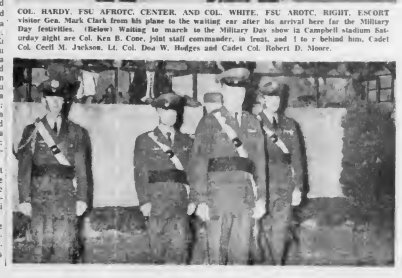
Florida State University's 1961 Homecoming Queen will be chosen in a run-off today. Students will indicate their choice of one from the five remaining candidates.

Members of the court, from which the queen will be selected, and their sponsors, are: Karen Ekman, Kappa Alpha; Linda Gormley, Kappa Alpha Theta; Carolyn Reeves, Alpha Chi Omega; Joyce Story, Sigma Chi; and Peggy Traylor, Delta Chi.

Miss Story is a new member of the court, due to the withdrawal of Carol Hair. Miss Hair is unable to compete in this contest because of the rules governing the holder of the Orange Bowl Queen title.

Polling places for this contest will be located in Westcott and at the Student Center. The winner and her court will be presented at the Pow Wow Friday night.

Frosh Class Sponsors Told



Dr. Russell H. Johnson, professor of chemistry, and Dr. Vincent Thursby, professor of government at Florida State University, have been selected as sponsors of the Freshman Class.

The faculty members and their wives will serve as counselors for the class through the sophomore, junior and senior years at FSU.

The sponsors were selected by class officers and their appointment was announced today by Bob Kerrigan of Port St. Joe, Freshman Class president.

Women's Senate

Dorm Officer May Act In FSU Courts

Dormitory officers, except the president, will be allowed to serve on a court as well as hold a dormitory office, Women's Vice President Mygnon Champion announced at Women's Senate Tuesday.

This amendment to the House Council and Off Campus Council constitutions has been approved by Dean of Women Katherine Green and Dean of Students, R. E. Oglesby.

Previously, all dormitory officers were restricted from serving on a court.

Letters are being sent to all universities that have successful program studies, reports Sen. Beverly Baldwin, public relations officer of Women's Senate and chairman of the Foreign Student Relations Committee, at Tuesday meeting.

The committee is also working with sororities to establish a scholarship for "adoption" of foreign students, she said.

Other possible plans for improving foreign student relations include having a large tea where all international women could meet other women students

SG Secretary Discusses Purpose Of Student Union

By DOUG SHANK

EDITOR'S NOTE: Shank, secretary of the Campus Union, has attempted to answer in this article a few of the many questions arising from the planning of a new University Union. Further articles will be added as the plans for the Union progress.

Most Florida State University students are aware of the planning that is in progress for the construction of a new University Union, but do they know why? Do they know what effect this Union will have on them as students? Do they realize the functions of and purposes of a University Union?

First, for those who may not know, the University Union building complex will be located in the area now occupied by the Student Center parking lot and that area between the Student Center and the Business Bldg. The plans include four buildings to be constructed, incorporating the present Student Center.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The floor plans for the Union have been completed and sent along with an application for a $2,500,000 loan, to the Atlanta office of the Federal Housing and Home Finance Agency where preliminary acceptance was made. Presently, they are in the Washington, D. C. office awaiting final approval.

But why? What is a Union for? To quote from Frederick Stecker, Director of the Student Union at Ohio State University, who recently addressed the Region IV Conference of College Unions held at the University of Virginia, "The Union of today is to provide not a new, but a better form of student life. The College Union should give a sense of belonging, of identity, to all students, faculty and administration members. It should bridge the gap between curricular and extra-curricular activities. It should be supplementary to the classroom.

Campus Sing

Representatives of groups planning to enter Campus Sing will meet today at 4:30 p.m. in 205 Music Bldg.

The Twelfth Annual Campus Sing, sponsored by Phi Mu Alpha and Sigma Alpha Iota, music honoraries, will begin with preliminary judging Feb. 17. Final judging will be Feb. 18.

Groups which are eligible to participate in Campus Sing are those whose membership is restricted to men or women. Other groups and religious houses may enter non-mixed choruses.

Soapbox Race Set On Dec. 2

The Soap Box Derby, co-sponsored annually by Alpha Gamma Delta sorority and Phi Delta Theta fraternity, will be Dec. 2.

Representatives from many of the sororities and fraternities on campus met Wednesday night to draw partners for this event.

Competing this year will be Lambda Chi Alpha and Delta Gamma; Pi Kappa Phi and Zeta Tau Alpha; Pi Kappa Alpha and Sigma Kappa; Theta Chi and Delta Zeta; Kappa Sigma and Phi Mu; Alpha Kappa Psi and Kappa Kappa Gamma; Alpha Delta Pi and Delta Tau Delta. Tau Epsilon Phi and Alpha Xi Delta. Sigma Chi and Alpha Chi Omega; Delta Chi and Delta Delta Delta; Phi Kappa Tau and Alpha Phi; Sigma Phi Epsilon and Pi Beta Phi; Alpha Tau Omega and Chi Omega; Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Kappa Delta; Alpha Phi Omega and Gamma Phi Beta; Kappa Alpha and Sigma Sigma Sigma; Kappa Alpha Theta and Phi Kappa Psi; and Sigma Nu and Alpha Omicron Pi.

College Avenue, beginning at Westcott Gate, will be the site of the races. All cars will be inspected for safety by the maintenance department at the Phi Delt house on Nov. 28.

A fifteen dollar fee will be shared by each sorority-fraternity team. Part of these proceeds will go to the Campus Chest.

Senate Does Paper Work

Student Senate has been a turmoil of vigorous debate and activity during the opening months of the semester. But little of real importance had developed from all actions proposed.

The issues which have required the most time and debate have been such monumental actions as adding two cheerleaders, establishing a committee to select nominees for Who's Who, and establishing rules of procedure requiring senate attendance. At best, these have been barely significant to the Student Body as a whole. In total, possibly 100 people may have been effected by these proposals and that is a liberal estimate.

WHAT HAS SENATE been doing the rest of the time spent in session? They have passed a total of 19 resolutions and six bills, giving them an impressive sheaf of paper to show for their efforts. This amounts to great quantity of busy work.

Besides the Who's Who committee and the two cheerleaders, the Senate has passed bills to strike the Travel Service from the statutes in favor of the Alpha Phi Omega service; to establish a time to install freshman class senators, to direct members of the Elections Committee to be responsible for seeing that election regulations are carried out, and to establish a news date for the election of new senators. This latter bill has been referred to committee.

Besides the resolution attempting to force the senators to attend the meetings that comprise their jobs, the senate has passed resolution to: set up a budgetary committee, establish a committee to study summer government, and congratulate Dr. Wiley Housewright, Drs. Sidney Fox, Semor Hess, Charles Metz, and the Florida State football team.

They have also set up a committee to alter the form of the identification card to include place of residency, postponed the fall elections, endorsed splitting of the third trimester, set up a committee to get voting machines (an action which has not poloven practical in the past) set up a committee to work with the food service, asked for 1:30 a.m. permission for the Pow-Wow, amended the resolution on attendance, and added the pledge of allegiance to the flag to their agenda.

Two resolutions which are significant enough to warrant special mention are the Harvard Testing system proposal and the committee to study the Trimester reorganization. And nothing has come of either of these, though work is being done.

One proposal has been rejected this year. The Senate refused to sing "Happy Birthday" to Dick Hume and would not ask him to sing a song in return.

Granted, the Senate has a certain amount of routine work that has to be done. But the routine should not completely dominate Senate action, as it has to date.

It is now time for the Senators to climb out of their bog of routine business and initiate some positive moves to be of significant benefit to the Student Body. If Senate is going to be a meaningful body, It must have more than a sheaf of paper to show for its efforts. BCS

Three 'R's' For Profs

We would like to know what provision has been made under the coming trimester system for the convenience of our university professors. We think they deserve a pay raise without having to give up one minute of research and class preparation time.

IT LOOKS VERY much like the trimester plan is just one more device ever designed to keep quality education out of Florida. A worthwhile professor, one that is worth his pay check, with or without the increased pittance, uses his research time to keep up with changes in his field to the best of his ability. We believe it to be impossible to keep up totally in any field, especially the rapidly changing scientific fields, and a year-round teaching calendar is not going to help matters. It will merely dehydrate our courses further if there is no time for the addition or deletion of material

Our best professors keep abreast of the latest developments in the journals and periodicals published in their field. They have a prodigious amount of reading to do . . . new texts, books, magazines, newspapers and reams of specialized information dealing with their own specialties. We admit, the smart ones probably read Who's Who In The Florida Legislature too.

THE TRIMESTER plan may be the best thing that has happened to the student body at FSU in a long time, but if it has an adverse effect on the instruction that we receive, it is bad news. We hope that pay-raise-across-the-board aside, that our professors will have provision made to enable them to do the reading, research and testing that summer pay was supposedly offered them in the past.

If the professors are discouraged and discontented with the illusion of wage raise contrasted with the rubberized working year, then we may as well call the entire four year state supported college program the "Nonester" system and all of us pack up and go home. L. P.

Opera Guild A Credit

The recent production of the Opera Guild, Orpheus and Euridice is a feather in the cap of that organization and does no shame to Florida State University.

THE OPERA WAS a painless production for even the most violent music-opera elements. While we are not qualified to debate the technicalities of orchestra and the fine points of delivery from the singers, we do feel that perhaps some other activity might be whittled down to acceptable size and an increased budget given to the Opera Guild with at least one extra production a year when the trimester system goes into effect.

Of all the organizations of this campus only the Opera Guild, Foreign Film Club, Les Jongleurs and smaller organizations of a limited appeal, such as an informal poetry workshop, offer anything out of the ordinary. The Florida State University School of Music is without doubt one of the best departments on this campus. Each year it furnishes the little entertainment excitement available on this drought of interest campus. Support the FSU Opera Guild. It reflects to our credit.

Let's Get Serious

FSU Recognizes Alums Worldly Success

By GERRY DOBSON

Who is Homecoming for, anyway? Unlike most universities FSU considers the needs and wishes of the "townspeople" those who have not attended college here but still follow the football team, to be paramount. One can only guess that the reason for this is an attempt on the part of the Athletic Department to increase attendance at the games as much as possible, thereby gathering in more bucks for the Athletic program. The Alums only come back to FSU, by and large, once a year, and so can be safely sacrificed to the Almighty Dollar.

THIS YEAR RETURNING Alumni will not be able to sit in fraternity blocks. They will sit somewhere on the other side of the field with the minions from North Florida. For after all, these alums have far more alumnus with the townspeople than with their undergraduate fraternity brothers; they are paying for tickets. Alums after all, shouldn't feel that Homecoming is a time for them to return to their Alma Mater and relive their college days, yell the old cheers again, and be a part of the student crowd they remembered so fondly. They should, instead, be made to feel that the University respects and recognizes their worldly success, and therefore allows them the privilege of sitting with the paying customers.

The University was unwilling to let Alums sit in Greek blocks because those an charge fell that neo-Greek students would be squeezed into the end zones by the extra people. This appears, at least on the surface to be concern for the student, but really isn't. Those sitting in the south stand are the object of concern; the powers that be are unwilling to sacrifice the Tallahassee trade even once in the year, at Homecoming.

The solution to the "problem" should have been obvious to allow the students and Alums to sit in the south stands for the Homecoming game, and shut the Tallahassee folks in the smaller south stands.

Among the things the Administration expects are spirit from the students, and contributions from the Alumni. Do those in authority really expect to receive these things when FSU gives the students and alumni a worse deal on seating than Florida gives us? For after all, Florida has no obligation to FSU students; it merely tries to see that its alumni have the seats they want.

Review

'Orpheus' Auspicious Beginning

By DOUG SMITH

The Opera Guild's production of Gluck's Orpheus And Euridice last Thursday and Friday offered an auspicious beginning to the 1961-62 season at Florida State University.

PLAUDITS FIRST to Wiley Housewright's magnificent Stagers. Their contribution alone made the evening a memorable one. The style and balance of their choral work was well nigh impeccable, except for one soprano whose zeal, however commendable, occasionally destroyed their concerted efforts.

Modern dance lends itself admirably to Greek drama, and Nelle Bond Dickinson's Theatre Dance Group benefitted itself with distinction. Miss Dickinson is to be congratulated for her original and mood creating choreography. Special mention also to Robin Leeger whose solo work gave much pleasure

THE SHADOW OF Conductor Collins' arms on the hall's walls however impressive and entertaining during the overture, proved distracting during the rest of the evening. Perhaps a lighted baton would remedy the situation in the future.

The Orchestral sound was occasionly marred by imperfect intonation, and the ensemble was at moments unwieldly, because of unqualified manners in some of the solo vocal work. Overtaxed soprano in several areas created difficulties which the leads either could not or would not overcome.

IT IS OUR contention that romantic leads may win their loves, but rarely the audience. Accordingly, the role of Euridice, well done by the talented Ethel Donaldson, is an unrewarding part.

The scene-stealing proclivities of the pretty and gifted Patty Sue McCarty were thwarted by a small and innocuous role. Her lover-rescuer failed to project—partly due to an overload orchestra.

AN ELECTRIFIED audience gave a richly deserved ovation in the Orpheus Joy Davidson. Her gorgeous, sumptious voice filled the Auditorium to its furthermost corners as it will in time, many another house. The future portends great things for the strikingly attractive Miss Davidson.

Bravos to Bill Valle for his excellent lighting and to set designer Harlan Shaw. The work of both on the underworld scene elicited a burst of spontaneous applause from the audience. The work of Valle and Shaw shows creative imagination and perception.

RICHARD COLLINS, head of the Opera Guild, is to be commended for this production which was remarkably good. and one this university may take pride in

And to Elena Nikolaidi, whom whom a performance of this calibre could not have been possible, our sincere congratulations and thanks for an enjoyable evening.

TO THE EDITOR:

I read with interest how some of our students compete in the new intercollegiate sport" of room stuffing. At a time when Florida is deeply concerned with improving the efficiency of its education system. I cannot but raise the question whether it might not be a better use of time, money and energy of all concerned if these would-be-students instead of cramming their heads into a room would cram the room in their heads?

Witnesses Bad Taste

TO THE EDITOR:

At the conclusion of the Friday night performance of the opera, Orpheus and Euridice, never have I witnessed such bad taste as was exhibited by the various and sundry backstage directors when they all took curtain calls. It has always been my understanding that the only people that take curtain calls are the performers and the conductor.

If the backstage directors are allowed to take curtain calls, why not let the light crew and the stage crew and the costumers and make-up people and everyone else connected with the performance take them also?

Coma: The Also Ran

By LESLIE POWELL

I couldn't believe my eyes! There, on the display board where innocent freshmen were voting for homecoming queen, was Coma. And there, in the voting area, stood Coma, resplendent in orange sweater and purple coat.

THE GLITTER on her eyes appareently had fallen from the wig she sported. It shown like the big diopter lens of a camera as pretty thick. Sometimes, in moments of aldsness she streaked a finger through the eye-shadow and wrote dirty words on the Westcott ticket booth.

"Coma," I said, "What are you doing in the running for Homecoming Queen?"

"AIN'T RUNNING actually," she said, "just stuck my picture up among the other cuties and am standing by to see that the voters are aware of my ambitions." So saying, she pulled from the depths of some inner garment a giant mallet studded with nails.

"I," she said, 'pulling herself up by the brogan straps and struggling manfully not to become cup, "shall win if it kills them all," indicating with a wave of her arm a gaggling group of freshmen still lost in the bond of togetherness accumulated in room-stuffing campaigns.

"BUT COMA," I said, "You know you can't run for Homecoming Queen. You can't possibly win, for tradition has it that you run at least three years previous to actually gaining the crown. It takes that long for the voters to eradicate the competition by electing them one by one. Besides, precedent . . ."

"My dear thurs boy," Coma whirled, "precedent is like so much pie crust and made to be broken. Heed them words. They were spoken by my granny on her fifth marriage bed. She went right on breaking precedents until a tree fell on her in her eighty-seventh year. She still hated damn yankees when she died, and you know precedent was set 2,000 years ago when "Love Thy Neighbor" was big on the Red Sea Hit Parade.

THE FRESHMEN were struggling with their ballots. Some of them couldn't make the required marks with the erasered end of the special pencils. Helpful Coma stepped in and guided their hands: "Just a lil' ole' helpful touch, honey, that's all you need to lend a hand to any lil' ole' helpful cause," and as she booted them one by one around the front door, Coma thanked them profusely and vowed each and every one to come and tour the department which she headed on the sixth floor of Westcott.

"Ya'll better get off mah row, ya'll hear. I will guarantee ya'll an "A" in Voice Behavour because I see what my own big blond eyes that ya'll ain't gonna be nobody's dupes in this world, no sir-ree. I'll see class cards for all of you. We play charades every class meeting. Go on back to Kellum Hall now and practice your free-think exercises. If you're good kids, I'll help you get transferred to Tampa U."

AND WITH THE SMUG expression of one in complete control of her bloc, Coma retracted her fangs, slithered into a corner and waited for the next batch of freshmen.

"If there's anything I like about FSU," she hissed, it's that we practice what we preach."

Right Extremists Threaten University

The infectious heart-gripping fear of Communism and the ramifications of hysterical shadow boxing with anything that differs from oneself is present in this state—and present to a frightening degree.

This is graphically illustrated in the case of Thomas P. Hardeman, a Tampa University professor who was dismissed after righting pressure groups objected staunchly to his public support of the United Nations, UNESCO, foreign aid and defense expenditures.

The case was a mysterious one. Charges were hurled via letters-to-the-editor in the Tampa Tribune and in editorial comment in many of the papers of the state. Speculation was rampant and fee were sure of the facts. Tampa President David Delo said his university did not need the professor's services. He did not say why.

Now, several months later, Hardeman's account of the case has appeared in a provocative article appearing in Campus Illustrated, a magazine aimed at college students.

The article is equipped with a sensational title, and a cover designed to catch the eye. The material in the article is something of a counter-attack, but the facts presented provoke serious thought. For it is a serious situation when a man can be purged by elements who's tactues would be laughable—if they weren't so grimly effective.

The purge began with mimeographed letters sent out to members of the Florida Coalition of Patriotic Societies. These letters asked the members to write letters to Delo demanding Hardeman's dismissal. These so-called "patriots" began to shuttle away at a man who had exercised his right of freedom of speech. The Tampa administration cringed at criticism.

Seeing an opening of fear on the part of the administration, the rightists pursued the attack. Retired General Lovejoy, violent segregationist who once was defeated in his attempt to run for governor, headed the assault.

But Lovejoy, not noted for his smoothness, was not enough. Robert Welch, head of the John Birch Society, was called to mastermind the campaign and proceeded to call the plays from Boston, giving a great deal of personal attention to the project.

Delo opposed the attack on academic freedom halfheartedly. His weak support of Hardeman served only to notify the Birchers that here was a vulnerable spot. They moved on the offensive.

Midnight telephone calls bombarded the Hardeman residence. A rock was thrown through the professor's window. Nasty rumors were circulated. All the elements of intimidation were used to break the man. He continued to speak his mind.

Delo was not as resistant. Pressure was applied. Hardeman was dismissed from the Tampa faculty.

This is not the only incident that has occurred at that particular university. Several years ago another faculty member was a casualty of having too many opinions. The Tampa administration appears void of any latitude for expression It is a cloister of fear of criticism.

But criticism is not confined to the University of Tampa. Pressure has been brought to oust J. Wayne Reitz of the University of Florida for his opposing the Parent-Teacher Association to have a UN workshop on the Gainesville campus.

Florida State University administrators have been excluded from these influences, though they probably will not acknowledge that it exists.

Right-wing pressures are strong and constant in Tallahassee, as they are throughout Northwest Florida. Often such pressures are exerted through members of the state legislature from this area.

This puts Florida State in a sensitive position We are dependent on the legislature for operating funds and right-wingers hold sway with some members of this group. Yet we can not give in to this pressure or the ideals for which a university stands will be forfeited.

And maintaining the physical plant called a university is worthless if those ideals are sacrificed in this maintenance.

Without freedom of thought and expression the institution of higher learning is not a university. It is an advanced grammar school.

Insectivized America

By ALLAN DERMOTT

EDITORS NOTE: This is the third part of a five part series on Communist Ideology. The remaining parts will deal with the American character is considered with Communism.

The ultimate goal of the Communist Party is world domination. There is only one thing that stands in its way: the United States. If the Communists could not stand as a predominant world power, there would be nothing to stop them from the war machine from conquering the world. Therefore, Khrushchev has concentrated his main efforts against America. to insectivize the American people, that is, to make our people like a colony of ants or bees—just working day to day without thinking.

THE COMMUNISTS have already controlled Red China by this method, and Russia to a great degree. Realizing this, Khrushchev has tried to make it so that every Russian family can have a television set. Through television the Communists can send propaganda to the people, plus almost flawless work in television offers constant entertainment and relaxes the people to the degree that they are not as mentally alert, that is, it becomes an enjoyable habit and keeps the people's thoughts off of what the government is doing.

If the Communists could insectivize our land, even in a somewhat small degree, they could wreck our political and economic systems. A mind not alert is what is destroyed, it can not resist the destroyer.

AS GEORGE ORWELL brought out in his novel 1984, the Communists' mottos are as follows war is peace, freedom is slavery ignorance is strength, and weakness is strength to the Party, because an ignorant, weak people war machine from conquering the world. Tribe Massacres Bulldogs

By BILL CHEEK

A group of military cadets massed in Campbell Stadium Saturday to watch the Florida State Seminoles massacre the Citadel Bulldogs 44-8.

FSU wasted no time in scoring. The Semunoles recovered an Eerley Eastburn fumble at the Florida State 41 and marched for yards to paydirt. It only took seven plays to produce the first score.

Ed Feely connected on a 34 yard spiral to Jack Forehand in the end zone to tally the first touchdown. John Hartlee added the extra point between the cross bars.

The Seminoles took the ball from the Citadel at the FSU 31 and weot all the way in 11 plays.

In an all important third and ten situation. Feely nailed John McConnaughhay at the ten with a 21 yard aerial. In two plays Gene Roberts moved the ball to the six yoch line. With less than a foot to go. Feely stole across the goal line to cap a 69 yard thrust. Hartlee added his second pair of the evening to give the Seminoles a 14-0 lead.

The Citadel flexed its muscles and proved why it is the Southern Conference champ when it went 72 yards to paydirt.

Bill Whaley demonstrated why he was the nation's ninth ranking passer when he took to the air again and advanced the ball to the 14 by hitting Henry Mura with a bullet. Tommy Edwards was halted at the one-foot line with another Whaley pass. The Citadel's only touchdown came as Whaley plunged over the goal line.

The Bulldogs faked an extra point kick and Whaley the holder became Whaley the passer. Edwards caught the missle to tally up 14-8 on the score board.

Moving up field 46 yards in 12 plays produced another Florida State score. Marion Roberts took a Feely pass and raced 22 yards into the end zone Trying for a two-point conversion. Feely's run failed.

Feely ran wild and moved the ball to the Citadel 18. Hartlee entered the game and placed a 30 yard field goal between the posts giving FSU a 23-8 half time lead.

The Seminoles marched down field in 13 plays with the second half kickoff for their fourth touchdown. A Feely pass to Gene Roberts in the end zone climaxed the 70 yard drive. The attempt at the extra point failed, advancing the Seminole lead 29-8.

Shortly, Florida State claimed its fifth touchdown. Larry Brinkley charged to the two on an 11 yard gain. Andrews dove off tackle for the score Doug Messer added the pat for a 36-8 lead early in the fourth quarter.

The Seminoles put the finishing touch to the contest with a one-yard plunge by Andrews. Trancygier wrapped the game up with a two point pass to Ken Runsom.

The Citadel head mentor Eddie Teague stated, "I make no alibi for the outcome. FSU deserved Ed to win."

Chilly Fans Watch Frosh Clinch Win

By SHIRLEY HARDISON
Flambeau Sports Wriser

Before a crowd of 2,500 chilly football fans, the freshmen Seminoles of Florida State University clinched their last victory of the season over the Furmao Paladins 26-3.

Brownie Cordell, Furman's kicking specialist, attempted a field goal from the 12-yard line and put the Paladins ahead 3-0 with 13:40 left in the second quarter.

"We cancelled the game with FL Benning's football team mainly because of the conflicton with the Thanksgiving holidays. We are allowing the boys to go home on the condition that their grades will be improved in the second half of the first semester," stated Coach Charlie LaPradd. Coach LaPradd was speaking in reference to the cancellation made by the Florida State freshmen team with FL Benning's football squad earlier this week.

Maury Bibeot, of Cincinnati, O., intercepted a Furman pass on the 46 and from there the half was Florida State's Bibent returned the ball to the 22 but officials moved the ball back for a clipping penalty. Fate intervened again, as the Paladins received a 5-yard penalty, then Ed Loveless moved the ball five more yards. Earl Hawkins, George L'Alessandro, and Loveless combined efforts to move the ball down to the three. Loveless was thrown for a loss however and the Paladins took over after a Loveless pass to Ralph Norman was incomplete.

Exhibiting form as he showed in the Miami game, Winfred Bailey intercepted a pass at midfield After two plays, quarterback Steve Tenni threw a 14-yard pass to Tom West. On the next play, Fred Bibenskoff caught a long one behind the Furman secondary to score the first TD of the night. Phil Spooner kicked the extra point, and the Seminoles had begun their rarding party, 7-3, at intermission.

The second half of the ball game FSU scored six touchdowns, two of them called back on penalties. A drive by the young Paladins was snuffed out at the seven and on the punt, the snap from center came too high to Rivera. The freshmen Seminoles added two points to their score.

Helped by a recovered fumble by Jerry McDaniel, the Florida State men were once again on the move. Steady pass gains brought the ball to the 10-yard line where Ed Pritchett passed to Charles Story in the end zone. Spooner's kick was no good but the Seminoles had begun their attack, leading now, 15-3.

Early in the final quarter, Tenni pitched to Jim Loflin, who went into the end zone This was the first of two which the officials called back against the Seminoles. With 14 10 left in the period, a Tenni-Bibenskoff lateral struck paydirt, Spooner converted and the score touched 22-3.

Two plays later Bibenkoff charged into King, knocking the ball from the carrier's hands; then he fell on the loose ball. On the Furman 10 Pritchell rolled out to his right, into the end zone. Spooner faked a kick, and Pritchett, who was acting as holder, flew around the right end for another two points. The Seminoles were leading 30-3.

The last score of the game was made by Hawkins, on a 13-yard dash. Norman, Loveless and Hawkins set up the score, moving the ball from mid-field. Spooner's last kick of the night was mide, but only 2-5 remained in the game.

MAURY BIBENT RETURNS AN INTERCEPTION OF A FURMAN pass to the 22 yard line, setting up one of five touchdowns made by the Baby Seminoles Nov. 8.

Mathematics-Meteorlogy Dedication Will Be Tonight

Florida State University's new Mathematics - Meteorology Bldg. will be dedicated in a special ceremony at 7:30 tonight. All members of the faculty, administration and student body are invited.

The ceremony coincides with a meeting of the American Meteorological Society which will be in progress then and Dr. Thomas F. Malone of Travelers Insurance Company of Hartford, president of the society, will be the principal speaker.

Recently completed at a cost of $974,800, the building has 65,000 square feet of floor space, 17 classrooms and six research laboratories. Besides the Meteorology and Mathematics Depts. it houses the new Statistics Dept. and the Computing Center.

The Computing Center, with offices on the first floor, operates FSU's new IBM 709 computer, valued at $1,800,000 and housed in the basement of the building. The machine, one of only a few of the sort installed in universities over the country, is capable of high-speed computations and is used by numerous natural and social science researchers at the university.

The Meteorology Dept., which awarded 11 per cent of the master's degrees and five per cent of the doctorates in meteorology in the country in 1960, is one of two among the 20 meteorology departments in the country housed in a separate new building. The other is at U.C.L.A.

University Vice-President Dr. Milton W. Carothers will preside at the dedicatory ceremonies and Secretary of State Tom Adams will officially present the building. Dr. J. Broward Culpepper, executive director of the Board of Control, will accept for the Board and Dr. Carothers for the university. The invocation and benediction will be by the Rev. Davis Thomas, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church. Tours of the building will follow the dedication.

The Meteorological Society meeting, today through Thursday, will bring together about 200 meteorologists. About 50 scientific papers will be read and U. S. Sen. Spessard Holland will address the group at a banquet tomorrow night.

Reservation Closes For Winter Months

By MARTHA ROBERTS
Flambeau Feature Writer

Fall with its cooling weather will soon become ancient history with the beginnings of winter forcing itself upon the hills of Tallahassee. As students on the Florida State University campus yield to winter's dreariness, they seem to develop a "let's get away from it all" attitude.

Although the University cannot provide the sunshine, sand and warm ocean water of Southern Florida, the FSU Reservation offers many recreational facilities at only a five-mile distance from the campus.

The facilities of the Reservation are for campus-wide use except over the Christmas holidays and only the waterfront area is closed during the winter.

CAMP FLASTOCONO

The university-owned camp began in the 1930's at Florida State College for Women and was called Camp Flastocono. Formerly used only on weekends, the camp has since doubled its role providing a combination lounging and recreation area equipped with many outdoor sports. There is a boathouse roof providing an ideal spot for dances plus barbecue and picnic facilities.

According to Mrs. Ruth DeKalb, who has served as Resident Director for the past ten years, there are great possibilities of enlargement not in area, but in use of the camp. She stated that the student participation is not as complete in the fall and winter months as in the summer because of the many campus activities. However throughout the fall and spring the camp houses various retreats, conferences and social affairs in addition. University courses in camping, sailing and canoeing are conducted at the Reservation.

Mrs. DeKalb has noticed that the Reservation offers a new experience in campus life for the foreign students. It gives them a chance to relax and enjoy the beauty of nature. They are able to prepare their native dishes using the kitchen and dining equipment available in the Camp houses.

The FSU Reservation provides an almost year round recreation and relaxation spot for students, faculty and visitors as well.

DAY STUDENTS

A bill to allow day students to spend the night as guests in a residence hall, sorority house or foundation house at any time during the week or weekend was introduced by Sen. Gene Boyd

The bill amends Chapter 1, Part H, Section four of Knowledge for College, which currently reads A guest may be entertained on Friday and or Saturday night only.

If the proposed amendment is passed the section would read: A non-student guest may be entertained on Friday and or Saturday night only.

The bill would also delete Section Five of the same chapter, which reads: Guests who are not students at FSU may be invited at a rate of no more than one guest per month on the average Day student women may be invited on any weekend

The bill was referred to committee for study

Also referred to committee was Sen. Pat Doomar's bill, which clarifies a section of Knowledge for College, concerning the admission of women students in dormitory doors other than front doors after 6:30 p.m.

Appointments to standing committees were announced by Miss Champion at the meeting

The Union should provide a place for activity, a place for expression, a place for educational, social and cultural understanding."

NEW DEMANDS

This is precisely the direction in which all of the planning on FSU's Union has been directed. As the University grows and expands, there is found a greater need for improvements in its various facilities to meet the demands of the increasing enrollment. In part, the Union shall meet these demands. The new University Union will provide increased and more adequate eating facilities; it will have new and better recreational facilities; it will be the focal point of all student life.

Within the Union will be a browsing library, music listening room, quiet rooms, art exhibits, bowling alleys, barber shops, clothing stores, facilities for the various plays and productions, snack bars, dining halls, conference rooms and innumerable other facilities. Our new University Union will literally be the recreational, social, and cultural center of the campus.

COMMON GROUND

The Union complex is to be an area of common interest, one in which all minds may meet. It will serve as common grounds where all students, including foreign students and married students, instructors, professors, Doctors and Deans may come as individuals seeking knowledge, recreation, and fulfillment of personal interests.

As its name implies, the new University Union will provide a means of bringing together, in union, the families of the University community.

Baking Seminar

A Baking Industry Seminar will be held tomorrow in room 10, Dining Hall, at 7:15 p.m. The topic will be Research and Personnel Management in Coalmeatal Baking Co. Speakers will be Dr. R. H. Colton, director of research, and R. R. Doonan, director of personnel.

FLORIDA STATE CHEERleader. Linda Dueck, displays Seminole spirit as she leads loyal fans in an optimistic cheer to urge the team on to victory. The enthusiasm was not in vain for the Seminoles trounced the Citadel Bulldogs 44-8. Miss Dueck is a sophomore and one of the cheerleaders chosen for the squad this fall.

Wagner Tickets Are Available

Tickets for the Roger Wagner Chorale to be presented at Florida State University Nov. 28 and 29 are now on sale at the Westcott Ticket Office.

Student tickets are available on presentation of an I. D. card and a signed IBM card. Adult tickets are $3.50

The Chorale will present the same program both nights at 8:15 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium.

Salli Terri, a mezzo-soprano will be the soloist with Roger Wagner conducting

The Chorale will sung as the second Artist Series production this year.

The program includes music from the Renaissance, the Classic, Romantic, Modern and French Impressionistic Periods as well as English, French and American folk songs and Negro spirituals.

Vol. XLVIII, No. 19 Published By The Students Of Florida State University Tallahassee, November 17, 1961

Parade Kicks Off Homecoming, 3:30

Amid the strutting of many marching units and the drumming of bands, Florida State University Homecoming 1961 will get off to its official start at 3:30 this afternoon.

The official parade route will begin at Westcott, continue down College Ave., and terminate at Monroe St.

REVIEWING STAND

The reviewing stand will be directly in front of the Capitol Bldg. Before the parade officially begins, judges will examine all floats and parade entries. They will make their final judgement after all the entries pass the reviewing stand. The judges hope to announce the winning floats immediately after the parade's conclusion.

Official judges this year include Dr Richard Baker of the School of Business; the Rev John Perry, University Chaplain; George Milton, Anthropology and the Museum curtier; and Mrs Stripling, amateur artist.

OFFICIAL CARS

Several official cars, including those of President Gordon Black-well, Governor C Farris Bryant, and other dignitaries including the Board of Control will lead the parade. Parade Marshall, Dr. Gregory Pfeiffer will also be at the official head of the Homecoming Parade.

Members of the honor class of '62 will also ride in the parade. Duncan Moore, student co-chairman of the parade, said presently there are 27 units entered. However, he explained that last minute entries are accepted.

Most floats entered are sponsored by fraternities, sororities and honorary groups.

Bands in this years parade are Florida High, Leon High, Cobb Jr High, Augusta Raa Jr. High., Monticello Jr. High and the FSU's Marching Chiefs.

Precision marching routines will be displayed by Angle Flight and Pershing Rifles. Both units will perform in front of the reviewing stand.

In case of rain, Moore explained that a special "rainy day committee," will meet and decide whether or not the parade should proceed. Moore and his co-chairman Patty Burke are opitimistic since an FSU Homecoming parade has never been rained out.

If it should rain, however, the parade will be postponed until tomorrow morning at nine.

Pow Wow Reclaims Pep As Main Theme

By SHARON GAUSE
Assistant News Editor

The Pow Wow takes on a different slant tonight as the emphasis of the program is returned to pep.

The production, which will begin promptly at 8:30 p.m. in Campbell Stadium, has undergone several revisions on the traditional plan used in the past.

NO THEATRICS

"Students are not to come expecting a theatrical production. This is a pep rally," reports Shannen Talbert, student co-chairman for the program. The committee has done away with class skits, used previously. This year, the show is directed toward lifting school spirit to a "Homecoming peak" rather than involving the drama and theatrics of a spectacular.

They have not, however, sacrificed entertainment for the sake of change.

The Pow Wow Committee has set up four standards for the production. The rally is first, for the football team; second, for the queen and her court; third, for the students; and finally for the faculty, townspeople and alumni.

WOMEN'S GLEE CLUB

The Women's Glee Club will open the Pow Wow, leading the singing of the Alma Mater.

John Morrisey and Ann Turner will be the student master and mistress of ceremonies.

Highlights of the hour and a half long program will include entertainment by the Marching Chiefs, Mayorettes, and the Garnet and Gold Girls; the introduction of the Seminole football team and a word from their coach, Bill Peterson; as well as drilling by Angel Flight and the Army and Air Force HOTC drill teams.

HOMECOMING QUEEN

The climax of the evening will be the crowning of the 1961 Homecoming Queen who will reign over all of the festivities.

Standing in midfield, the five members of the Court will hear the announcement of the Queen after a red carpet, 48 inches wide and 10½ feet long, has been unrolled from a platform in front of the west stands.

The captain of the football team will escort her down the red carpet to the west stands platform, where she will be crowned by the 1960 queen, Charlotte Goodman.

Additional entertainment is planned but is not to be announced until the show. The Cheerleading Squad and Sammy

Flags, House Set Party Atmosphere

A southern mansion and a huge Confederate flag will provide atmosphere for the annual Homecoming Dance tomorrow night at Tully Gymnasium.

Theme of the dance which will last from 9 p. m. to 1 a. m. is "Dixie Fun in '61."

Women attending the dance should wear formals or dressy cocktail dresses, and appropriate attire for men is dinner jackets or dark suits and ties. Late permission until 1:30 a. m. has been granted to all University women for the dance.

"NIGHT TRAIN"

Buddy Morrow and his "Night Train" Orchestra will play for the formal dance.

Tickets for the dance are $3 per couple and may be obtained at Westcott Ticket Office or at the door.

The Limeliters, RCA Victor recording artists, will entertain at the dance after the Homecoming Queen and her court are presented at 11 p. m.

The football team and their dates will be special guests for the affair, and will be seated in a specially reserved section with the dance's chaperones.

The Morrow orchestra's recordings of "Night Train," "One Mint Julep," and "I Don't Know"; and their albums "Impact," "The Big Beat," and "Dancing Tonight to Morrow," have beeo high on the best seller lists.

The band's repertoire embraces the whole spectrum of popular music from early dixieland, rhythm and blues, and intricate ballads to full progressive jazz interpretations.

TROMBONIST

During Marrow's varied career as a musician the trombonist was featured with the orchestras of Paul Whiteman, Tommy Dorsey, Artie Shaw and Jimmy Dorsey.

Show To Be Held Twice

RCA Victor recording artists, The Limeliters, singer-comedienne, Isobel Robins, and night club comic, Adam Keefe, will present the Homecoming show tomorrow night in Westcott Auditorium.

The two shows will begin at 7 and 9 p.m. Tickets for these programs, are on sale at the ticket office in Westcott. They are $2 for students and $2.50 for adults.

The Limeliters, who will also entertain at the Homecoming Dance, are known throughout the country for their blend of vocal and instrumental folk music combined with a type of comedy which they choose to call "institutional satire".

They recently recorded "Hey Li Lee Li Lee," a "group participation" song in which the audience is invited to contribute verses.

Louis Gottlieb is bassist and conversation spokesman for the trio. His singing companions are Alex Hamsley, who alternates between the banjo and the guitar, and Glenn Yarbrough, tenor, and solo voice for the group.

The Limeliters have appeared on the Ed Sullivan Show, the Dinah Shore Chevy Show, as well as in concerts with Chris Connor, George Shearing and Shelley Berman.

Keefe, a specialist in skits about old movies and "caricatures" of movie stars, is the first comic to reach the big-time nightclub circuit via the Greenwich Village coffeehouses.

He uses a technique which depends heavily on the visual, applying a combination of wild pantomime, facial contortion, double-talk, vocal sound effects and rapid - semi - stream - of - consciousness comment to such subjects as "Transylvania Avenue" (or Horror-Movie Row on Forty-second Street).

Miss Robins, a petite blonde songstress, began in the entertainment field as a night club "stool-singer." She now specializes in comic song material, pseudo-blues and burlesques on college songs are also often part of her act.

War Drums Beat Tonight

The war drums will beat tonight, literally — as students "do their dardest" to build that Seminole spirit.

As fireworks close the Pow Wow program, some diligent and dedicated students will pick up the "Seminole Spirit" from the student Center, with kettle drums and an amplifying system. They will "beat it out for victory" continually from 10 p. m. tonight until noon tomorrow.

The Pow Wow committee, believing that still more could be done to get into the real Homecoming mood, has inaugurated this plan to be coordinated with tonight's program.

Alumni Registration Continues Tonight

"Should auld acquaintance be forgot" they may be renewed during Florida State University's Homecoming festivities this weekend.

Alumni registration begun this morning at 9 a. m. in Longmire and will continue all day until 9 p. m. Registration will be open again tomorrow from 8 a. m. until noon. Open house will be held and refreshments served all during registration.

The first 100 alumnae from Florida State College for Women to register will receive an alumni's state chip remnants of the "Florida State College for Women" sign recently chiseled from above the front door of Westcott.

Alumni are expected to flood the campus as the weekend gets underway, according to Miss Rema Ratcliff of the Alumni Office Advance. Reservations this year are well above last year's total of over 4,000, she said.

The weekend will be packed with activities for the alumni, as well as students, to attend including the parade, banquet, Pow Wow, barbecue, Westcott show and dance.

FOR ALUMNI

In addition to these, activities planned exclusively for alumni and their guests are:

Breakfast at 8:30 a.m. tomorrow in the FSU Suwannee Room;

Business meeting, immediately following the breakfast;

Lectures by Dr N E. La Seur, Dr Wiley L. Housewright, and Dr. Anna Forbes Liddell, in Longmire from 10:15-11:15 a. m.;

Faculty-alumni reception, 5 to 6 p. m. in Longmire; and Leon County Alumni Club party, 6 to 7 p. m. at the Holiday Inn.

Several classes will have reunions this year during Homecoming. The oldest of these, the class of 1911, was the first to be graduated in Westcott Bldg.

Barbecue

Over 2,000 people are expected for the annual Homecoming barbecue, at noon tomorrow in Tully Gymnasium.

This lunch, prepared by school officials and local businessmen, is in honor of Florida State University alumni and faculty members.

Included in the menu for the barbecue will be brunswick stew, barbecued beef and pork, potato salad, rolls, beverages, cake and ice cream.

According to R. K. Shaw, director of the barbecue, tickets may be obtained at the Alumni Office in Longmire, or at the barbecue area, for $1.50 per person.

Let's Have Music—Chiefs Are Set:

(See Page 3, Section 1)

Gov. Bryant Is Speaker For Banquet

Governor C. Farris Bryant will make the principal address at Florida State University's Homecoming Banquet tonight.

The Suwannee Room will open at 5:40 p. m. for the diners, according to Mrs. Sara K. Srygley, banquet chairman, and service will start at 6 p. m. Tickets are available at the Alumni Office at $2.25 per person.

Governor Bryant will be introduced by FSU President Gordon W. Blackwell. On the same occasion at Homecoming in 1956, Bryant received an honorary membership award of Gold Key, men's honorary. Gold Key will award two such honorary memberships at this banquet, one to a faculty member and one to a man in public life.

Garnet Key, the organization for women, will award an honorary membership to a woman faculty member.

Mrs. Selwyn Chalker of Jacksonville, permanent president of the class of 1912, will be toastmistress. FSU Chaplain John J. Carey will give the invocation and Fred Drake Jr., president of the Alumni Association, will extend greetings and introduce the 12 classes holding reunions at this Homecoming.

Special recognition will this year be given to all pre-1908 local graduates and a special table will be prepared for them at the banquet. They will be guests of the Alumni Association.

UF Goal Post Trophy Is Given To FSU

Students from Florida State University who took part in the fifth quarter exercises on Florida Field after the FSU-University of Florida game unknowingly had a hand in the beginning of a tradition which is being established between the rival schools.

Bruce Bullock, UF student body president appointed a committee with George Mustakas as chairman to make a "trophy" from sections of the goal post. The "trophy" will be presented to FSU Student Body President Bobby Byrd during the half-time activities at the Homecoming Game tomorrow.

The "trophy" is composed of a section of the goal post which the FSU students tore down after the game, mounted on a mahogany back-board. The colors of UF and FSU are painted on the board and the score of this year's game is engraved with the date.

Each year the "trophy" will be taken to Florida Field for the game. It will be presented at the close of the game to the winning school who will keep it in their possession until the following year. Each successive year the score will be engraved on the board.

'Big Four' In Student Government Reveal Personalities, Interests, Hobbies

By MILA ARNOLD
Flambeau Staff Writer

Students of this and other universities frequently are familiar with only the campaign qualifications of their leaders, if they know that much about them. Mygnon Champion, Ken Van Assenderp, Carl Kuttler and Bobby Byrd hold the top Student Government positions on this campus, but are involved in other activities as well as representing Florida State University.

MYGNON CHAMPION

Mygnon Champion is Women's Vice President and President of Women's Senate. She serves the student body by presiding over Women's Senate and by serving as representative to the administration.

Mygnon can trace her interest in government and politics back to her early childhood, when she was influenced by her father, an avid political observer. Mygnon attended all the local elections and rallies, eagerly listening to remarks and awaiting returns.

FOUR YEARS

Now a senior, Mygnon began her Student Government career at FSU as senator from Jennie Murphree. After four years of Senate service, she has reached a position of great responsibility. She stated that the greatest satisfaction of her job comes when she and others have worked hard on a particular bill, and the bill passes.

Mygnon, a government major feels that her participation in Student Government is of tremendous educational value. She said that it has given her a frame of reference that supplements her government courses.

Many other honors have come to Mygnon during her college career. She is president of the political science honorary, Pi Sigma Alpha. She is a member of Garnet Key, Mortar Board, Alpha Lambda Delta scholastic honorary and the Government Honors Program. She received the Outstanding Senator plaque for two consecutive years. She has been a columnist and summer Associate Editor-in-Chief of the Flambeau.

NEWSPAPER WORK

One of Mygnon's favorite sidelines has been writing, and she served as editor of The Statesman, the Student Government publication. At the present time she has a novel in progress and has worked for the Leesburg Daily Commercial, a newspaper which has won the national journalism award for public service.

During summer vacations Mygnon has worked as a camp counselor and as a writer for the news bureau of the Development Commission.

Mygnon's ambition is to be successful in either public administration or in journalism as a political reporter. She has applied for a Woodrow Wilson Fellowship and if she wins this, will be attending graduate school rather than entering a profession directly upon graduation.

Mygnon concluded that one basic purpose of a college education is to help the student learn to think and express himself. She feels that our system somewhat inhibits this. She further feels that her greatest responsibility to the student body is to help the student gain a greater degree of freedom of expression.

JUNIOR TRANSFER

The position of Men's Vice President and president of Men's Senate is held by Carl Kuttler, who transferred to Florida State last year from St. Petersburg Junior College.

Kuttler stated that the most important function of his office is to serve as an exemplary senator, member of the Senate and to stress academic achievements.

Kuttler, a Lambda Chi Alpha, who transferred to FSU as a junior college he attended previously and has taken a great interest in Student Government here. Besides his major office as Men's Vice President, he is the chairman of several committees, has been a Day Student Senator, has served for two years as host for Florida legislators and is presently the Vice Chairman of the Board of Directors of Student Enterprises.

SCHOLARSHIP RECIPIENT

Kuttler is the recipient of two scholarships, a new member of Gold Key and a member of Dr. Blackwell's Advisory Committee as well. His interest in Student Government here, he said, has carried over as a continuation of his work in junior college.

Feeling that you have been able to help someone in some small way" is the most rewarding thing about Student Government. Kuttler said. He added that there is self-satisfaction, too, in learning to budget time and work under pressure. This, he said, will not only make a better person, but will prepare a person for the inter-connected worlds of business and politics.

Kuttler stated that perhaps the most significant and unusual experience in his student government background was his extensive traveling over the United States. He estimates that he has traveled some 40,000 miles and addressed approximately 35,000 people as a delegate to various gatherings.

GOVERNMENT OPERATION

Kuttler was one of two Florida men selected to spend part of a summer in Washington, D. C., watching the government in operation. He was impressed and influenced and made lifelong friendships, he said. In fact, he plans to go to Washington during the Thanksgiving vacation, making a special visit to see the Assistant Director of the Library of Congress, one of his many Washington friends.

Kuttler selected business administration and government as his major field of interest. His greatest simple ambition for the near future is to graduate with academic honors from a good law school.

He concluded with a "plug" for transfer students, saying that they have a lot to offer in Student Government and in other areas, because they bring in new ideas. He said that he feels that student Government should take a more active interest in them and that more attention should be given them from the student body.

FACILITATE PROCEDURES

Ken Van Assenderp serves the student body in the Senate the major duty as President of Senate is to facilitate as effective senatorial meetings and procedures as possible. He also must serve as an impartial decision maker when the need arises. In the role of a co-ordinator it is his duty to see that the members of the student body are represented to the other members of student Government.

Van Assenderp's long list of achievements since coming to Florida State include membership in Alpha Council during his sophomore year, the Lobby Committee for two years (chairman for the second year), Gold Key, the Board of Directors of Student Enterprises and various Student Government committees and chairmanships.

PROMINENT UNIVERSITY

Van Assenderp's interest in Student Government seems back in his primary interest in FSU. He has lived in Tallahassee for several years and would like to see this university take a place of prominence in the state and nation in the very near future. Because of this interest, he joined the Lobby Committee and gradually, through service, reached the core of FSU Student Government.

Van Assenderp stated that perhaps the most rewarding thing about Student Government is getting to meet and know many people and learning to give and take with them in the interest of moving forward through co-operation. He also feels that experience of this type gives a person a deeper appreciation of the meaning of mature acceptance of responsibility.

Besides his interest in Student Government, Van Assenderp is very active in the Baptist Student Union, is a member of the University Singers, and loves outdoor sports of all types. One area that interests him is real citizenship and how seriously American people take it. He is interested, too, in the seriousness of moral values and judgments. One can learn a lot about how such things as these are related in our campus community in working with Student Government, he added.

FOREIGN SERVICE

Van Assenderp's major is political science. He is also interested in history as it relates to his field. His greatest ambition in life, he said, is to fulfill these interests successfully. He could do this along many different avenues of service, he added.

CARL KUTTLER

One of the most interesting and influential facets in the life of the student body vice president is his experience in traveling all around the world. Van Assenderp stressed that he was of a very young age when he traveled so extensively with his parents. He of course could not comprehend all the political ramifications at the time, but he did gain a deep insight into the feelings, personalities, and family situations of the people in the countries where he lived, he stated.

The Van Assenderp family did not travel for mere tourist excursions, but lived with the people and gained a personal understanding of them. All this was brought about by his father's position as a Dutch Colonial Administrator during the last vestiges of colonialism.

Van Assenderp was born in Parmaribo, the capital of Surinam in South America. By the time of this second birthday he had come for the first time to the United States.

MAJOR CITIES

For several years after that, his travelings encircled the globe.

He went first to Australia and a little town called Surface of Paradise in the Dutch East Indies, the Van Assenderp family made their home in Jakarta, Java. It was here that Ken saw the destruction and terrible effects of the war. The family next went to Holland, stopping along the way in some of the major cities of India and Europe.

Upon leaving Holland, they travelled to the United States by way of Mexico. The colonial company for which he worked having been dissolved, Dr. Van Assenderp became a professor at Tulane University in New Orleans. After teaching there for two years Dr. Van Assenderp brought his family to Tallahassee where he became a professor of political science at Florida State University. He taught here until his death in 1958. Van Assenderp of course, was greatly influenced by his father and is dedicated to the ideals he put into practice in his life.

POLITICAL EXPERIENCES

Since his major interests and background revolve around political and governmental experiences, he concluded that he felt his greatest responsibility to the student body was to be continually aware of their feelings, interpretations, and aspirations, as he, along with other members of Student Government, deals with the various situations they confront.

It is also his responsibility, he added, to always have as keen appreciation of their ideas and treat relation to the future of FSU as possible and to remain constantly open to their suggestions.

HIGHEST OFFICE

Student Body President Bobby Byrd is the holder of the highest office available to any student at FSU. His most important function in this office is to be responsible for the organization known as Student Government, in all its facets and duties. Byrd stated that he feels personally responsible when anything goes wrong in any department of this organization and he feels that student concensus does place this responsibility upon the holder of this office whether it is part of their designated duty or not.

Like the other Student Government leaders on our campus, Byrd has a long list of activities and achievements both in Student Government and on other areas. He is the present vice president of his fraternity, Kappa Alpha, and Chairman of Student Enterprises. He was a senator during his freshman and sophomore years and vice president of the student body last year. Added to these honors are various chairmanships, committee conventions and conferences, and legislative actions in which he has been very active.

He was president of Alpha Council last year has spent three years in the Speaker's Bureau and on the Lobby Committee, and is active in the Baptist Student Union. He is also an honorary member of the Tallahassee Exchange Club.

ATTRACT ATHLETES

Other than his Student Government interest, Byrd said, he enjoys working with his fraternity, his church, and the athletic department of the University. He has always liked sports of all kinds, and since he is not in them competively on campus, he has spent a lot of time working with the various coaches in trying to attract star athletes to FSU and to give the school national prominence.

Byrd is from a small town in South Carolina, a town smaller in population than the University. It was the tremendous opportunity afforded by Student Government here that first impressed him. After reading the Student Government publication presented to all freshmen, he decided to run for freshman class senator. He won, and has been vitally interested and involved in Student Government ever since.

Byrd said that the most enjoyable experience in working closely with Student Government is meeting "many wonderful people." He also feels that his offices have given him invaluable experience in having to make responsible, clear - cut decisions. Through decision making and the necessary insight it takes to make them, Byrd feels that his work with Student Government has helped him to do a lot of growing up and preparing for the future.

STUDENT POLITICS

Byrd entered the University as an advertising major, but changed to studying pre-law and government as a result of his work and interest in student politics. Of great influence upon his decision to go into government was the advice and consultation of Dr. Juanita Gibson, who at the time was the head of the Dept. of Personnel Administration, he said.

During his summers away from college, Byrd has at one time owned his own gas station and has worked as a railroad foreman. He spent last summer with the U. S. Marine Corps, he said, and added that he will be commissioned a Second Lieutenant after the Platoon Leaders class program in July. He is undecided about whether to go on into law school or to complete his military obligation upon graduation.

Byrd's stated main goal in life is to "sometime, somewhere accomplish something that will leave the world just a little better" because of the personal satisfaction that comes from having done something worthwhile.

Byrd feels that the greatest responsibility he has as president

LUCKY STRIKE presents:

LUCKY PUFFERS "HOMECOMING WEEKEND"

"Boy, is this place packed!"

"Wow! Is the team ever fired up for this game!"

"Him? Why, that's Col. Smythe-Hubertt, the oldest living graduate."

"Get on the float committee, you said... nothing to it, you said... a breeze, you said..."

WHAT DOES AN OLD GRAD LIKE BEST ABOUT HOMECOMING? Next to shaking hands, he likes reminiscing. About fraternity parties, girls, sorority parties, girls, off-campus parties, girls—and, of course, about how great cigarettes used to taste. Fortunately for you, Luckies still do taste great. (So great that college students smoke more of them than any other regular cigarette.) Which shows that the important things in college life stay the same. Parties. Girls. Luckies.

CHANGE TO LUCKIES and get some taste for a change!

170 Marching Chiefs Give 'Sound Of Music' Show

* * * *

The Marching Chiefs will be high-stepping to the "Sound of Music" during half-time tomorrow afternoon, as Florida State University clashes with Mississippi Southern at Homecoming.

The Chiefs, 170-strong, will be led by drum major Bennett Shelfer and directed by Dr. Manley R. Whitcomb. Their first formation will be entitled "Sound of Music," a salute to the School of Music. "Do Re Mi," a majorette routine in recognition of music education, will be followed by a solo duet by the Garnet and Gold Girls, Janice Freeman and Beverly Calvert to Rachmaninoff's "Second Piano Concerto."

MUSICAL SALUTE

After a salute to the musical organizations, the Chiefs will form a fan to the strains of "One Fine Day" as they salute the opera. The FSU "Fight Song" and the "Hymn to the Garnet and Gold" will be climaxed by the Queen's fanfare. "Crown Imperial" and the introduction of the 1961 Homecoming Queen.

Dr. Whitcomb, who has directed the Marching Chiefs since 1953, was band director at Ohio State University for 20 years before that time. He is aided by assistant director Robert Braunagel and musical arranger Charles Carter.

Practice and more practice are familiar words to band members. Under a unique training program, student band leaders convene each year a week before orientation to begin preparations for the school year. Then these "veterans" help by giving individual aid to other students under their direction.

PRACTICE HOURS

Many hours are spent in developing the military precision and deft, light handling of musical themes that seem so effortless on the football field. The week before Homecoming is especially busy for members of the Marching Chiefs.

In addition to the half-time show at Saturday's game, the Chiefs are featured in Friday's parade and the Pow Wow.

sicians in Europe for generations he was given a start toward a music career at an early age when he was given a trombone for his twelfth birthday.

By the time he was thirteen, he was already playing with high school dance groups.

Two years later, the Yale Collegians, a band composed of students at the college, were short a trombonist and sent out a call for local musicians. They selected Buddy, and at fifteen, he became the youngest member of the group, touring the East coast and playing at college dances and parties.

JULLIARD SCHOOL

Morrow studied at the Julliard School of Music on a scholarship during the depression and played with dance band groups at night to supplement the scholarship. When he found that he was unable to keep up with school and work, he dropped out to become a professional musician.

One night he was sitting in on a jam session with some friends when Bunny Berrigan, heard him and recommended the young musician to Artie Shaw who hired him for his newly formed orchestra. Later he joined Eddie Duchin and then Paul Whiteman.

The next step for the young musician was with Tommy Dorsey's orchestra. After touring with Dorsey, he joined the Columbia Broadcasting System as a staff musician, a job that gave him time to free-lance in the recording, radio, and infant television industries.

During that period he played in a symphony orchestra conducted by Arturo Toscanini.

After serving in the Navy in the war, he went back into radio work for a short time before joining Jimmy Dorsey's orchestra as a featured trombonist. He got his first chance at directing a band when Jimmy Dorsey took sick, and Morrow filled in for him for a little while.

SIGNED BY VICTOR

In 1950 RCA Victor signed him to form an orchestra and record under his own name. He began experimenting with style and instrumentation and after a year decided to take the band on the road. Their first engagement was at Atlantic City's Steel Pier in August, 1951, followed by an extensive one-nighter tour. However, it soon became apparent that their recording successes had not yet filtered down to the ballroom patrons, for box office grosses on their tour were for the most part poor.

It was during this cross-country trek that the band played an engagement in Detroit where Morrow came across "Night Train," which the band recorded for RCA Victor. This recording brought the turning point in the fortunes of the band.

The success of "Night Train" was followed by a string of hit records that included "One Mint Julep", "I Don't Know", and "Hey, Mrs. James."

Dean Grants Late Nights

Dean of Women Katherine Warren has given permission to all women students of Florida State University to stay out until 1:30 a. m. both Friday and Saturday nights.

This applies to all women students — even those not attending the dance.

Due to the two nights of late permission the women's dormitories will not have office hours on Sunday and the sorority houses can not entertain guests Sunday evening. This is to enable the housemothers to get some rest, said Miss Warren.

Mums To Be Sold

The Women's Physical Education Association will be selling mums to raise money for the Katherine Montgomery Scholarship Fund today and tomorrow.

Students wishing to purchase a flower can do so at Longmire, the Suwannee room, Westcott, the Student Center, Montgomery Gym, Tully Gym and the Delta Tau Delta house. Students will be at these places from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. today and from 8 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. tomorrow.

...Growing with the Future

'A Cheerleader Is A Sometime Thing'

A whirling, twirling, laughing, sobbing, tense, emotion-packed parcel of humanity gyrates across the freshly cut turf, war bonnets toss, skirts flare and red tennis shoes beat out a staccato rhythm as several of these parcels gather their remnants of voice and scream out "Give me a garnet . . ."

A cheerleader is a sometime thing. Normal college students during the week, cheerleaders personify all the excitement and the emotion packed into the stadium at a game. Their movements serve as a vicarious outlet for the tensions accumulated in the stands. Their presence, whether heeded by the viewers or the players, presents a colorful, ever-changing pattern of movement within the larger panorama of action.

These students stand for school spirit: the all-consuming pride in an institution and its traditions, the exhileration of a difficult contest, the gratification at a fight well-won.

WILL YOU MAKE MONEY THIS SUMMER?
You will on the Stanley Plan
For F. S. U. Students!

★ TOP MONEY can be yours. Last summer students made up to $1,000 in one month. Many made over $100 a week in August alone. Dealers average more than $10 net profit per party.

★ PARTIES ALL SUMMER are fun and they are moneymakers, too. You will sell our line of housekeeping and personal good grooming products on the Famous Stanley Hostess Party Plan. P.S.: This is not door to door selling.

★ SCHOLARSHIPS will be awarded to the high seven eligible College Dealers. Ed Milligan won a $500 scholarship last year in Pittsburgh. Other winners were from California, Massachusetts, Kentucky and Ohio. You can win this year!

★ EXPERIENCE is not required, but when the summer is over you will find you have gained a great deal of valuable experience in talking with people. We have career opportunities for experienced leaders.

★ NATIONWIDE OPPORTUNITIES exist for both men and women, students and teachers, in our hundreds of branch sales offices throughout the fifty states. Work in your own home town.

Do You Wonder:

Does Campbell Pay A Fee To Enter The Stadium?

By JOCELYN WARD
Flambeau Feature Writer

Does Doak S. Campbell have to pay to get into the Doak S. Campbell Stadium? Certainly not. He is given a seasonal pass to Florida State University ball games

ir. Campbell served as presi- nt of Florida State University 16 years, from 1941 to 1957, ring that time he guided this stitution from a women's college an enrollment of 1800 to a ds-national university with an ollment of more than 8,000 en he retired.

PARADE TO GAME

Dr. Campbell and his wife now in Tallahassee and are plan- to attend all of the Home- ming festivities from the parade this afternoon to the Home- ming Game tomorrow afternoon ere they have seats in the sident's Box.

t present, Dr. Campbell is busy for a retired man. He ion education consultant for pub- and private institutions ughout the South. Schools m Texas to Virginia have con- ed him about their educational ems. He is recognized as a one of America's leading curri- culum authorities and his book Curriculum Development under joint authorship with Dr. H. L. Caswell, has been a widely used book on curriculum.

PAST PRESIDENT

The former FSU President has also devoted a great deal of time to studies in higher education he has conducted and published numerous surveys of higher in stitutions in the southern states. In 1937, he was chosen consultant to President Roosevelt's Advisory Committee on Education. He is past president of the Southern Association of Colleges and Sec- ondary Schools.

At FSU there is much evidence of Dr. Campbell's leadership. In addition to the tremendous build- ing program and enrollment in creases, perhaps the most sign- ficant step has been the develop- ment from four major academic d visions in 1947 to fourteen col- leges and divisions at the time his retirement from the presi- dency.

Upon his retirement in 1957, a $1,000 scholarship fund was set up in the Campbell name as a gift from faculty members. This fall two freshmen, Calvin Laugh ton Eddy and Julia Margaret Long received these first avail- able scholarships under the Doak and Edna Campbell Scholarship Fund.

GRADUATE SCHOOL

Dr. Campbell remarked con- cerning the highlights of his 16 year administration, "Of course the most outstanding and obvious occurance during my work was the development of a coeduca- tional university from a women's college. But I also consider the growth of the Graduate School and the development of the cam- pus an important part of my work. I am very proud of the scholars we were able to assem- ble on the faculty. They add a great deal to the prestige of our university."

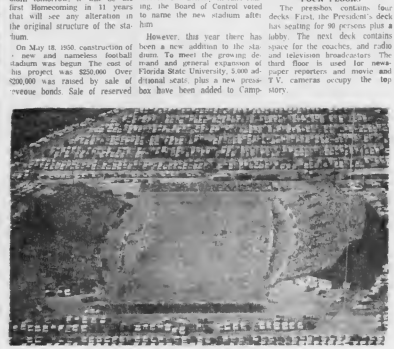
In closing he said, "The people at Florida State were wonderful to us. We love to be here in Tal- lahassee where our friends are. My wife and I consider our years of Florida State as our crowning work and we are proud to stay here and see it grow."

CONSTRUCTION ON CAMPBELL STADIUM CONSISTED OF the addition of a new four story press box as well as greater seating facilities. The additions were used for the first time this fall. (FLAMBEAU) photo by Lloyd Hines.)

Stadium Expansion Traced

One of the primary highlights at the 1950 Homecoming Game was the dedication of the then-new Doak S. Campbell Stadium in honor of Dr. Doak S. Campbell. Although there will not be a similar presentation at the sta- dium tomorrow, it will be the first Homecoming in 11 years that will see any alteration in the original structure of the sta- dium.

On May 18, 1950, construction of a new and nameless football stadium was begun. The cost of his project was $250,000. Over $200,000 was raised by sale of revenue bonds. Sale of reserved seats brought in over $50,000 in funds.



STADIUM NAMED

Dr. Campbell was extremely in- strumental in raising funds for the new stadium. Because of his interest and activity in fund rais- ing, the Board of Control voted to name the new stadium after him.

However, this year there has been a new addition to the sta- dium. To meet the growing de- mand and greater expansion of Florida State University, 3,000 ad- ditional seats plus a new press- box have been added to Camp- bell Stadium. These new additions were completed at a cost of $291,600. The new pressbox and additional seats on the 50- yard line were used for the first time this year during the George Washington-FSU game.

FOUR FLOORS

The pressbox contains four decks. First, the President's deck has seating for 90 persons plus a lobby. The next deck contains space for the coaches, and radio and television broadcasters. The third floor is used for news- paper reporters and movie and T.V. cameras occupy the top story.

THE MASS OF HUMANITY WITHIN THE CONFINES OF CAMPBELL STADIUM DEMON strated the need for the new facilities. The next problem may concern parking as evidenced by the multitude of cars.

Court Says Senate Holds Veto Power

Senate's right to approve appointments to all committees listed in the Student Body Constitution and Statutes was confirmed by Honor Court in a special open hearing Tuesday night

The issue was brought before the Court by Sen. Ron Jones when he discovered that the Who's Who Committee had never been approved by Senate

Student Body President Bobby Strand said he had considered the group a special committee although it was listed in the statutes and had interpreted the constitution as calling for the approval of "regular committees."

The Court held that the section of the Constitution calling for Senate approval covered all committees listed in that document and the Statutes.

TEXT OF RULING

Part of the ruling as given by Chief Justice Dan Walbolt is as follows:

The Honor Court has found that Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities Committee as appointed by the Student Body President, to be constitutionally illegal as this committee was not submitted for ratification by the Student Senate as provided for in the Student Body Constitution. Article VI, section Three (E) of "The Senate shall, in accordance with the Constitution: Confirm or reject appointments of the President of the Student Body, by a two-third vote in the case of appointments to fill vacated elective offices, by a majority vote for all other regular appointments."

Honor Court has considered all appointments specifically designated in the Constitution and Statutes as necessitating an appointment by the Student Body President to be "regular" appointments; therefore the Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities Committee as it is defined in the Statutes (Chapter 601), because it did not receive the approval of Senate, must be considered illegal.

OTHER COMMITTEE

The action of the Honor Court bears on not just the Who's Who Committee, but all other constitutional and statutory committees that have been or may be appointed by the student body president.

As Women's Vice-President Mygnon Champion pointed out at Senate Wednesday, any committee functioning with members, who were appointed, was working illegally—this included the elections committee, which confirmed the election of all the newly-elected precinct senators.

Actually, all precinct senators have been illegally elected, a senator said.

Senate Acts, Too Late, On Committee

Student Senate locked the barn Wednesday afternoon after the horse had already gotten out.

The Senate unanimously approved the Who's Who Committee appointed by Student Body President Bobby Byrd—a committee which has already completed its work.

The action, based on the recommendation of the judicial branch, legalized the election of delegates to Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities.

HONOR COURT

The Honor Court Tuesday night had ruled that the committee had prepared the nominations illegal because it had not been approved by Senate action—which was an antidote to two Who's Who controversies—was followed up by a proposed amendment to the Student Body Statutes which said that the Who's Who Committee could make no exceptions concerning the qualifications of candidates.

"Exceptions" were made when two students were placed on Who's Who ballots despite the fact that they lacked the required grade average. One of the students posted the highest number of votes and the other came in third.

The executive branch by-passed further a squabble concerning the right of the two students to be on the list when Byrd ordered the two names stricken from the list.

The letter of confirmation, from which the two names will be stricken, had arrived at the University, Senate President Ken van Assenderp said.

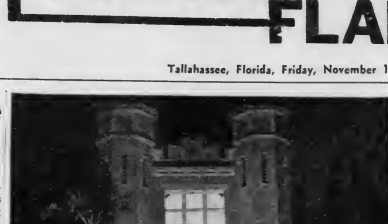
"NO EXCEPTIONS"

When the "no exceptions" amendment was proposed, several senators protested having to include the phrase. They felt it senseless to have to include words after every bill passed. The bill was sent to committee for study.

In other action, Senate sent to committee for study a bill changing minor wording in section pertaining to the Honor Code.

The senators also passed a resolution to study conditions in the Library. The resolution protested about excessive noise and requested that the Labor, Student Services and Education Committee discuss the problem with the proper officials.

Winters Talk



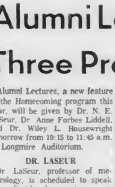
Dr. Stephen S. Winters of the Geology Dept. will speak to the Florida State University Geological Society Monday at 8:30 p.m. in 170 Geology. The subject of his talk will be "The Geologic Features of Central Panama."

Dr. Winters and his family spent the past summer in the Canal Zone on a teaching-research program. The whole family assisted in collecting materials for his research project.

The talk will be illustrated and all interested students and faculty are invited to attend.

THIS TALLAHASSEE YOUTH SYMPHONY AND THE UNIVERSITY CHORAL UNION WILL present an original oratorio by Dr. Jack Swartz, associate professor of music education at Florida State University, Monday at 8:15 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium. Here going over the score of the oratorio entitled "Saul" are left to right: John Sharp, who will be soloist in the role of Samuel; Dr. Swartz, the composer and organizer of the Tallahassee Youth Symphony; Hermaa Gunter Jr., director of the Choral Union and narrator of the Biblical story; and Paul Beiras, who will sing the part of Saul.

FSU WELCOMES BACK ITS ALUMNI AT HOMECOMING WITH COLORED LIGHTS ON WESTcott fountain.



Alumni Lectures To Feature Three Prominent FSU Profs

Alumni Lectures, a new feature in the Homecoming program this year, will be given by Dr. N. E. LaSeur, Dr. Anne Forbes Liddell, and Dr. Wiley L. Housewright tomorrow from 10:15 to 11:45 a.m. in Longmire Auditorium.

DR. LASEUR

Dr. LaSeur, professor of meteorology, is scheduled to speak from first-hand experiences on the topic of "Recent Results of Research Reconnaissance of Hurricanes."

Dr. LaSeur has been a member of the FSU faculty since 1953 and has spent much of this time in research on hurricanes. He holds a Ph.D. from the University of Chicago and has been the co-author of articles published in the Journal of Meteorology, Bulletin of American Meteorological Society, Science, and other publications.

DR. LIDDELL

Dr. Liddell, who was chosen Distinguished Professor in 1959, has taught at FSU for 35 years and is an authority on the topic, "Man and Nature in the Philosophy of Nicholas of Cusa."

Dr. Liddell has been president of the Southern Society for Philosophy and Psychology and president of the Southern Society for Philosophy of Religion. She read papers before three of the International Congresses of Philosophy.

She retired as head of the department of philosophy to concentrate on teaching and writing. Dr. Liddell received her Ph.D. from the University of North Carolina, and has done research on her topic at Heidelberg University in Germany.

DR. HOUSEWRIGHT

Dr. Housewright has served on the advisory board of Ford Foundations Program in the Humanities and the arts, and is presently on the advisory board of the State Dept.'s International Cultural Exchange Program.

He has served as president of the Southern Music Educators Conference and as a member of the executive committee of the Music Educator's National Conference.

DR. HOUSEWRIGHT

He delivered a paper this summer before the International Society of Music Education in Vienna, Austria.

DR. HOUSEWRIGHT

Director of Florida State University Singers, and director of the University Singers at FSU, will speak on "Music and Citizens." He was chosen Distinguished Professor of 1961 and has served on the University faculty for 14 years.

Forecast Says Fair Weather

It'll be fine football weather for Homecoming week end, reports the United States Weather Bureau.

Any threat of rain should clear this morning with the temperature dropping and clear skies promised for the entire weekend.

High temperature should be in the mid-sixties in the daytime with low temperatures ranging in the mid-forties.

CD Shelters Are Appointed

Civil Defense shelters have been designated throughout the campus for students and personnel, reports W. H. Watson, coordinator of Civil Defense for Florida State University.

These shelters are set up to accommodate a certain number of people and have been stocked accordingly. It is, therefore, important that all people are aware of the location of their particular shelters, he said.

All day students should report to any one of the following shelter buildings:

Men's Gym, Kellum Hall, Smith Hall, Library, Longmire, Landis Hall, Faculty Club, and the Meteorology Bldg.

Students living in dormitories, chapter houses, CLO houses, Alumni Village, Mabrey Heights, trailer park, and the hospital should follow the instructions on the posters which are located in their living areas.

Faculty and staff should follow Civil Defense instructions posted at the entrance of the buildings where they have offices or where they work.

It is suggested, when possible that each student take with him to the shelter, the following equipment: any special medicine, a toothbrush, a transister radio, one towel, one blanket and one change of clothing.

Trimester Plans

BOC Hears Faculty Salary Ideas Today

By JOAN ABBOTT
Flambeau News Editor

Proposed adjustments in faculty salaries under the trimester system will be discussed at today's meeting of the State Board of Control

The board will hear recommendations from the Inter-institutional Committee on Salaries at its meeting at 9 a. m. in the Board of Control's Office in the Florida State University Psychology Bldg.

CALENDAR

Further discussions of the calendar under the trimester system will also be heard at the meeting, according to Executive Director of the State Board of Control Dr. Broward Culpepper.

The committee has recommended an 11 percent mechanical increase in salaries beginning next September when the universities go on the trimester system, according to FSU Dean of Faculties Werner A. Baum.

In addition the committee is recommending a 10 percent average merit increase in salary, said Dr. Baum. Sufficient funds have been appropriated to support this increase, he added.

Since professors may teach all three of the trimesters, Dr. Baum said, the committee is recommending a 20 percent increase for teaching a third trimester. However, most of the professors will be on a 10-month contract and will teach the two winter trimesters and one of the summer trimester, he added.

Professors will not be permitted to teach all three trimesters in year in and year out, however, said Dr. Baum. "They must have some time for professional activities," he explained.

Under the proposed calendar for next year there will be no breaks for holidays except Thanksgiving Day and the Fourth of July, Dr. Baum said.

Classes for the first trimester will begin right after Labor Day and end in time for the Christmas holidays. Easter will fall right at the break between the first and second trimester, he said. However, each year provisions for Easter vacation will have to be different because of the way the holiday changes time each year.

There are many problems connected with the switch from the semester to trimester system, said Dr. Baum. Some of these have been worked out and others will be worked out shortly, however, some will have to be solved by trial-and-error during the first few years on trimesters.

One of the problems which has not yet been resolved involves class scheduling, he said. Since students will have to accomplish in 14 weeks of class meetings what is now done in about 16, the class periods will have to be lengthened. The time for the Monday-Wednesday-Friday classes has been set at 55 minutes, with 15 minute breaks between classes.

SATURDAY CLASSES

The decision whether to continue with longer Tuesday-Thursday classes, which in proportion would extend to about 80 minutes, or to schedule Tuesday-Thursday-Saturday classes has not yet been made.

Even though the students will spend the same amount of time in class under the trimester system "students are going to have to work harder," Dr. Baum said. Because of fewer class meetings and the fact that more material will be presented in each meeting more work will have to be done by the students between meetings, he explained.

This means that a "larger proportion of each week will have to be spent on academic work by the students," he added.

This is not such a great problem with the faculty because they can defer many things such as research until the end of the year, he added, but extra-curricular activities cannot all be postponed until the end of the year.

COURSE LOADS

Another problem which has not yet been solved is maximum course loads. The Council of Deans in Faculty Senate is considering setting the maximum course load at 18 hours. Any full time student would be able to take 12 to 18 hours with 15½ hours considered as a normal load. The upper limit of 18 hours would be rigidly maintained, while under the semester system students may take up to 21 hours with special permission. In one-half of the summer trimester a student will probably be able to take nine hours, he added.

One of the problems that will have to be settled through trial-and-error is the scheduling of "structured" courses in each department. These are courses which must be taken in a designated order.

TOURIST SEASON

Under the trimester system all students will probably not choose to take the summer period off, especially here in Florida where employment conditions would be much better during the second trimester because of the tourist season, he said.

Each department will have to decide which courses are going to be offered in each trimester, planning the schedule in such a way that the majority of the majors will be able to follow the sequence.

Especially during the first years, the University will "do everything within the realm of reason to see that no student is adversely affected" by the system change, the dean said.

ONE GRADUATION

Since there will be only one graduation ceremony each year, students who would be eligible to graduate at the end of either the first or third trimester will be given a letter from the registrar certifying that they have completed graduation requirements and would receive their diploma at the next April Commencement. This is "standard practice at many institutions" and having only one graduation per year and "in no way causes any hardship on the student," he emphasized.

Sen. Holland Speaks To Meteorologists

Weather control is of such importance to humanity that it deserves "your best scientific thinking and your bold approach toward solution," Sen. Spessard L. Holland told a group of meteorologists Wednesday night.

AT BANQUET

Senator Holland spoke at a banquet of the American Meteorological Society, which met this week at Florida State University.

He cited a technical paper, read at one of the society's daily sessions, which discussed the possibility of controlling hurricanes with the thermonuclear blasts. The senior senator from Florida emphasized that this state in particular suffers greatly from storm damage and would benefit from research done in this line.

He urged that the "scientific community," absorbed in seeking abstract truth, take time to recognize the existence of a world of economics "as we have to live it."

SATELLITES

Dr. William K. Widger, Jr., assistant chief of meteorological systems for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, also spoke to the group concerning meteorological satellites.

He predicted that in a year or so, such satellites will be doing weather reporting on a global basis. The principal virtue of the satellite, he said, is that it can cover wide areas that would require at least 100 aircraft an hour to duplicate.

"When the global coverage of the Nimbus meteorological Satellite—now under development—becomes available, it would require about 400 aircraft on one day or nearly 1,000 on a regular basis to do an equivalent job of data collection," Widger declared.

1911 Class 'Gift' Found

A bronze chest, containing the ashes of burned books, reportedly a fad among graduating seniors and a hand-written class roll was found Wednesday afternoon by janitors and racking of memories.

Discovered in the office of President Gordon W. Blackwell, the chest, a gift of the Class of 1911 to the Florida State College for Women, has been moved to Longmire Bldg. where it will be on display this weekend.

Six members of the Class of 1911, the oldest class holding a reunion this Homecoming, are expected to be here. They will decide where the chest will be placed when they meet.

9,835 Now Enrolled Here

Florida State University has announced a total enrollment of 9,835 for the fall semester which began in September.

By class, the enrollment included 2,262 freshmen, 2,076 sophomores, 1,955 juniors and 1,512 seniors, Registrar Murray W. Kenna said. In addition there are 1,432 graduate students and 448 special students.

The total includes 3,330 men and 4,505 women. The total enrollment compares with 9,185 students enrolled in the fall semester of 1960.

Every county in Florida is represented in the on-campus student body, Dr. Kenna said. Contributing the greatest number of students were: Leon, 1,356; Dade, 1,052; Duval, 637; Pinellas, 546; Broward, 425; Hillsborough, 362; Orange, 299; Polk, 288; Palm Beach, 272; Okaloosa, 237; Escambia, 226; and Sarasota, 201.

Forty-seven states are represented in the graduate school, which has 743 Florida students enrolled.

KELLUM HALL RESIDENT FRANK PETER, HURRYING TO catch the campus bus Monday, walked through the plate glass door in front of the dorm. He was still in the infirmary when the FLAMBEAU went to press.

We Need Alumni Support

...Florida State University Alumni will be here in force this Homecoming weekend. We hope they enjoy their stay here, and make an effort to view the changes in the campus since the days when they were students too.

WE ALSO HOPE that our Alumni will think about the changes they see, and will see where more change is needed. Then we might have their support year-round. The Alumni are here for the football game and associated events. They will go home again within a few hours or a couple of days. We will be here after the decorations are down and the homecoming atmosphere has given way again to the constant thing that is our stay at FSU.

FSU needs more money. It needs new buildings. It has a rapidly expanding enrollment and needs classrooms and dormitory space. The best place to start a telling campaign to get the things we need is with the Alumni. We can do that only if they support FSU not only at Homecoming annually, but every day of the year. They are members of the business and social world beyond Westcott Gate. Their voices will be heard where we current students can expect not much more than whimsical indulgent listening from deaf ears.

THE UNIVERSITY administration can try to get the money and facilities we need, but they are only going to be as successful as the backing they have. That backing will have to be from interested persons and plenty of them. Who better fits the bill than the Alumni?

L. P.

What Are ID's For?

An otherwise well-organized Homecoming weekend has been spoiled or at least marred for many students this weekend by the ridiculously unnecessary situation which exists at Westcott ticket office.

AS IF IT ISN'T BAD enough to pay seven dollars for tickets to attend the dance and show (two more dollars for a date ticket unless both members of the couple are students,) we then are forced to stand in lines to get these tickets.

After picking up the IBM cards, getting them signed by all members of the group wanting to sit together, one must collect their ID cards (without which they cannot cash checks, vote for Homecoming queen or pick up a copy of Smoke Signals.)

THEN YOU STAND in line for twenty minutes for football tickets presenting both ID cards AND signed IBM cards. Then you stand in an adjacent line for a similar period of time to get dance and show tickets.

The tickets for the various events were put on sale on different days, so that one who was willing to get there early enough to insure good seats at the game had to stand in the same line again the next day for show tickets.

PRESUMABLY, any of the 225 interms who want to attend Homecoming have to wait until the IBM cards are made available so a friend can mail them to him. Then he must sign them and send the IBM and ID cards back to the friend, who must then stand in lines for the tickets. By this time most of the tickets will have been taken by students on campus.

Most of the ticket problems seem to be caused by the demanding of a SIGNATURE instead of a printed name on the IBM.

WHY IS IT NECESSARY to present both the ID and the signed IBM? To collect IBM's and get them signed by four or six people often takes a full day, and it may take a week if one of them is interning. Wouldn't it be enough to merely require the signing's assignments and classes. We are glad they have been dimmed for the moment.

Homecomings are not the purpose of college, everyone knows. But for the moment, purposes, aims, goals, and problems are torpedoed. We are living only for the moment. There is something here for everyone, alumni and students.

Whether it be a memory of the past or a memory for the future, Homecoming comes but once a year It is here again and should be enjoyed.

Ideology

Indian Giver's Trophy

The University of Florida has generously decided to give Florida State University a piece of the goal post which was the center of a vivid battle sequence on Florida Field following the last FSU-U of F game.

THE TROPHY, as we understand it, is a revolving trophy which will go to the winner of the annual game. That, apparently, means that UofF intends to get it's "goal post" back next year.

The whole thing may have been brought about out of a sincere desire to keep goal posts at Florida intact following FSU-Fla. games rather than from a sincere desire to see that FSU got the goal post for which it scrambled so feelingly earlier this semester.

WE FELT WE HAD to take notice because this is the first friendly overture Florida has yet made in our direction that is even remotely connected with football.

At this time we do not know when, where or how the trophy is to be presented, nor do we know to whom by whom, or where it will be displayed following the presentation.

WE HAVE NO idea how much of the goal post we finally got (or if Florida is including a couple of policemen in a sort of package deal), but we can't profess any real disappointment if it should turn out to be some scrap left over after a wedding job.

Why we can't have the trophy to keep is an interesting question. Surely Florida's sense of sportsmanship is big enough to allow us a bit of aluminum sentiment. Knowing the 'Gators "in" with the financial distributors, we think they might have a whole goal post to spare somewhere.

BUT SINCE they've seen fit to mount a bit of metal and offer it to us on a "we'll take it back" basis, what are we supposed to do but say "OK, sports, we'll play your silly game."

Homecoming Is Something To Each

Homecoming is always a sense-titillating experience.

The bright colored crepe paper spectaculars mingled with the dulling shades of autumn leaves backgrounds the frolic. A coed-laden parade lumbers down the main street and winds past a knot of children on a corner craning their necks for a glimpse. With a loud crack a kaliedoscope of fireworks bursts against a darkened sky and a brilliant spotlight trains on an anxious young lady in the center of a black arena. There is music, laughter, gaiety.

A smell of football is in the air mixed with an aroma of burning wood at an outdoor pep rally. The garnet flash of a cheerleaders skirt catches the attention and eyes pause to admire the flashing legs beneath. A surging sound of a snappy marching band washes a crowded stadium and spills over the regimented rows of cars parked outside. Gold helmets sparkle in the sun and are greeted by a deep roar. A blazing sun casts a glare on the stars-loved patrons and many cooling beverages are consumed.

The pageant is worth the weeks of adoration. It is enjoyed by all. But each draws from the panorama of experiences those which strike closest to home.

For alumni, Homecoming is a once-a-year affair when old friends are greeted and new friends are met. There are many handclasps and many slaps on the shoulder. But they are only temporary for another year must be added on to the too-quickly growing total.

Homecoming is a time to reminisce and remember days of youthfulness with its slow ambling walks across the green lawns of the campus, its classroom friendship, and it cup of coffee with smiling, talkative companions. It is a time to remember old buildings and the multitude of memories that fill it. It is a time to recall the pleasant blue of a dormitory room years ago. Initials out of the past are scratched for an sidewalks. One looks recognizable, but after all there have been thousands of students with those same initials.

Despite familiar landmarks, things are not the same. The hills are steeper and longer. Distances between buildings are wider. It takes more wind to walk from Landis to the History Building at a fast trot than it used to. And the legs ache more than they used to. It seems strangest that little old Tallahassee has really bossomed into a University. And it's a little frightening.

For Students, Homecoming is a welcomed relief.

The greek houses and dorms are not drab and dull as they usually are. They are resplendent behind their brick walls. For once, students are proud to show off their residences. Fierce pride develops which is not duplicated at any time during the year.

Grading on houses is a welcome diversion from academic evaluation. It's been a long semester and nothing is enough. It's nice to throw cares away for the moment and enjoy the frivolous side of college life. This is college at its best and these are the times that make college memories. The memories of tomorrow have fled the mind.

There is a smooth music and many sights. Exams, the Berlin crisis, and atomic fallout all seem far away. So do Monday morning's assignments and classes. We are glad they have been dimmed for the moment.

Homecomings are not the purpose of college, everyone knows. But for the moment, purposes, aims, goals, and problems are torpedoed. We are living only for the moment. There is something here for everyone, alumni and students.

Whether it be a memory of the past or a memory for the future, Homecoming comes but once a year It is here again and should be enjoyed.

Ideology

Need For Character

By ALLAN DERMOTT

EDITORS NOTE: This the fourth of the scheduled articles in a series dealing with Communist ideology. The final article dealing with each will deal with the need for high American character if we are to meet the Communist Challenge.

As shown in the concluding statements of the preceeding article in this series, the American character is declining. Furthermore, to illustrate this, Edward Hunter (Flambeau, Nov'21 editor) quotes: "Major Meyer disclosed in a lengthy interview in the U. S. News and World Report (Feb. 24, 1956), that a third of the captured Americans (in the Korean War) collaborated to some extent with the enemy, at least to the degree of singing 'peace' petitions."

ANOTHER GOOD EXAMPLE of the serious deterioration of the American character is the Powers case. In early May 1960 Francis Gary Powers flew a U-2 plane over the Soviet Union — a mission designed to gain information for the purpose of protecting not only the United States, but the whole Free World. During his trial in Moscow in 1960, was there any allusion to patriotism in his testimony? He wasn't even an advocate. He was just the opposite of Nathan Hale of history.

Edward Hunter states, "No more depressing display of a lack of motivation can be imagined than that given by Powers. He told the court he 'felt very lucky' to get a job with Central Intelligence Agency — not because it provided an enviable opportunity to serve his country, and to help preserve the freedoms for which other countrymen had suffered and died — but because his pay would equal that of the chief pilot of a commercial airline (I was pleased with the idea of flying service with a big salary,' he said)." Is this patriotism? He declared that he had no feeling against the Soviet Union and that he had never voted in his own country. Is this an American? He even declared that he was "interested in flying" that he had flown the U-2 flight. Is this the love a man shows toward his country?

"IN COMMENTING ON the nonsense point found among his exhibits, he made the amazing statement: 'Unfortunately nobody but myself knows I could not kill a person, even to save my own life. I could not do it.' Yet he had been a lieutenant in the Air Force for 4 years! A period of combat had he been trained?"

Then in a letter to his wife, printed by him, he wrote: "Needless to say my life would be much different if I had it to live over again."

AS HUNTER SAYS, the Communists had accomplished their two psychological objectives: (1) They thoroughly humiliated Powers and transformed this image of disgrace to the whole body of American society," and (2), they made "a chasm of weakness on the part of the defendent, and an identification of this weakness in the world's eyes with the American nation."

Reflections

Coma, Girl Guide

By LESLIE POWELL

"Hello, fellow alums. My name is Stefanie Von Coma. I have been appointed your guide and companion for the weekend in lovely Tallahassee at lovely FSU. I will answer questions, play charades, write odes, repeil propositions and otherwise comport myself like a typical cheerleader."

"WHAT'S THAT SHE? Yes, the red lights downtown do denote traffic stops. No, they do not imply districts. Where can you get a room with hot and cold running maid service? In this one borne town? At your age you can kid me like that!"

"What, madam? You say those are the biggest squirrels you ever saw? No m'am, those are men. See the sign? It says 'Men Working In Trees'. Why? I think because office space is at a premium here at FSU.

"WHAT'S THAT, LITTLE boy? No! /ACTION/ The cigar corner of her mouth! Wait until the class of 18-ought-04 turns its back and I'll tie knots in your . . .

"You want to know about the political inner-workings of the campus, no?" Well, the other machine FSU is full of weird wheels and cranks.

"THAT'S THE SIN," was the famous Westcott Castle. No, there are no moats. We don't have a problem of repelling boarders. Nobody wants to go there. What's the little spinning gadget on top? Oh, that? Well they tell me it's the antenna for the big panic button.

"Yes, little boy, I know what the assistant to the assistant's assistant coach said. I quote: "It's gonna be a real fine game. We have real good players. I'm really pleased to see the sky out tonight. That's a real fine omen."

"RATS, PEOPLE. After talking to you, I think I'll take homecoming literally. So I go," Stefanie said as she stepped into the elevator shaft. "My goodness gravy no. Premed, rather."

"AH HA, WELL, it looks like we shall have to put some stitches in it." "No! Not on a little end of a finger," I plead. "Why not?" he says. "I am categorically gainst sutures in ends of fingers." I explain. "Well then, we shall have a consultation. And then we will take a vote. And if all of the nurses and more than one of the doctors want stitches, then stitching we will do," he suggests.

"Ah, you have only part of the story right," I say. "You may let everyone in the world look at my finger, but nobody is going to put stitches in it. And so the room is filled with many people — doctors murmering, nurses nodding, children laughing. A good time we had by all."

"IT LOOKS LIKE we will have to put sutures in that," the doctor says. I put my head between my knees. "What was wrong with you", someone thinks to ask. "I think I am going to pass out," I say. "Don't you dare," they order. "Go lie down." Helped manfully to a cot, I do indeed lie down. There, close by, lies a poor boy under the chathermy machine. The blades are turned with the sun streaming full into his face. "Hey," he calls to my departing nurse. She does not hear him. He waves. She does not see him. Maybe he does not have an I. D. card. Is Florida 'Southern'?

By BOB SANCHEZ

I don't know who started the ridiculous custom of parading the Confederate flag at FSU football games, but somebody should certainly stop it. For the benefit of those who do not attend the Saturday evening character building sessions I should explain that as the fighting Semanoles race onto the field, they are preceded by a couple of Knights of Sigma Alpha waving the rebel flag. Then, after the halftime break, the ritual is repeated.

NOW I HAVE NO objection to a fraternity's desire to identify with the land of cotton and magnolias. I suppose it is better to have the perverted ideals of the South than none at all. But a flag at the games? Or Rupe Hall the flag of St Andrew? Then the opening of an FSU game would look like an Olympic parade.

But there is a larger issue involved in all of this. Is Florida really a Southern state? Should it identify itself with the South? The answers are probably "yes" and "no" Geographically, Florida is Southern. Culturally, it represents a paradox. "The further south in Florida you go, the further north you get," someone has said. Historically Florida has been identified with the South, but it is gradually growing away from its Southern neighbors. Right now it is at the halfway point. The balance of power between within the state is tipping away from the Southernists. The Collins era was one sign of this trend. The Bryant administration represents a temporary slowdown in the trend toward disassociation from the South.

THE QUESTION then arises "Why would anyone want to be identified with the South?" At first glance, it is indeed a puzzling question, for the South undoubtedly leads the nation in backwardness. Its schools are a national disgrace. Its race relations are an international scandal which constantly gives aid and comfort to the Communists. It's political system is a mockery of democracy. Culturally it is a great void. It teems with filth, disease, illiteracy, poverty, violence, corruption, and hypocrisy. Why would anybody want to identify with an area such as this?

The answer is simple. There are still many people in Florida who are a part of this system, and who are not about to criticize or change it. Instead, they give their support to the White Citizens' Councils and other champions of the status quo. Still others in the state are making too good a living off the system to want a change. They reap the profits from the cheap labor, slum housing, regressive taxation, exploitation of resources, and corrupt local governments. Still others in Florida find identification with the South an easy way to shirk their responsibilities. Our schools are always said to be "the best in the South," never "the best in the nation." Being named best in the South is somewhat akin to being selected as the fastest snail. It is a hollow honor made possible only by the incredible backwardness of most of the rest of the South. One wonders why the Peace Corps was dispatched to Nigeria when all need in Alabama is nearly as great.

THE REAL STATE OF FLORIDA had little stake in the system of slavery, and little part in the Civil War. Its traditions in this area, to the extent that they exist at all, have been largely contrived by Southernist groups. A majority of Florida's citizens were born elsewhere. The state is developing a two-party system. It is making some progress in education and in race relations. It is time at least for Florida to secede from the Union. It is time, in fact, for a good place to start is right here at FSU, where we could remind the South that Dixie is not our national anthem.

Half Time

TO THE EDITOR:

What do you do during the halftime show at football games?

Last Saturday was the first time in two years that I did not march in the half-time show. While sitting in the stands, I was amazed at the lack of enthusiasm shown by some of the students toward the Marching Chiefs. The Marching Chiefs practice three days a week, two hours each day for every half-time show. It seems only fair to them that some concerted amount of attention be returned for their efforts.

The Chiefs are considered to be in the top three among college bands in the nation, Ohio State and Michigan State being the other two. If FSU students would watch the half-time shows (eight minutes in length) they might discover and ENJOY a richer pride in their university as well as entertainment. Band members work hard to perfect each maneuver due to their pride in the band and respect for the superior traditions previous members have established through the years. It seems only right that the entire student body in the stands maintain this respect also. How about it? Why not watch the pre-game and half-time shows this Saturday and see what you've been missing.

Windows Compete For Decorating Prizes

A new category for decorations for Homecoming has been added this year—window decorating.

Fifty local merchants have donated their front store windows to be decorated by sororities, fraternities and various other Florida State University groups. The windows will be judged by student-faculty committee on the basis of appropriateness to the Homecoming theme, originality and the over-all appearance of the window.

The first, second and third place awards in this division will be announced at Pow Wow tonight. The plan for having Homecoming window decorations was proposed by Florida State University student Gene Brown.

HOUSES AND FLOATS

In addition to this new category awards will be given to the best house and float decorations for Homecoming.

The 19 floats appearing in the Homecoming parade this afternoon will be reviewed and winners selected in the different divisions. The floats will be judged in the following categories: most original; most humorous; most beautiful; most appropriate to theme; and best all-around float.

Winners will be announced at the Pow Wow, but they will not receive the trophies tonight because the trophies will be engraved before presentation to the winners.

Trophies will also be presented to the winners in the house decorations division. These winners will be announced at the game tomorrow afternoon.

HOUSE DECORATIONS

Houses will be divided into the following sections: best women's residence hall; best men's residence hall; best sorority house; best fraternity house; best off-campus house; best non-residence house; and best all-round house.

If any group wins a trophy in any category for three years in succession, they are allowed to retire their trophy. This year there are three such group on campus.

Men's Co-op House No. One has won the trophy for the best decorated house off-campus for two years. Pi Kappa Phi has won the trophy for the best decorated fraternity house for two years. Alpha Zeta Delta has had the best decorated float in accordance with the theme of Homecoming for the past two years. Each one of these groups has the opportunity to retire the trophy this year, if they win in the same category.

LAST YEAR'S WINNERS

Last year's winners in the float division were: most original, Gamma Phi Beta and Delta Chi; most humorous, Phi Delta Theta and Kappa Delta; most beautiful, Theta Chi and Zeta Tau Alpha; most appropriate to theme, Alpha Zeta Delta; and best all-around, Sigma Phi Epsilon and Elpha Chi Omega.

In housing decorations, last year's winners were: best women's hall, Magnolia; best men's hall, Kellum; best sorority house, Phi Beta Phi; best fraternity house, Pi Kappa Phi; best off-campus house, Men's Co-Op No. One; best non-residence house, Baptist Student Union; and best all-round was the Pi Kappa Phi.

Fulbright's Recommended For 7 Students

Seven Florida State University students have been recommended to the National Selection Board for the Fulbright Scholarship program.

Dr. Albert Leduc, of the Modern Languages Dept. and Fulbright Program adviser, stated that the students have been recommended in the field of graduate study on the basis of their outstanding scholastic record, their fluent knowledge of the language of the country to which they have applied, and the reason for wanting to receive the award.

FSU Homecoming History Extends Backwards To 1910

By PAT CRAWFORD
Flambeau Feature Writer

The traditional Homecoming celebration has been in existence — although slightly altered in appearance — on the Florida State University campus since 1910.

A spirited rivalry between the women of FSCW marked the beginning of the festivities and games that have evolved into the present day Homecoming weekend.

In 1926 the occasion was first given the name "Homecoming". That was the same year a masked ball was held honoring the young ladies, the faculty, the alumnae and their parents. The death of Mrs. Edward Conradi on the morning of the traditional games, dampened the spirits of the 1926 weekend.

ODDS AND EVENS

Unlike now, these holidays lasted a full week at Thanksgiving. Nobody left the campus. Instead parents came and joined their daughters here for such events as the Demonstrations of plays produced and directed on alternate evenings by the Odds and Evens, the two opposing factions on campus.

Odds were members of the freshman and junior classes and Evens were sophomores and seniors.

In 1930 the first faculty — alumnae basketball game was added to the festivities. One of the featured participants in this game was FSU's present Assistant dean of women, Miss Elizabeth Lynn.

The enthusiastic response to the games continued to grow through the years. Then the games included not only basketball but volleyball as well.

DANCING WITH MEN

One of the headlines in the 1934 Homecoming edition of the Flambeau seems to be fairly misleading as it proclaims "Dancing with men to be permitted soon."

It appears that previously, on very special occasions, men were allowed to attend dances — with special permission. In those "good ole days" dancing was from 8:30 to 11:30 p. m. in the college gymnasium.

Some customs of the past are still used around the FSU campus today. People seeking a way to the dance waited in front of Bryan Hall for transportation.

In 1936, "Homecoming" was abolished in favor of a holiday known as Parents' Day. This year the alumnae turned up in mass to help students honor their parents.

SWING TO TWIST

The holiday jubilations of 1938 were mainly centered around the "swing" which had taken the whole country by storm. However, the dancing trends of Homecoming 1941 are undoubtably expected to have a new "twist" to them.

In 1949 the women in the blue jackets and white skirts — yes, the sophomore councilors — may not have worked at the polls for Homecoming Queen elections, but they did sell 500 pounds of peanuts to ravenous FSU students and their parents at the Odd and Even Demonstrations.

Fourteen students who were "buried alive" received most of the recognition in the 1941 celebration. It seems that 12 Evens and two Odds got stuck in the Landis elevator two feet below the ground floor.

Throughout their experience, most of them remained calm and composed with the exception of the two Odds who never had an opportunity to say a word. The Even "fight song" seemed to have drowned them out. They were rescued safe, unsuffocated and completely exhausted.

DINNER RATIONED

The year 1942 saw FSCW suffering from the depression caused by war. This was obvious when groceries were rationed for the traditional Thanksgiving dinner for students and their parents in the Suwannee Room.

In 1944 a review was held of past celebrations and plans were made for the beginning of "color rush." The object was to get your team colors highest on campus, with restrictions against pulling down those of your worthy opponents. The beginning bell sent students dashing all over campus to climb every tower, lamp post or telephone pole in sight. The winning side won a trophy and was considered to have a good omen in its favor.

It was reported in the Flambeau in 1947 that the enthusiastic rivalry between the Odds and the Evens at times had serious repercussions. One Homecoming celebration found a group filled with such school spirit that the floor of the gymnasium collapsed under the strain.

For years it was the custom of the Odds to have a Japanese parade and wear their most elaborate pajamas. The town people turned out in mass for this particular part of the celebration. The parade was discontinued because of the adverse criticism concerning the suggestion that FSCW women were wearing their pajamas on the streets of Tallahassee.

In 1948 Florida State University celebrated the first "big" Homecoming weekend. A queen was elected to reign over the festivities which included a football game, a pep rally, entertainment by celebrities and a dance.

The trend toward bigger Homecomings has increased yearly until they have reached the proportion of today's spectaculara.

Dr. Swartz's Oratorio On Saul To Be Presented Monday

An original oratorio with Scriptural text describing the reign of Saul and his downfall, will be presented by the Tallahassee Youth Symphony and the University Choral Union Monday at Florida State University.

The oratorio is the work of Dr. Jack Swartz, associate professor of music education at FSU and the Rev. George Gooderham of Fairfield, Calif. Scored for narrator, five soloists, chorus and orchestra, the composition is entitled Saul.

Premiered by the Shrine of the Ages Choir and the Northern Arizona Symphony in 1951, this will be the first performance of the oratorio at FSU. The program at 8:15 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium is free and open to the public.

Soloists will be Paul Betros as Saul; John Sharp as Samuel; James Haygood as David; and Nash Noble and Patricia Evans as witches.

Herman Gunter Jr., director of the 130-voice Choral Union, will narrate the story and the performance will be conducted by the composer, Dr. Swartz.

Swartz in the Fall of 1959, under the sponsorship of the School of Music, organized the Tallahassee Youth Symphony which now numbers 60 members, most of them from junior and senior high schools in the city.

A former teacher in the public schools of Amboy, Ill. and Allandale, Ga., Swartz has been a college professor for 17 years. As a junior college music instructor, he organized and conducted the San Angelo Little Symphony, Texas and the Regent Civic Orchestra, Washington. While attending George Peabody College as a teaching fellow in voice and piano, he was visiting bandmaster at Vanderbilt University. He served on the faculty of Arizona State College for eight years before coming to FSU. In 1950 he first composed the oratorio Saul but during the past ten years has made many revisions.

The Choral Union was organized in 1946 as the first mixed choral group on the campus, then the Florida State College for Women. Herman Gunter Jr. has directed it from its begining. Gunter teaches voice in the School of Music and is Minister of Music at the First Presbyterian Church.

Coeds Join Model Board

Twenty-four Florida State University coeds were selected Nov. 9, for membership in the FSU Modeling Board from a group of 58 finalists.

These girls, chosen on the basis of natural ability, stage poise, good posture, neat appearance and a sense of fashion correctness, are: Linda Robertson, Amy Kovalsik, Marilyn Jensen, Lee Ann McElveen, Peggy Bruce, Cricket Hamlin, Gerry Bryant, Ruby Watson, Janet Dunning, Fran Allen, Jo Dietrich, Janet Rodebaugh, Judy Nealing, Marilyn Barineau, Cindy Cline, Vicki Voyles, Delores Lord, Paige Horne, Patricia Bassett, Suzie Peavy, Beverly Bull, Barbara Crawford, Barbara Willis and Bobbie Darragh. Dorothy Roberts is chairman and Ann Schloss co-chairman of the group.

The Modeling Board works with the school, local merchants, as well as state and national advertisers for publicity and fashion shows.

Class Of 1911 Reunites

Alumnae Back Fifty Years After Getting Sheepskins

By MARTHA ROBERTS
Flambeau Feature Writer

Honored guests at Florida State University's '61 Homecoming festivities are members of the graduating class of 1911 who are this year celebrating their golden anniversary.

Half of a century has elapsed since the 14 women received their degrees, becoming the first class to graduate from Westcott auditorium. It was they who initiated at FSU the now traditional custom of changing the mortar board tassel at the graduation ceremony.

THREE TORCHES

A lasting remembrance of the class of 1911 is the three-torches seal of FSU, which was designed and first used by this class. The class has the additional distinction of formulating plans for the first student government.

Included in the schedule for all alumni is registration in Longmire today and tomorrow. Another event of the weekend especially for alumni is a breakfast Saturday morning in the Suwannee Room.

HOMECOMING PARADE

The class of 1911 will ride in the Homecoming parade this afternoon and will be escorted to the Homecoming Banquet tonight where they will be seated together. The class will be recognized at the banquet.

Members returning for the 1911 reunion are Mrs. T. J. Poppell (Nora Hart), vice - president; Mrs. George E. Lewis (Sarah Davis); Mrs. J. J. Beeson (Caddobelle Farr); Mrs. Arthur G. Webb (Bess Buchanan); Mrs. Alexander Linn (Lucile Gregory); and Miss Lonny L. Landrum.

Permanent class president Mrs. Milton E. Parker (Omerea Holloway) of Tallahassee will be unable to attend due to an illness which confines her to her bed. However, plans are being made for the 1911 class to visit her at her home

INDIVIDUAL DISTINCTION

Graduates of the 1911 class have distinguished themselves not only as a class, but also as individuals. Mrs. Lewis was 1956 Florida Mother Of The Year. Mrs Farr, Mrs. Poppell, Mrs. H. J. Garnand (Ely Pickett), Mrs. O. C. Brewer (Lilla Sims), and Mrs. W. L. Duncan (Essie Long), were teachers.

Mrs. Henry Sprinkle (Iva D. Townsend), was a school principal until 1952 when she took office as Superintendent of Public Instruction for Duval County.

Mrs. Landrum is distinguished in the field of education leadership.

Mrs. J. C. Cullen (Pearl Long) class treasurer, served as Lake County Tax Collector for 44 years, being one of very few women to serve in this capacity.

Mrs Karl Whitaker (Olivia M. Moody) is an accomplished musician and artist

Other classes holding reunions are those of 1956, 1951, 1950, 1946, 1947, 1932, 1930, 1929 and 1912.

Almost 800 students will be selected from the United States to participate in the cooperative graduate level education for American citizens abroad. According to Dr. Ledue, the host country makes available facilities in universities, art centers and research institutes after selections are made by the National Board.

The Fulbright award pays transportation, tuition, fees, and all living expenses. The award is usually granted for $2500 a year or in accordance with expenses in the individual country.

Dance Dress Varies

What the "well dressed woman" wears to Homecoming this weekend may depend entirely on the weather. A quick change in temperature could play havoc with the best planned weekend wardrobe.

Basically, however, appropriate attire remains the same for all events with only a change in the weight of the fabric.

For the Pow Wow tonight, a fall cotton, skirt and sweater set or wool dress would be most appropriate. Flats are in order since dress is more casual this year.

The game tomorrow requires a fall suit or dress in wool or lightweight suiting material. Heels and gloves are a must and hats are worn according to personal preference.

The Homecoming dance is one occasion when long formals may be worn as well as short formals and cocktail dresses. Glove length depends on the dress, a good rule to follow is the higher the neckline, the shorter the glove.

For the show in Westcott, proper attire would include the same apparel worn to the game or a slightly dressier suit or dress heels and gloves are, of course, necessary.

For the men, a sports jacket or suit would be appropriate for both the game and the show. Dress for the dance should be coordinated with that of his date. A long formal would indicate a white jacket while a cocktail dress would indicate a dark suit. Again, personal preference is most important.

For the Pow Wow, a sports coat or regular school clothes are suggested.

Frosh Finish Third Undefeated Season

During a pre-season interview with Coach Charlie LaPradd, he agreed that his 1961 freshmen football squad boasted one of the biggest and fastest teams that ever been fielded here at Florida State.

At the close of the 1961 season Coach LaPradd states that they show as much proficiency in the classroom as they have shown on the football field. Florida State will have a good football squad in the next few years." The freshmen team has closed its season with a record of two wins and one tie. Miami was outboxed in St. Petersburg, and the Furman Paladins were trampled 36-3 in the last game of the season. The Mississippi Southerners were the only team to fight through FSU's tough defense to score a touchdown. Defensive standouts such as Winfred Bailey, Harry Bibent, Jack Shinholster, Jim Seelman, and Avery Sumner helped drives during the year. Others might have been scores for the opponent. Mike Farrington, Joe MacKenzie, Jak Edwards, Bob Burroughs, Joe Parrish and Bob Norman were hard-driving offensive men who could be counted on in every play to come through with another surprise for the opposing offense.

Backfield wise, Florida State could to have some of the most tight after backs in the country. The freshmen roster includes many top prep athletes from out-state. Earl Hawkins, All-American from Virginia; Steve Tensi, outstanding quarterback from Ohio; Ed Pritchett and Ed Loveday top quarterbacks from the Alabama. Fred Biletnikoff, converted end from Pennsylvania; and innumerable top backs from the state of Florida stablize the freshmen backfield. Jim Loftin, transfer from Pensacola Charles the halfback from Jacksonville Johnny Roberts from Orlando Boone; George D'Alleandro and Phil Spooner, fullback and halfback preps from Ft. Myers all have gained respect from their own Florida crackers as well as the out-of-state tacklers.

Pre-season comments by Coach LaPradd, who has just completed his third undefeated season, have become evident in game action. "This team," he said, has the best potential of any freshmen team we've had." Outweighing the average varsity player, the freshmen are also taller than the varsity group. Academically, the freshmen were found to rank in the top 40 per cent of the students taking the placement exams last year. Because of injury, some of the topnotch freshmen were unable to participate in this season's play.

MISSISSIPPI TIES FIRST

In the first fray of the season, the Seminoles clashed with the Mississippi Southerners and, as they have been rumored, the Southerners were out to play hard-nosed football. Jim Loftin made the only score of the game to the second quarter, on a 62 yard dash. The Seminoles led until the latter part of the third period when Bob Nali, of the Southerners, scouted across the three yard line.

In total ground gains the Seminoles had 222 to 140 for the Mississippi squad.

MIAMI SHOWS TEAM EFFORT

When the Baby Seminoles traveled to St. Petersburg to meet the Miami frosh, it was evident that they were not strickly on a pleasure trip, but out to hold a group of Hurricanes. Deflating the Hurricane whirlwind, 13-0, in a game described as a real "team effort" by the coaches, the Seminoles offense proved steady while the defense controlled the field. Defensive maneuvers by the Renegades held the Miamians inside the 10 yard line on three occasions, the last time in the final seconds of the game.

Phil Spooner scored the first touchdown in the Miami fray, from the seven yard line. Terry Hollman kicked the extra point to put the Seminoles in the lead, 7-0. In the last part of the second period, Johnny Roberts added the second TD, scoring over right tackle from the six yard line. Hollman's kick was wide. The Seminoles had their lead, and were able to contain the Miami offense for the remainder of the game.

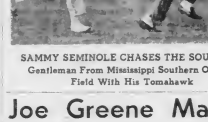
FURMAN TOSSED 36-3

In the only home game of the season the Baby Seminoles proved themselves to be big and fast after getting a slow start in the first quarter.

The first score of the game was made by Fred Biletnikoff, in the second quarter, on a long pass behind the Paladin safety man. Spooner converted and the score was 7-3.

In the second half of the ball game, the actioo really began to move, with the Tallahassees knocking at the end zone several times. Making the second tally was Charles Story, on a pass from Pritchett from fourth quarter proved to be the final attack, launching four touchdown Penalties marred the first TD, but a Tensi-Beletnikoff lateral paid off and Spooner converted, making the score 22-3.

After a recovered fumble by Jerry McDaniel, Pritchett rulled to his right and flew into the end zone. The conversion was made on a fake punt, adding two points to their total thankin-made the last score of the game on a 2 yard dash around the end.



FSU's Renegade took over, with Dick Hermann leading the pack, they hailed a last minute attack inside the 10. Hermann was later helped from the game, due to an injury.

SAMMY SEMINOLE CHASES THE SOUTHERN Gentleman From Mississippi Southern Off The Field With His Tomahawk

Joe Greene Mascot From Florida State

Joe Greene, FSU's Sammy Seminole for 1916-62, is one of the outstanding gymnastics performers in Florida State's Gymkana activities.

CHARLEY LaPRADD

The Sammy Seminole is selected on the basis of leadership, showmanship and gymnastic ability.

Greene, who is majoring in physical education, is a member of the FSU Varsity Gymnastics team for two years, physical education majors club, and the Gymnastics honorary.

Joe began in gymnastics at Southwest High School in Miami, where he was coached by Dick Cutting, a former national trampoline champion for FSU. While Greene was attending high school in Miami, he won regional and conference titles in trampoline and tumbling competition.

Since Green's enrollmtent to Florida State University, he has won numerous championships and titles which include: the Georgia AAU trampoline and tumbling title in 1960 and 1961 the South Florida AAU trampoline and tumbling title in 1961; and later to place 11 in the nation in trampoline competition at the National Collegiate Championships at Champaign, Illinois.

Greene, who makes the third Sammy Seminole for FSU, is following Chick Ciero, who added greatly to the encouragement of Greene's continuing in gymnastics, and Jack Taylor, last year's Sammy Seminole.

Joe was a teammate of last year's "Sammy" and feels that this was the final inspiration which gave him the desire in be this year's Sammy Seminole.

Greene, who is a junior this year, believes that the recognition which he has achieved has not only been based upon his individual ability to learn and practice gymnastics, but comes from the teaching and coaching of both Chick Ciero and Jack Taylor. Each aided him technically in skills, routines, and showmanship.

Joe said "he hopes he can continue to live to the high abilities and showmanship of the previous Sammy Seminoles."

Greene has also been quite active in the past three years in Gymkana. This year, Greene was the key man in Gymkana's presentation of "Floridana".

Third Win For Frosh Coach

Transferring from the United States Air Force to a coaching position at Florida State University has proved beneficial to Coach Charlie LaPradd.

Coach LaPradd has boco at FSU for the past five years; three have been spent coaching the freshmao ball club. In his third undefeated season, Coach LaPradd says this year's team is working well under universily pressure on freshman ball players.

A native of St. Augustine, Florida, LaPradd attended St. Augustine High School, where he played football for four years. Honors and a scholarship were awarded him as a graduate, and he traveled to Gainesville to join the Gator line. Graduating from Florida in 1953, LaPradd had played 3 years at tackle for the Gators. His name appeared on several All-American teams and was named to the top tackle spot in the Southeastern Conference that year.

Gainesville also offered LaPradd something else—his wife, Mrs. Nita LaPradd. They have two children, Tommy, who is 10, and Laurine, who is 8.

Working on his doctorate for the last few years, Coach LaPradd expects to finish soon. He also helps supervise the study halls set up for the football players, which are under the direction of Eddie Cubboo. These study halls are conducted each night for the team

Coach LaPradd and his four student assistants, Don Sellers, Hal Dyer, Abner Bigboe and Jim Rogers, attempt to train the frosh in the universily plays and help them adjual to their own university schedule. These student assistants will graduate in February and enter the profession of coaching at the different school levels

Most of the freshmen team is on scholarships, with the exception of two or three. These football players spend three to four hours a day on the football field or watching game movies. Practices are held regularly. Monday through Thursday. Friday or Saturday a scrimmage is held on the field. They do not practice as much as the varsity but LaPradd feels that too much practicing will not help to adjust the individuals to the rigorous university schedule as well as light work-outs will.

Few serious injuries have occured this season. according to LaPradd Rodney Lore, freshman end from Melbourne, Florida, has had an operation on his knee but other injuries have been minor.

Coach LaPradd's personality and character are well reflected in a statement made by one of his 1961 players, Mac Farrington, when he said "Coach LaPradd has the respect of all of his boys! You really want to play well for him."

The 1961 season has been short, but sweet for the freshman ball club. With only three games on tap, the "Baby" Seminoles, who outweigh and are taller than the average varsity player, have scored two wins and one tie for a seasonal record.

Athletic Past Reveals Feats Of FSCW Coeds

By RON LaBAR
Flambeau Sports Writer

Unlike most larger colleges and universities, Florida State University has a relatively short football tradition to look back upon. Compartively few years have passed since FSU began its present varsity sports program. This happened in 1946 when this institution became coeducational.

However, FSU is by no means lacking in an athletic history. Looking over some back issues of the Flambeau, we discovered a wealth of information concerning sports-minded Florida State College for Women. Here are a few excerpts:

Jan 12, 1923: FSCW played Leon High in a basketball classic in which the college stars walked away with a score of 39-9. We are told that the Leon girls "were pretty good, but need a lot more practice". Also, "the game was played cleanly and swiftly. Few fouls were called, and both teams put up a good fight."

March 10, 1923: Training rules for the semester (for prospective athletes): "Foods to avoid—rich pies and cakes . . . soups . . . veal, pork . . . candy . . . A few 'Do Nots'—do not eat anything between meals except fresh fruits . . . . you may have plain ice cream once each week . . . do not eat bananas." The girls evidently took it seriously.

Nov. 24, 1927 (First Homecoming): The lead story concerns the traditional Odd-Even Basketball Classic in which the "Odds" wreaked victory from the "Evens" . . . with the score 20-16 Highlights of the game included—"a fight and scramble for center"—and as—"the game gets up more speed each minute . . . time out is called for Getzer who is winded" — and finally — "the whistle blows in the midst of a scrimmage."

Nov. 12, 1927: "Horseback Riding Offered as Extra-Curricular Activity" "and much faculty criticism".

March 16, 1928: The first change in 25 years in the side stroke has been effected by Miss Betty Washburn, instructor in the physical education department. This change has been recognized and is being tried out by various "aquatic experts around over the country."—A contribution to physical education

April 13, 1946: "FSCW beats out eleven other entrants to take the top score in the Southern Intercollegiate Telegraphic Swimming Meet with 44.5 points, as compared to its closest rival, Women's College of North Carolina, with 31.5 points." Thus was the second consecutive year for this honor.

Of course there were other sports at FSCW — tennis, golf, badminton, volleyball, softball and soccer to name a few which are no doubt as popular today as they were in the time of the "Odds and Evens" The "F" Club, Tarpons, Monows, WAA — all contributed to the extensive athletic program.

According to Assistant Coach Dick Flowers. "They're rough and tough and they have two tackles that I believe better than anything Georgia has in its line."

"Jim Harvard is a good breakaway runner." Coach Peterson stated "He has been able to return several punts real well."

Coach Flowers added Harvard is, "faster than any of our backs."

Coach Peterson said, "Our passing has improved in the last couple of weeks. Feely is hitting real good."

Coach Thad "Pie" Vann who has been head coach since 1948, has never experienced a losing season. His record stands at 58-21-3.

Vann's 1961 team has only suffered two defeats: Memphis State 21-7 and North Carolina State 7-6. In comparing FSU to Memphis State, End Coach Pete Taylor said, "They (FSU) are as close to Memphis State as any team I've seen this year."

The Seminoles will be out to better their seasonal record as well as even up their series record with the "Southerners". FSU now stands at 4-3. For the year while the series record is five wins for Mississippi Southern and two for Florida State Last year the "Southerners" won 15-13 over the bribe.

The Citadel game evened up the statistics column between Florida State and its opponents. The Seminoles tnk the lead in the first downs rushing (67-63) touchdown passing (4-3) and rushing yardage (1,354-1,183).

"This should be a real fine football game." remarked Coach Peteraon

FSU Seeks Victory From Southerners

By BILL CHEEK
Flambeau Sports Editor

Striving to retain a perfect record for their 1961 home games, the Florida State Seminoles will meet the "Southerners" from Mississippi Southern tomorrow afternoon at 2:30.

A Homecoming crowd of near capacity is expected to attend the game in Campbell Stadium

With a minimum of injuries the Seminoles' only real doubt will be two regular starters, Mike Blazovitch and Frank DeFransesco.

Eddie Feely still leads in three statistical fields. the number of points scored, rushing yardage and passing yardage

Feely has scored three touchdowns for 18 points. In the rushing division he has racked up 283 yards in 87 tries. On 64 passing attempts Feely has completed 37 times for 399 yards. Feely's total offense record reads 682 yards.

He is now in second place in the state, tailing behind George Mira of the University of Miami by only 73 yards.

As a result of his performance in the lopsided victory over the Citadel, Feely was placed on the Associated Press check list for All American Each week sports writers covering games pick players for a check list. The players making the check list the most number of times are voted on by the sport writers as All-Americans.

The Seminoles will be up against a strong line that averages well over 200 lbs.

Mississippi Southern is ranked as the number one small college in the nation this week by the Associated Press.

The "Southerners" have a quarterback Don Fuell, who is probably one of the finest in the South," said Head Coach Bill Peterson. Fuell is a little All American candidate

Swimmers Prepare For Coming Meet

Preparing for the Garnet and Gold Swimming Tournament to be held Dec. 15, the varsity and freshmen squads of Florida State University have much to live up to this season.

The loss of two All-Americans, Buck Hiles and Curt Genders, will seriously hinder the team but Coach Bim Stults hopes his sophomores will be able to make up the difference. Stults stated that, "This year the success of the team depends upon the development of our sophomores."

The sophomores, who swam last year as the best freshmen team in the history of FSU, will be in their first showing Dec. 8, when they compete in a championship meet. Coach Stults has 10 teams on his swimming slate, plus four championships. The last championship meet, the National Collegiate Championship, will be in Columbus, Ohio, at Ohio State University.

The team, which is composed of approximately 20 swimmers and four divers, have scheduled their first dual meet of the season with the Georgia Bulldogs on Jan. 10. The Georgia squad has been greatly improved by the addition of some fine freshmen swimmers, but Coach Stults remains confident about the meet. This is the tenth season which the Florida State team has met the Georgia Bulldogs in their first dual meet.

The hopes of the team seem to rely primarily on the shoulders of Paul Thompson, senior tanker from Tallahassee, Fla. Stults feels Thompson is "the most outstanding man on this year's team. He can swim anything and he probably will be used to swim a number of events . . ."

The varsity and freshmen squads have been working on the basic fundamentals of swimming, practicing two hours daily. The divers work separately, which is also under the direction of Coach Stults. Mark Owen, a diver for the varsity, is the only man who has experienced any collegiate competition. Two freshmen divers will brighten the hopes of the diving corps though, both holding All American titles in high school. Neil Allen, from West Palm Beach, and Jimmy Payne, from Atlanta, Georgia are the two freshmen divers.

According to Dee Edington, the freshmen swimming coach, the freshmen have a good "chance to be as good as last year's team but they will have to put some real hard work into practice." The 1960 squad, with a record of seven wins and one loss, compiled the best freshman record in Florida State's history.

Most of the time, the freshmen work on the weaknesses of the varsity team, for future use on the varsity squad. Before each practice session, the team lifts weights for an hour, then heads for the pool.

James Mullally, of New York, is one of the brightest prospects on the young tankers outfit. He is the best backstroker on the team, and is expected to take all the freshmen records in that event this season. Two top freesty lists, Ralph Wanzenbert and Gene Dayton, both of Illinois, also brighten the hopes of the team when they compete with the Georgia frosh on Jan. 10.

Edington in his third season as swimming coach, feels that the team can make a good showing this year and hopes that all the out-of-staters can do well in their first meet. Four team members are from New York: one is from Indiana; one is from Michigan; two are from Illinois; three are from Kentucky, two are from Ohio; two are from Georgia, and six are from Florida.

The freshman crew has seven meets scheduled, two of them with arch-rival, Florida. They plan to swim the freshman teams of each school which the varsity has undertaken for a meet.

Freshman Nine Finish Drills

Scheduling the top team in the state in small college baseball, Manatee Junior College, the freshman nineam of Florida State University began their fall practice early this year.

Sept. 15 the freshman team began practice, lasting for five weeks. They worked on the fundamentals, including hitting, fielding, sliding and bunting. According to Coach Ernie Lankford, the team had a real good workout, dividing into equal teams for batting practice. Each Tuesday they held a three inning game, helping to gain experience on the home diamond.

Top prospects for the team will be Joe Fernandez, shortstop who can actually play anywhere in the infield, and Jim Suarez. Both boys are from Tampa, Fla., and are described as "potentially good players".

Some of the better hitters for the freshmen team include Mike Haney, Monety McBride, Gary Weholes and Lynn Powell. MacBride is exceptionally fast, is considered faster than any varsity or freshmen team member.

In the pitching department, the freshman coach feels he has three top pitchers in Don Murray, Joe Martin and Jim Ward.

The freshman schedule includes eight games thus far, four with Florida freshmen and four with Manatee Junior College. A four-year college from Yankee-land is in the future hopes of the freshmen ball club, but nothing has developed on this game as yet.

Men's F-Club Sign Members

"F" Club, Florida State University sports honorary, met last night for the purpose of signing up for active membership.

The "F" Club is an organization composed of varsity sports lettermen; alumni lettermen, and honorary members. Its purpose is to unite athletes into a closer working unit with each other and the University and it stresses athletic and academic achievement and service to FSU.

This organization will hold open house at the "F" Club tent, across from Tully Gym tomorrow from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m. Varsity lettermen are invited to meet and renew friendships with returning alumni lettermen.

Included in their projects for the year will be an Alumni Dance held in the spring, and a Christmas party for underprivileged children.

Perhaps the most worthwhile project of the "F" Club is its sponsorships of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes (FCA). Paul Andrews, fullback for the Seminoles, is chaplain of "F" Club and leads the FCA, which is built on an abiding faith in the teachings of Christ.

Speakers for FCA have included Dean of Students, R. R. Oglesby, Hugh Adams, University Chaplain John Carey and Jim Smith. An average attendance of 40 men per meeting this semester is evidence of the appeal of FCA.

"F" Club officers are Steve Klesius, acting president; Dave Fedor, treasurer, and Paul Andrews, chaplain. The offices of secretary and vice-president are to be filled at a later date.

Sports representatives are also chosen to assist as coordinators between the executive board and the respective sport. This year they are: Charlie Long, basketball; Jeff Clark, track; Doug French, baseball; and Don Donatelli, football. Representatives for tennis and golf have not yet been selected.

Former Star Hugh Durham Coaches Frosh

The Seminole basketball squad is fortunate this year in having a past Florida State University student and basketball player to assist in coaching the Cagers.

Assistant Coach Hugh Durham, who graduated from FSU in 1959, will assist Coach Bud Kennedy with the 1961-62 team.

Durham, an FSU letterman for three years, captain of the 1959 cage squad, and honorable mention All-American, is quite experienced with the game of basketball.

Coach Durham holds the school record for the most points scored in a three year period, which amounted to a total of 1388 points. At his best individual game, as far as scoring goes, he was credited with 43 points. He has an average of 20 points per game over the three year period.

Last year Durham coached the freshman team to a nine wins, one loss record for the season, the best season for any freshman team.

Coach Durham, a native of Louisville, Kentucky, is married and has one son.

Mangin Can Play Any Position

Litwhiler Has Versatile Player

By SHIRLEY HARDISON
Flambeau Sports Writer

With a baseball player who can manage any position on the field, and a pitcher who last year led his team to the national finals; Coach Danny Litwhiler's 1962 season looks ready for action.

Hal Mangin, described by Coach Litwhiler as, "a real work horse who can play any position with any problem." Right now, he may play first base, as he did last season but Coach Litwhiler says he "may fill in any place we are weak or injured". Larry Hawkins, a transfer student from Manatee Junior College, in Bradenton, Fla., last season lead the team to the national finals.

The month of September has been spent working on the fundamentals of baseball. Coach Litwhiler feels this "ball club is one of our better clubs — well balanced. We have good defensive pitching and look good through the middle."

Moving a ball player from the outfield to an infield spot might occur disastrous for other ball clubs, but it seems to be working fine for the Florida State nine. Roger Zimmerman, who played shortstop in the 1961 season has been moved to the second base position. Doug French, who last year was playing third base, has been moved to the outfield. According to Litwhiler, he is "going to be all right. He throws better from out there".

Contenders for the shortstop position this season will be Al Beccaio and Woody Woodard, in his first season with the varsity nine.

The third base competitors are letterman Kyle Spitzer, and George Ferguson. Spitzer is a two year letterman, was fifth in the final batting statistics with .304 Ferguson, a junior this year, has a good arm. Last year he was fourth in RBI's and made some excellent fielding plays.

In the pitching department the Florida State Seminoles seem to be doing well. With Hawkins, the team also has Tommy Davis, brother of Frank Davis, FSU's leading pitcher last season. Also returning to the pitcher's mound will be Ray McShane, a two year letterman, and Jack Ross, another two year letterman, who also lead the team in batting average last year with .600.

The outfield has many returnees to the team, including lettermen Gary Elliot and Bob Madison. Gary Elliot is described as "one of the fastest runners in college ball," and Madison, in Coach Litwhiler's opinion, is "the best outfielder in college baseball." Mike Augustine "moves around real well" Danny Litwhiler, son of Coach Litwhiler, and his cousin Woody Litwhiler are also competing for the outfield spots.

In the catching position is returnee Buddy Teagle, who is a one year letterman. One of the biggest players on the team he has a powerful and accurate throw. Last season Florida State's fors stole only seven bases from him. Two sophomores are contending for the position, Jarrett and Dinks.

Litwhiler's hopes are high this season and he feels that Florida State's team will be "one of the top teams in the nation for 1962."

Fraternities, Sororities Finish Intramurals Soon

The 1961 sports season at Florida State University is drawing to a close Nov. 20 and 21, with fraternity, sorority, and dorm-independent action stronger than ever.

Miss Moore, assistant professor of Physical Education, and director of women's intramurals, has stated that the girl's sport season has been one of the most successful. More teams have participated in the sports activities than ever before and the Intramural department hopes it will "continue to grow in the future" as Donna Deutsch, president of Women's Recreational Association, said in September.

In men's instramurals the turnout has been the best in many years. All of the fraternities have entered two or three competitive sports: most have entered more than this number of sports.

Highlighting the women's sports have been volleyball, the largest fall sports; archery bowling; and horseshoes. Bowling finals are the last sport on tap, to be played Nov. 29 in the Women's Gym. The volleyball competition was larger this year: eight league winners began the semi-finals. The championship game between Pi Phi and Jennie Murphree, became Pi Phi's, capturing the trophy with a close game, which ended 8-6.

Horseshoe competitors Bonny Jo Monre and Judy Zees are the final winners, defeating Helen Hatton and Janet Weiland. Moore and Zeis played for the Alpha Chi Omega team, while Hatton and Weiland are from Tri-Delt.

The archery finalists were determined in three days on play the second week of October.

CAPTURE GOLF CROWN

Kappa Alpha won the golf trophy Nov 11 in Quincy as the fraternities fitushed a 36 hole metal play tournament on Sawato Country Club golf course.

Kappa Alpha's team was composed of "Tuny" Williamson and Jack Behr. They finished with a total team score of 313, with Sigma Alpha Epsilon driving a close second with a 315. Sigma Phi Epsilon driving a close second with a 318. Sigma Phi Epsilon was third with a total of 324.

John Stransky, of Sigma Phi Epsilon, was the individual medalist in the tournament.

Qualifying Match Opens Fall Workout For Golfers

CHUCK KEATING BRYAN BERGERON

This year's golf team is concentrating their fall practice workout in a 144 hole qualifying match, being conducted at Tallahassee Country Club.

Coach Bill Odeneal feels that this year's team is one of the best in the history of golf at FSU.

Composing this year's varsity team will be the following seniors, Bryan Bergeron, probable number one man on the squad; Chuck Keating; Manny Nordone; Dave Philo, David Onstead, Dick Whitmore and Doug Davis. The rest of the team will consist of Juniors Roger Kennedy and Dick Ross, while the lone sophomore will be Jim Hill.

"We are looking forward to going through this year with an unbeaten season," commented Coach Bill Odneal.

This year's golf team plans to open the season against the University of Florida on March 5, here in Tallahassee. The team also plans to compete in such outstanding meets as The Florida Collegiate Tournament, Miami Tournament, Southeastern Conference Tournament, Houston All-American Match and the National Golf Tournament.

The big highlight of the season will be the All-American Intercollegiate Tournament. This will be held in Houston, Texas, and will involve the top golf teams in the nation. The winning team of this tournament is considered to be the number one team in the country.

Coach Odeneal feels that the spirit of the team this year will be the key to the building of a good golf team. Also he added that this group has more spirit than any team that he has coached at FSU.

Track Ends Fall Work

The fall practice work out for Florida State University's Clydermen will soon draw to a close as far as the team itself is concerned however, the Thinclads will continue to work out individually.

The climax of this year's fall practice will be an intersquad clash between the Gold and Gray teams Tuesday at the Florida High Field.

Head Track Coach, Mike Long and Assistant Coach Verlyn Gates feel that the backbone of this year's team will consist of the ability of each individual person to do their part. Coach Long stated, "In order for this year's team to do an outstanding job and function as a team, there will have to be 100 per cent effort of each individual."

Since this is only the second week of daily running, due to the concentration on the weight-lifting program this season, Coach Long feels that it is still hard to pick out particular members of the team who show the potential to do outstanding jobs.

The fall practice has turned out to be quite large, with 28 men reporting for practice in running and field events.

In the field events, there should be a dual between Allen Williams and Jeff Clark in the shot put and discus throwing. While another strong contender will be Barry Tapper, throwing the shot put and javlin.

Contenders in the high jump will be George Smith, Mike O'Brian, and Tommy Bourie. Each is doing a significant job. In the pole vault, Ed Hayes and Bill Crosby are striving for the top goals. Credit in the broad jump will go to Gene Gibbons, Herb Kraft, and Franklin Ford.

Back from last year's team in the running events, are Craig Johnson, Jackson Edwards and Hutch Johnson. Running the middle distances will be Jack Brockmith, Bill Davis, George Moore, Leon Smith and Quentin Till. Till has been slow getting started this year due to an infected throat. Dick Roberts and Jimmy Langford will be relied upon for the distance running.

In line to run the hurdles this year will be Terry Long and Spike Olson on the low's and Bill Welch and Dave Ellis on the highs.

FSU Cagers Drive For National Recognition Against Ohio State

By DALE MARLER
Flambeau Sports Writer

Florida State's basketball team will begin their drive for national recognition on Dec. 2 when the Cagers take on one of the top teams in the nation—Ohio State University at Columbus, Ohio.

After a tremendous effort by last year's squad, the Cagers should be tough to contend with this season. With only the loss of one player from last year's team, the Semanoles are in good shape for this year's season.

With a schedule of 23 games—ten at home and 13 away—the Cagers will be playing such teams as Ohio State, Wisconsin, Rice, Auburn, Tennessee, Oklahoma City, Miami, Florida, Alabama, Houston, Clemson, Furman and Georgia.

Head Coach "Bud" Kennedy and Assistant Coach Hugh Durham said they, "feel that this is the toughest schedule in the history of FSU basketball." However, this year's team members are ready for the battles to begin and are anxious to start what they think will be. "quite a good season."

Coach Kennedy praised the 13-man team as having a great amount of desire and determination to want to win these 23 ball games. He added that the boys realize it will be team effort, and the credit will not go to just one individual ball player.

Coach Durham said, "that this year's offense looks real good—probably better now than at any time last year."

Both coaches find a waging battle for the "starting five" this season with such ace ball players as Co-Captain Ray Swain, Co-Captain Dave Fedor and Charlie Long on the inside positions. Between them they averaged 50 percentile in scoring on last year's team.

Composing the outside positions will probably be either Bob Ek, Rufus Ashworth, Jack Davis, Tim Edney or Dale Ricketts. Along with them will be such players as Faurest Coogle, Bill Griswald, Dale Reeves, Bobby Lovell and Wally Dale, who will all be fighting for the key positions.

It may be that the strength of this season's team will depend on Dale Reeves. The coaches feel that through his tremendous height of 6-7 it may make the difference between a good team and an outstanding team this year.

Coach Kennedy and Coach Durham are quite pleased with the team spirit this year, and believe it will be a big advantage when the games get under way.

The FSU Cagers will play their first home game in Tully Gymnasium on Dec 6 against Rice University.

Frosh Slate Best Schedule

This year's Freshman basketball team will begin "their best schedule," according to Coach Hugh Durham, on Dec 1 against Central Florida Junior College.

Coach Durham has slated 17 games for this year's team and will be playing such strong schools as Lindsey Wilson J. C. of Kentucky, the University of Florida, Pensacola J. C., Manatee J. C., St. Leo J. C. and the Albany Marines.

Both Coach Durham and Assistant Coach Fred Powers feel that this is "the best freshman team in the past eight years."

Practice, so far, has been concentrated upon the use of full-court pass. Coach Durham finds the best way to use the speed and fast breaks of this year's squad will be upon the use of the full-court pass.

The freshman team and transfers have been conducting intersquad games with the varsity.

With 13 men on the squad, the coaches will depend upon:

Pete Gonzalez, G, 6-1, All City from Miami, Florida;

Cal Huge, F, 6-4, All City, All State from Madison, Wisconsin;

Tom Land, C, 6-4 All State from Sellersburg, Indiana;

Jerry Shirley, F, 6-3, All State from Mobile, Alabama;

Ross Winter, G, 6-3, All State from Mobile, Alabama;

Ken Black, F, 6-3, All Conference, from Peoria, Illinois;

Bob Geming, C, 6-7, All City from Jacksonville, Florida;

Floyd Lorenz, F, 6-3 from Mascoutah, Illinois;

Ray Beach, F, 6-3, from Aurora, Illinois;

Tony Blauvelt, F, 6-3, from Westport, Indiana;

Val Hinton, G, 6-1 from Louisville, Kentucky;

Dave Johnson, F, 6-3 from St. Petersburg, Florida;

Dave Rice, F, 6-3 from Shinnston, West Virginia.

Coach Durham finds that every boy on the squad is dedicated to the game and is filled with team spirit. Coach Durham said, "this years team should wh 12 out of 17 games." The main emphasis of the team will be shooting ability and overall depth.

"F" Club T.aps New Members

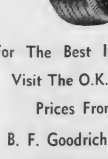
The women's "F" club on Florida! State University's campus is an honorary athletic society for all women who participate in the intramural program.

Academically, the student must have a 2.0 overall average and have been a member of two consecutive all-star teams.

The new members are called "goats" by the older "F" clubbers and must go through a month of being a goat. Karen Klish is the goat trainer for this season's new members.

The tapping of the new members was Oct. 30, a breakfast was held the following morning in the Seminole Club to welcome all the new "goats" to the club.

The new "F" clubbers for this season are Bertha Palmateer, Odessa Smith, Mel Leach, Dell Grace, Judy Price, Jeri Day, Maxie Thorpe, Joan Wilson, Sylvia Neese, Pat Crawford, Liz Wickersham, Reville Slayden, Lora Golden, Rudi Hapke, Arlene Martin, and Peggy Roe.



No Traffic Court

There will be no meeting of Traffic Court Tuesday. The next meeting will be Nov. 28 from 4-5:30 p.m. in the Game Court room, fourth floor of the Longmire Building.

Racquettes, Tarpon Tap New Members

Florida State's tennis enthusiasts, the Racquettes, and the nationally known swimming troupe, the Tarpon Club, have been active this season in tapping new members as well as preparing for their coming activities.

The 1961 Racquettes have taken in eight new members, out of the 17 who played in the singles and doubles competition. The new girls were honored with a breakfast in the Seminole Club. The new club members include Donna Deutsch, Ann Kendall, Jackie McKenzie, Donna Moore, Chris Padgett, Carol Riley, Susan Slaughter, and Judy Lowe.

They have also selected the new officers for the year to lead them in their activities in 1961. The president for 1961 is Jane Quinn, of Daytona Beach; vice-president, Irem Fort Thomas, Kentucky, is Gail DeLozier; secretary for the club is Beverly Lietcek and the treasurer is Ann Lake

FSU Wrestling Club Gets More Members

By JIMMY CARROLL
Flambeau Sports Writer

Florida State's Wrestling Club will be a stronger team this year with 18 members returning to the ring.

The Wrestling Club is not University sponsored, consequently the club has to pay all expenses. The main expense will be wrestling uniforms and a mat, which cost approximately $2,000. The cost of trips are shared by the members of the team who attend the match.

This year an arrangement has been worked out with the basketball team to travel with them and to compete against the school that the basketball team is playing. Meets have been arranged with Alabama and Auburn.

There is also the possibility of a match with Emory University. Scheduling matches is a problem because the sport is not University sanctioned. Coach Budd Berringer says, "There is hope that in two years we will have a team sponsored by the University."

Wrestling is relatively new as a collegiate sport. However, most sections of the United States have collegiate teams already competing.

The members of the club are now working out three days a week in preparation for three tournaments and forth coming matches this spring.

Florida State is defending champion of the Jacksonville open and the Florida A.A.V. The third tournament is a new one called the North-South Tournament. It will be held in Coach, Florida

The squad received a severe blow when Brad Monroe, a top prospect, was injured in an automobile accident. Monroe won the Jacksonville Open last year and finished second in the Florida A.A.V. in the accident he fractured his leg and is not expected to participate this year.

Coach Berringer stated "the team will do well in its second year." Berringer organized the club last year as a graduate assistant and has assumed full duties as coach this year.

Varsity, Frosh Netters Practice

VARSITY TENNIS

Coach Ed Cubbon, Florida State University's new tennis coach, has begun the fall practice workout. The way in which Coach Cubbon has the varsity team working is quite a unique program. His policy is to make use of the exceptionally good tennis players in this area in his varsity team.

Thus far, Coach Cubbon has three nationally ranked tennis players, Harry Campney, Andy Patten and Roger Nichols, playing with this year's varsity team. All three, players are ranked extremely high in the nation.

Composing this year's varsity team, so far, Paul Scarpa, Gordy Smith, Ed Fasula and Jammy Jameson. However, there are two remaining vacant positions which Coach Cubbon hopes to fill before the games begin.

Coach Cubbon is scouting the campus for two players qualified to fill these positions.

There is a good possibility that Don Lake will return second semester along with Paul Hamilton to add vast strength to the varsity team.

Although the slate is not yet complete, Coach Cubbon hopes to schedule meets with South Carolina, Furman, The Citadel, Presbyterian College, University of Pennsylvania, Georgia, Georgia Tech, Florida, Rollins, Miami and Mississippi State.

The FSU netters have scheduled their opening game with the University of Georgia on March 15, here in Tallahassee However, if any team is in this area before March 15, Coach Cubbon hopes to schedule a match with them.

FRESHMEN TENNIS

Florida State University's freshmen tennis team has been working out daily, with twelve boys reporting on the squad.

Coach Ed Cubbon and Assistant Coach Danny Malcome have been working the freshman team on the fundamentals of tennis

Cubbon has reported that this year's team has been working out on their own since the beginning of the Fall semester, and he feels that it will benefit them greatly.

The team for this year will be based upon Alan Gurunty, Gaines Pickett, Reggie Dickey, Paul Bennett, Doug Spencer, Don Compton, Mike Sterrie, Kenney Alcorn, John Akin, Matt Suker and Thomas Hevery.

The number one man and number two man so far respectively are Paul Bennett and Matt Suker.

Coach Cubbon hopes to schedule matches with Georgia, Florida, Georgia Tech and several junior colleges in this area, which will be the largest schedule the freshmen team has played in recent years

Coach Cubbon has asked that any freshmen students who are interested in playing on the freshmen team contact him at his office in Tully Gymnasium.

Equipment Manager For FSU

Psychology, Football Give 'Mr. Dix' A Job

An interest in psychology, boys, and football combines to give Mr. Tillman Dixon, better known as "Mr. Dix" to Seminole athletes, a job he has always wanted.

"Mr. Dix" serves as the equipment manager for the Florida State Seminoles. His job includes many responsibilities which most fans are unable to imagine.

In his ninth year with the Semnoles, Mr. Dixon has, in his own words, "watched the boys grow from immaturity to manhood in four years, and feels that he has a part in this development of both men and athletes.

"Each boy has to be treated differently, to suit their own particular needs," said Dixon and this seems to be the part of his work that he enjoys the most. Taking an interest in each of the footballers that enter the stadium gates, Mr. Dixon knows more than most of the coaches nr even some of the parents . . . and he never hesitates to give a hand to anyone. Spending 11 to 16 hours at the stadium each day, Mr. Dixon also spends plenty of time with the players and knows just how each one must be fitted to his uniform. Some have large feet . . . others need large shoulder pads . . . still others want their game pants to fit just so, no matter how long it takes to fit them. Each of these jobs fall to Mr. Dixon or to one of his student assistants. He has three student assistants, Jim Seward, Causey Lee, and Billy Preston, who can be found in the locker room or on the practice field three or four hours a day.

Most of Mr. Dixon's morning is spent washing jerseys, both for practice and game time; stacking shoulder and hip pads, and hanging helmets in their place In the afternoon he puts a new jersey, socks, and other equipment into each locker before the players arrive for practice at 4 p.m. After each practice session the jerseys and socks must be stacked, ready for cleaning in the morning.

The equipment and locker room is noted as being one of the most complete in the South, keeping track of over 5,000 pieces of equipment. Each varsity team member has a locker complete with each item needed (exclusing pads) for any out-of-town trip. They also have screened lockers, designed by "Mr. Dix" for better ventilation, which holds all of their daily practicing equipment.

Mr. Dixon is a graduate of Madison Bush School in Madison, Fla., where he lettered in three sports; basketball, football and track He and his wife, Johnnie like Tallahassee very much and hope to stay here until he retires —which is a long time off, according to "Mr. Dix."

Circus Meets Requests To Give 'Flying High' Show In Three States

weekend. The circus is presmaking plans for a three-show in Miami and a one-day earance in Jacksonville this

Mary Stearns, a member of the circus specializing in the webb act and cloud swings, related the procedures and difficulties involved in putting these skilled performers on the road and in producing a successful show.

ESSENTIAL EQUIPMENT

The riggers are the first to leave with the van carrying all the essential equipment. Upon arriving a day earlier than the remainder of the troupe, the riggers, who are also performers in the circus, set up the dressing tents, the midway, and the aerial equipment. Including the riggers, the road show usually consists of 35 to 40 members who are interested in going and can afford the time spent on the road.

That part of the troupe arriving the day of the show is transported by a Greyhound bus now owned by the circus. If their regular driver "Charlie" is not available, they must travel in a FSU bus of the type used to convey students around campus. Besides driving the company, "Charlie" is responsible for the spotlights used during a performance.

FOOTBALL STADIUM

The show ordinarily lasts one to two hours as compared with the one of more than two hours presented at FSU. Miss Sterns stated that their reception has always been accompanied with much enthusiasm. Sometimes the troupe performs in a football stadium are find facilities like the huge, hemi-spherically domed modern structure which greeted them in Dothan last Friday.

The shows are by invitation and are financed by various organizations interested in bringing the display of talent to their locale. Aerial and ring acts alternating with stage acts and interspersed with the buffoonery and talent of the clowns constitute the repertoire for these performances.

Even though the girls are spared the job of setting up the circus, they do join in the breakdown of the tents and beavy woodwork stages after the show while managing to serenade the men in songs of praise to " . . . the riggers of Flying High."

RESORT RECREATION

This past summer, some of the members of the circus troupe taught swimming and some of their acts at Calloway Gardens, Ga. These members were in charge of recreation at the resort and were joined by some of the former members of the circus living in the vicinity.

A special point of interest in the circus' official title is the "Flying-High." "Flying" is regarded as the part of the act in which the performers are without support of any type and are in no contact with one another, thus "flying" through the air. The performers are regarded as flicrs and catchers.

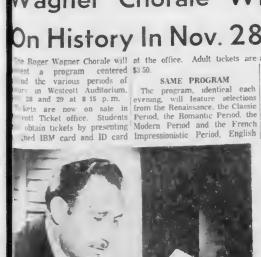
The circus is now blessed with a test of their own. A little larger than the one on loan from the Sarasota Sailor Circus last May, this new one will house the show this spring.

Wagner Chorale Will Center On History In Nov. 28-29 Show

The Roger Wagner Chorale will present a program centered around the various periods of music in Westcott Auditorium, Nov. 28 and 29 at 8:15 p.m. Tickets are now on sale in the Dorott Ticket office. Students may obtain tickets by presenting their IBM card and ID card at the office. Adult tickets are $1.50.

SAME PROGRAM

The program, identical each evening, will feature selections from the Renaissance, the Classic Period, the Romantic Period, the Modern Period and the French Impressionistic Period. English Folk Songs, and Negro Spirituals will conclude the program.



Salli Terri, mezzo-soprano, will be a featured soloist during the evening performance. Miss Terri sings all types of music, but folk songs are "closest to her heart," she says. She has sung in Church choirs, on the radio and in nightclubs. Miss Terri has a Master of Science Degree in Education from the University of Southern California and has taught school in Japan as well as in the U.S.

GUITARIST

With guitarist Laurindo Almeida she has recorded several albums. The National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences commended the duet for their recordings of "Duets with Spanish Guitars" and "Conversations with the Guitar."

The Roger Wagner Chorale recordings of their arrangements featured in the program for the Westcott Show include "Ave Maria," "Hodie Christus Natus Est," "Vere Languores," "Belshazzar's Feast," and the folk songs, "Shenandoah," "O No John," "Jesus, Jesus Rest Your Head," "En Passant Pour La Lorraine," "Au Clair de la Lune," "Alouette," "He Never Said A Mumblin' Word," "Go Down Moses."

Other songs featured will be "Chanson," "Evensong," "Eloquence," "Recitative and Scherzello 'Queen Mab'," "Trois Chansoos," and "If I Got My Ticket, Can I Ride?"

ROGER WAGNER, DIRECTOR OF THE ROGER WAGNER Chorale, examines one of the scores that will be used in the program in Westcott Auditorium, Nov. 28 and 29 at 8:15 p.m.

Board Names Fee Changes Under New Trimester Plan

By HOWARD DENSON
Flambeau Staff Writer

The effects of the trimester system on student fees, faculty salaries, the school calendar and administrative salaries were discussed at the state Board of Control meeting Friday

Present semester fees will remain about the same in trimester operation as semester over ation, said Dr. Broward Culpepper, executive director of the BOC.

Students will be charged $60 for each session of the third trimester (the summer session), which is actually slightly in excess of the $18 for the other trimesters, Dr. Culpepper said.

HOUSING FEES

The housing fees will remain the same, although actually there will be a slight increase since the dormitories will be operated 16 instead of 18 weeks.

Out-of-state tuition will be scaled in the same manner.

The BOC members seemed to agree on these points, but balked at making an actual decision on faculty salaries. After the salary situation was discussed, Dr. Culpepper suggested the members delay action. They agreed and decided to vote on the issue at the Dec. 9 meeting.

The Board of Control also delayed action on administrative salaries, "which are generally regarded as low" by the presidents, until the Dec. 9 meeting.

The Inter-Institutional Committee on Salaries recommended that each regularly employed faculty member be assured employment for two and one-half trimesters each year.

Some faculty members may want to work only one or two trimesters, while some may be needed for three trimesters a year, Dr. Gordon W. Blackwell, president of Florida State University, said.

NOT WHOLE YEAR

It might become necessary to forbid some faculty members from working the whole year, if it becomes apparent that they are "burning themselves out," a BOC member said. The presidents agreed.

FSU will probably make the switch to the trimester system without financial trouble, even though it will be operating on the budget for the last part of the present biennial, Dr. Blackwell said. The University would even have some money left over for merit increases.

The salary now received by each faculty member for two semesters (nine months of the work) should be increased by 11 percent, effective Sept. 1, 1962, to compensate for the additional month of work time, the committee recommended.

Each regularly employed faculty member who is employed for three trimesters in the year will be paid during the two months of the additional one-half trimester at the same monthly rate established for the two and one-half trimester period, the committee recommended.

Some BOC members seemed to feel that the 20 percent increase in pay for faculty members teaching in summer school might not be appropriate. The university presidents, however, pointed out that Michigan State offered a 45 percent summer increase, Jacksonville University presents a 50 percent summer increase, and the University of Pittsburg offers a 20 1/3 per cent increase.

OVER-ALL INCREASE

The overall increase, 31 percent, is actually agreeable to the University of Pittsburg plan, they said.

The committee recommendations did not involve merit increases.

After conversions of salaries for all faculty members have been effected, in keeping with the

Bond Issue May Start In January

Some of the revenue certificates for the proposed $15 or $25 million to be borrowed by the State Board of Control may be issued by January, according to BOC official Bill Hendrix.

First, the board must determine how much money is needed and what buildings should be built, he said.

WOULD SUPPLEMENT

The monies—which would supplement the amount appropriated by the State Legislature—would be distributed among all the state universities. The borrowed funds would come from university revenue producers—such as dormitories and student building fees—and grants and donations, Hendrix said.

Florida State University would be able to construct a dormitory, some classrooms and labs and a student union when the funds are borrowed, the BOC official said.

The proposed funds would cover all buildings authorized by the Legislature plus the student unions at Gainesville and Tallahassee, said Dr. Milton W. Carothers, vice president of FSU.

Attorney General Ralph Odom, a lawyer for the BOC, headed a study that recommended that Gov. C. Farris Bryant's proposal to borrow $15 million for building constructions be increased to $25 million.

ORIGINAL MOTION

The original motion approving the $15 million was made by the State Cabinet in September.

Odom revealed in his study that a sufficient amount of unpledged revenues had accrued in the university system to support a $25 million issue.

Last week the BOC unanimously approved the proposal to set up machinery to issue bonds to supplement monies appropriated by the Legislature.

This call for additional funds was created by a lack of legislative appropriations, Dr. Gordon W. Blackwell, president of FSU, said.

The BOC proposal to borrow additional funds must be approved by the State Board of Education and the State Budget Commission. It is a projection of estimating money needing no obligation on the 1963 Legislature

Meteorological Question

Thermonuclear Blast To Control Storms?

Thermonuclear explosions could be used to deflect or dissipate threatening tropical storms a scientist told a group of meteorologists at Florida State University.

The meteorologists were attending the 97th National Meeting of the American Meteorological Society held at FSU Tuesday through yesterday.

RESEARCH FOR AEC

Jack W. Reed of Sandia Laboratory, Albuquerque, N.M., a Western Electric laboratory which does research for the Atomic Energy Commission, read a paper titled "Some Speculations of the Effects of Nuclear Explosions on Hurricanes" at one of the meetings.

His paper was one of about 50 read on topics ranging from tropical meteorology, statistical meteorology, meteorological education to stratospheric meteorology.

Multiple bursts might be used, said Reed, to generate "circular convection asymetry" which could put a damper on a hurricane or alter its path. Two bursts on opposite sides of a storm might be used, for instance, the distort the circular wind field.

ANOTHER SCHEME

"Another scheme may seem more promising," he said "The eye of a hurricane is filled with very warm dry air which has relatively low density and gives very low barometric pressure at ground level.

"A multi-megaton explosion in the eye would engulf this hot air and lift it high into the stratosphere, 50 or 100,000 feet above sea level and well above the storm circulation. Replacement air would pour in from the sides of the storm and being colder and heavier, it would raise the surface pressure. This in turn would cut wind speeds around the eye and damages would be reduced," he explained.

More study is needed, he added, to determine whether the hot dry air in the center could in fact be displaced

FALLOUT CONTROLLED

"Fallout from such a burst could be controlled by setting the explosion off about 8,000 feet above the ocean," he said. "The radioactive debris would then be carried to high altitudes in the stratosphere, mix with the world-wide circulatuaon, and take years to filter down to ground. By then the radioactivity would have decayed to insignificance. There would be no rainout, fallout, or radioactivity in the storm itself after a few hours.

"Storms should be blasted over the open ocean where the fall-out would be caused. In an experimental blast, a submarine would be stationed under the storm eye. It would surface and make weather observations before the burst, duck safely beneath the water during the blast, then re-surface and continue weather and air pressure measurements after the blast wave had passed and the radioactive cloud has risen to 18 or 20 miles altitude. Air pressure measurements would show conclusively whether or not the predicted storm filling had taken place."

10 Frats May Get Land

Tea Florida State University fraternities may be able to purchase land for new homes, according to Dean of Students R. R. Oglesby.

Plans for a "fraternity row" will be realized if negotiations for 12.6 acres of land west of the University School go through, he said.

The land, owned by Col. Reed, has been altered for sale for some time but it is only just recently that the price has come down to a level that seems feasible, he added. He has already told Dr. Milton Carothers, vice president of FSU, that he is agreeable to selling the land.

At least 12 groups have expressed "strong interest" in the project, according to Dr. Oglesby.

A non-profit corporation may be formed as a holding corporation by the fraternities to handle the land purchase, he said. This corporation would release the land to the individual groups as soon as they are ready to build.

Trimester Pressures

Homecoming, with its multitude of gala festivities, provokes serious thoughts regarding the role of such activities in the future of Florida State University. Furthermore, the role of all student extracurricular activities direly needs reevaluation and reduction.

A look at the Tally Ho reveals that this university does not lack in clubs, groups, and organizations to compete for a student's time. Among this bevy exist both groups which add to the participant's educational experience and those which are superfluous to the aims of the university.

The fat needs reduction.

Florida State is on the brink of a new pattern of education—the Trimester system In essence, this system is a speed-up program, designed to cram the same amount of academic work into a shorter period of time. Such cramming will require more effort and more hours of study on the part of the students. Time spent on outside activity, whether it be extracurricular or leisure, will have to be reduced if acceptable grades are to be maintained.

There are two ways which the reduction will take place.

ALL ACTIVITIES MAY continue at full force, demanding from its members as much as previously expected. Students who get caught up in the many pressures on their time will suffer scholastically, forcing them to either drop the activity or drop out of school. The groups will then die from lack of members.

Or, students may take the initiative and disband certain groups in favor of others or cut the activities of each organization to a level that will be a lesser demand on the time of the members.

The latter seems to be the much preferable solution.

FRATERNAL ORGANIZATIONS particularly will be faced with these problems. Many disgruntled members of the greek groups feel that the Trimester system is designed to drive them from the campus. This is not the intent, but it may very well be the result if fraternities and sororities refuse to adjust to the change.

Greeks are required to maintain the same grade average as independents. If they stubbornly refuse to revamp in order to give themselves adequate time to maintain a satisfactory academic record, the fraternal groups must blame themselves—not the Trimester system — for any weakening from loss of members.

STUDENT RELIGIOUS HOUSES are also affected. They must realize that their proper function is spiritual, not social. Worship is vital, but the trimmings offered by some of these club-like groups are not.

Activities of the hoard of specialized interest groups should be sliced. Some of these are complimentary to scholastic interests, but too often the elecion of officers is the only real function. Meetings, just for the sake of meeting, is a wasteful, time-consuming activity.

THESE ARE NOT ALL. Events like Homecoming and Circus Week-end need to be contained within realistic bounds. Other events may have to terminate completely.

FSU students have an unsightly roll of fat from too little academic exercise. The obesity will not be tolerated under the Trimester system. An immediate evaluation by each activity is needed. We must plan a diet now.

Homecoming Gettin g Sad

Despite devoted efforts on the part of some individuals, Homecoming seems to be getting sadder and sadder each succeeding year. Students in general are complaining, and not totally without reason.

One of the big complaints is the amount of time required in advance. Both floats and houses had to be devised and decorated, taking up far too much time and leaving the decorators exhausted for the festivities. One decorating effort should be sufficient.

The Pow-Wow is too long and drawn out. The idea is an enjoyable one and should be retained. However, it would be appreciated to a far greater degree if it was limited and reduced in length. Hard stadium seats become distracting after more than an hour of sitting.

The Homecoming dance becomes increasingly more unpopular. Efforts to schedule other parties are doused by Homecoming officials. This seems ridiculous. It is totally impossible to fit the entire student body into Tully Gym and still leave room for air to circulate. Keeping other groups from scheduling their own parties does not add to the appeal of the Homecoming Dance. It merely serves to increase resentment to the dance, and to Homecoming as a whole.

Homecoming is a time for alumni and students to meet, to enjoy each other's company, and to get to know each other better. Yet alumni are usually segregated like victims of the plague. Only at the barbeque did students meet the alumni, and only a few students were in attendance. There has been no concerted effort to promote alumni-student relations at this function or at any other function during the weekend.

Homecoming is a time to be enjoyed It has many good features But elimination of the glaring draw backs will make this the enjoyable experience it was designed to be. BCS

Alumni Donors

The Alumni have come and gone until next Homecoming. They didn't leave without a "thank you" in the form of some $16,000 which was presented to Florida State University on the behalf of the Alumni organization.

EVEN MORE GENEROUSLY, the Alumni have set a goal of $25,000 for the next year. This represents the equivalent of a pledge by our Alumni to contribute the aforementioned sum to this university.

With the growth of the University and the corresponding growth of need, every dollar counts We can appreciae it when the Alumni delve into their pockets and give FSU what money they can. The dollars don't come any easier to most of them than they do to FSU.

A GENEROUS ALUMNI is vital to the growth of this or any university. To know that our Alumni are aware of their importance to us, and that they stand ready within their means to back FSU with cash is reassuring

North Has Lead In Self-Righteousness

By ROBERT SANCHEZ

There was a dreadful tendency among damnyankees and other lower forms to smirk knowingly when I, as a fifteenth generation Floridian, chose to exercise my right to make some remarks mildly critical of the South in Friday's Flambeau.

BUT IF THESE PEOPLE think that Florida, in abandoning the chains of Southern tradition, should accept in turn the character of the North, they are sadly mistaken. That would be a frying-pan-to-fire progression if there ever was one.

It may indeed be true that the North has advanced farther than the South in some respects, but this "progress" has been made possible largely through eight decades of exploitation of the South. Even so, the progress of the North in education, race relations, and other areas has been little better than that of the South when considered in relation to the problems which the regions faced and the resources available to cope with these problems. In one respect, however, the North has an unquestioned and insurmountable lead. That is the field of hypocritical self-righteousness.

NORTHERNERS AND THE Northern press are always the first on the scene when an area of the South is going through the agony of solving one of its racial problems. They are eager to cast the first stone, tossing out generalities about "southerners" which they would roundly criticize if applied to a pet racial or minority group. Meanwhile, such problems are by no means solved in the North.

Tr-e.aandtheen

Widespread racial and religious discrimination continues in housing and employment. Violence and juvenile delinquency present a lurid image to the world. Furthermore, all states in the North are doing far less for public education in relation to their income than the poorest state in the South.

BUT ATTACKING THE SOUTH has become a favorite sport of Northern politicians who wish to ignore problems in their own areas. It is one thing when LeRoy Collins, Luther Hodges or Ralph McGill makes a courageous statement critical of those in the South who would exploit or misrepresent their native region It is quite another for Senator Jacob Javits of New York, drooling over the prospect of thousands of minority-group votes, to make pious pronouncements about violence in New Orleans when it is not even safe to walk the streets of New York.

FLORIDA IS FLORIDA. If it is gradually disassociating itself from the more obnoxious aspects of Southern tradition, that does not mean that it must of necessity accept the pernicious characteristics of the North. There is no reason to suppose that the carpetbaggers now pouring in from the crime-iled, smog-bound industrial slums of the North are at all preferable to the tenant farmers and pea pickers who move into Florida from just across the border in Alabama. Rather, Florida must develop its own cultural pattern, as did California, separate and distinct from those of other regions. Just as it would be a relief if the rebel-flag waving, "Dixie"-singing "grits and potlikker" crowd would shut up, so it would be doubly beneficial for the state if those who constantly talk about how much better things are "back up North," and who call themselves, New Yorkers, Rhode Islanders, etc., would either go back up north to their beloved New York, Rhode Island, etc., or else call themselves "Floridians" and set to work trying to build a better state with traditions of its own.

Ideology

U.S. Moral Fiber Red Target

By ALLAN DERMOTT

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fifth and last of a five part series on Communist Ideology.

Throughout the four previous columns of this series, it has been stated and pointed out by examples that the Communists' sole aim is to conquer the world. In order to do this, the United States must be liquidated either by atomic warfare or by Insectivization of the American people, which in turn will enable the Reds to wreck our political and economic systems. Khrushchev prefers the latter by far; he does not want to destroy the American buildings and factories—just the people. If the Reds can destroy the moral and high standards of our nation, they will be at the same time putting intelligence and individuality in the dark All that will be left is American bodies with nothing but animal characteristics. Thus, Khrushchev would have destroyed the American mind. There would be nothing to resist the Communists from wrecking our political and economic systems, thus, causing the American nation to fall.

AS HUNTER (see Flambeau, Nov. 7) says, "Unless our people are alerted to this most evil strategy, they cannot be expected to take effective steps to immunize themselves against its spread. No less than the corruption of the whole moral fiber of our nation is sought. Once this is achieved, the enemy will have no worry about being able to complete the remainder of the brainwashing treatment.

"Instead of falling into the trap of making Powers a scapegoat, we must recognize that this concerns a common ailment. The softening up of the United States has been Khrushchev's most ambitious project. The Kremlin knows that the longer this goes undetected, the more difficult it will be to recognize and counteract."

SOME PEOPLE FEEL the American character is not declining, but these are only among the many who do not realize that in the United States there is an average of one rape every thirty-eight seconds of every day. They do not realize that in a survey of a very large number of women who married before they were twenty, forty percent admitted that they were pregnant before they had married.

The need is not for better preventing-of-conception methods, but a higher moral character. It is strong character which gives one strength and the ability of the most powerful thinking We must be alert to this and strive to improve ourselves. Only by doing this can we find progress in the demand to meet the Communist challenge in our own backyard.

TROY DID NOT FALL because the Grecian army was so much better than that of the Trojans. Within the city walls nine Greeks came out of the wooden horse and opened the city gates of Troy to the Grecian army. The blurry eyed Trojans fell with their bellies full of wine.

Rome also fell because the demoralization of its people enabled the barbarian tribes to overrun it. We must be alert to this and not let the moral levels and standards of our country fall, or history may repeat itself

Reb Flag Or Yank Dance

TO THE EDITOR:

Mr. Sanchez apparently takes the attitude that the South is something disgraceful. Therefore, any catering to Southern tradition is ridiculous. Allow me to enlighten him: there are facets of the South which we are ashamed of. A case in point is our Southern school system. However, may I remind Mr. Sanchez that one of the causes of this just might possibly be the economic devastation wrought by the enlightened North.

It will take another hundred years for the South to recover from this. Meanwhile, the enlightened North might do very well to send Peace Corps members to the South. Let me remind him, however, that it is a peace corps, not an agitation corps This we have seen only recently in the unfortunate Nigerian incident However, the agitators seem to have forgotten that very little is ever gained in such disturbances as they cause. After all, the North did win the war, but they have certainly lost the peace—even a hundred years later — which doesn't say much for their peace making abilities.

There are other facets of the south of which I am very proud however I am currently enrolled in the University of Illinois (It is a better school—this I admit) and I am very glad to be able to tell my Northern friends that I have friends who are colored. However, they only have colored classmates. I am proud of our Southern men — you can't imagine how disgusting it is to have to explain to a man how to do a very simple carpentry job. I am proud of our Southern women, and despite the emancipation of women, I am glad that we don't direct traffic on the streets. I am proud of our Southern children—at least they know to say 'yes ma'am and no ma'am.' And I am also proud of many things in our Southern school system. You cannot teach in Florida without a college degree—but you can in Illinois

The Southern tradition is carried to extremes sometimes. However, I fail to see that the carrying of the flag is any more ridiculous than the war dance of Chief Illiniwek if it creates enthusiasm. Apparently the majority of the students do feel that it is good, for a great cheer always goes up when the flag comes out. As long as the students like it and derive a certain benefit from it, it does not hurt anything If Mr Sanchez—who apparently is not too upset by Southern Schools, since he is enrolled in one—is disturbed by this, then i suggest that he stay home from the football games, because the majority of the students seem to like it. And the rule of the majority is one of the first precepts of the American government—which he apparently advocates as opposed to the South

JOEL McNEIL

KA Speaks His Mind

MR. SANCHEZ:

We must first remind you that our fraternity is only southern in origin but is not sectional or by any means limited to the "Old South."

Our fraternity idealizes the characteristics found in the saint-like virtues of its founding father, Robert Edward Lee. And among these virtues is not belittlement and narrow mindedness which you seem to show toward everything you do not quite understand, including art departments.

You, my dear sir, seem to suffer from that proverbial mechanical difficulty, namely, putting your mouth in gear before your brain is engaged. I think that you would do well to analyze before you prognosticate or pass judgment upon anyone or any thing

Secondly, the flag carrying before the game and at half time was suggested to us by Coach Peterson to promote school spirit and not to wave the flag of the South. This was not a product of our so-called "sowbelly and segregation" philosophy.

I will proudly state that my brothers and I hold high the tradition of the southern gentleman, christianity and respect for womanhood; these are principles on which our fraternity was founded, and not the state of the union south of the Mason-Dixon line These are the ideals we feel are inculcated in the "stars and bars" and not all the trash that you intimate.

Senator Asks 'What's Wrong With You'?

TO THE EDITOR

In answer to the Sanchez letter in the last Flambeau I should like to say that although he had one or two good points, they were completely smothered by the rest of his irrational argument. Before I get into my argument, I should like to point out the following. I am not a KA, I was not born in the South, I love the South, and I resent your statement saying that because one lives in the South part of Florida, that one is more Northern than Southern.

The Confederate flag belongs at our football games because it does not represent 'the land of sowbelly and segregation," but rather a symbol of our school spirit, and of a wonderful Southern tradition of hospitality.

I think Mr. Sanchez was entirely out of place by stating that the south leads the nation in backwardness. I wonder if he knows the percentage of literacy in some of our great Northern cities. Sanchez goes on to say that the Southern schools are "a national disgrace" (has he ever heard of Emory, Duke, William and Mary or even FSU for that matter?), that culturally the South is void (this is ridiculous), and that "it teems with filth, disease, illiteracy, poverty, violence, corruption, and hypocrisy" (now I know Sanchez has never seen a Northern city, especially New York City).

Mr. Sanchez, I visit the North every summer, but I still am proud to be a Southerner!!!

WHAT IS WRONG WITH YOU?

TOM SISCO
Freshman Men's Senator

Won't Join 'Union'

MR. SANCHEZ:

I gather from your article . . . that you don't like the South in general and FSU in particular. As for not liking the South, that's fine with me. You are certainly entitled to your opinion. But if the South is so bad, just why don't you leave? This would take a great deal off your conscience what with all the "filth, disease, illiteracy, poverty, violence, corruption, and hypocrisy" you have to put up with May I suggest you go to New York City, Chicago, or Washington We all know that these great examples of northern progress are absolutely free of the things you are so strongly against.

You proceed to decide that Florida is a cultural void (what are you doing when you should be attending classes, Mr. Sanchez?), that it is growing away from its southern neighbors, that Floridians want to be identified with the South so they can shirk responsibility, etc. Are you God. Mr Sanchez? Are these things made true by you saying so? I think not.

You say the Peace Corps is not needed as badly in Nigeria as in Alabama. You would undoubtedly think it is needed in Little Rock as well. Now Mr. Sanchez, don't you think both situations were handled quite well by the federal troops? Putting a bayonet in daughter's back will put a stop to Pop's school-picketing but quick. After all, cold steel and hot lead always were able to get a point across faster than words.

"It's time for Florida to rejoin the Union." Shouldn't we wait until the reconstruction is over, Mr. Sanchez? I for one, am damn tired of being told how to live and who to sleep with; and I'm not going to "join the Union" until it stops.

It may come as a shock to you, Mr. Bob (Why would anyone want to be identified with the South) Sanchez, but there are many people who would stand up just as quickly for the playing of Dixie as for the playing of The Star Spangled Banner. I'm one of these people. I doubt however if you have enough spirit to stand up for either.

His Ears Still Smoke

DEAR BOBBY:

Ah say, son. My ears are still smoking from all that righteous indignation about my old beaten rebel flag. You're absolutely right, I'm ashamed to be identified with the South and its scum like Alvin York (Sgt.), George Washington Carver, Andrew Jackson, Sam Rayburn, Sam Houston Dean Rusk, Pogo, etc. I (almost) wish I were a Yankee so I could include in my heritage such notables as Al Capone, John Dillinger, Lucky Luciana, Boss Tweed, Benedict Arnold, James Hoffa, the Rosenbergs, and Alfred E Newman Yes, I blush in shame for living in the land of cotton, fried chicken, Scarlett O'Hara, damn near every Miss America, and (naturally), mint juleps. Oh! If only my home were known for zip-guns, heroin, blackboard jungles, gang wars, and rutabagas. Wish I had that kind of culture.

But this flag business, boy. I say anyone who can see only Little Rock and the KKK in the Confederate flag is sick, sick, sick. When I see that old flag I whoop it up for General Lee, Stonewall, Honest Abe (because he was one of the few moderate Yankees), ole mammy, and (naturally) sip a little julep. That flag is as much a rightful part of American heritage as the Pine tree shilling.

When I see Old Glory I remember Iwo Jima, Teddy Roosevelt, San Juan Hill, The Constitutional Convention, Ben Franklin, the opening of the West, the Lafayette Escadrille, ad inf. If your outlook is really as bitter as it seems, I imagine Old Glory brings forth from you only visions of the influenza epidemic, prohibition, New England witch hunts, and Murder, Inc.

Loosen up, son. No harm intended in the rebel flag. Check the list of congressional medal holders if you're still in doubt about loyalties.

DR. WILEY HOUSEWRIGHT WAS PRESENTED A CERTIFICATE OF HONORARY MEMBERSHIP TO GOLD KEY BY CHARLIE Hawkins, president, at the Homecoming Banquet Saturday night.

Secretary Adams, Dr. Housewright Made Honorary Gold Key Members

Secretary of State Tom Adams and Dr. Wiley Housewright were awarded honorary memberships in Gold Key, Florida State University men's honorary, at the Homecoming banquet Saturday night.

An honorary membership in Garnet Key, women's honorary, was awarded to Dr. Anna Forbes Liddell.

GOLD KEY PRESIDENT

The award to Adams and Dr. Housewright was presented by Gold Key President Charlie Hawkins.

The citation describing Adams as "one of the most dynamic members Florida has ever had to the Cabinet" and said in less than a year in this office "he has certainly demonstrated and proven his administrative leadership abilities."

Gold Key's citation of Adams also mentioned his legislative activities before becoming secretary of state last January.

"As a senator, he campaigned successfully for better management of Florida's institutions by creating the divisions of corrections, of child training and of mental health," it said "He headed the inquiry which brought about the first major reorganization of state government since adoption of the Constitution in 1885. He has worked for passage of laws in such diverse areas as forest research, highway safety, suitable homes for dependent children, and continuous legislative review of spending by state agencies. He served as chairman of the Legislative Council."

HOUSEWRIGHT AWARD

The award to Housewright, FSU professor of music education, said:

"The most striking aspect of this man's career as a music educator is its range and diversity. He has been instrumental in building the graduate program in music education at our University into one of the most highly regarded in the nation, and he personally has supervised numerous master's and doctoral theses."

Under his organization and direction, the Florida State University Singers have been noted as one of the most expert choral groups in this country. This man serves as a member of the United States Commission for UNESCO and is also on the advisory panel of the Department of State's International Cultural Exchange Program."

LIDDELL AWARDED

Dr. Liddell, professor of philosophy, who has served on the FSU faculty since 1926, was given the honorary membership of Garnet Key by its president, Suzy Workizer.

The citation said: "From the time of her first years at this institution, she has continually been a favorite of the students. Perhaps this has been due to the interest she has always shown in students and student life."

It said she had the distinction of being the first woman ever to receive the Ph.D. degree from University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

"Although she has spent almost the whole of her professional career on this campus, her dedication has been greater and far beyond the realms outlined by the boundaries of the University," the citation said.

Both Miss Liddell and Dr. Housewright have been named Distinguished Professor of the Year at FSU by their fellow faculty members. Housewright was awarded this honor last spring and Miss Liddell two years ago.

Blackwell Says

Only 2 Universities

State support of just two major centers of higher education with research and graduate programs was called for by Florida State University President Gordon W. Blackwell at the Homecoming banquet Saturday night.

Governor of Florida C. Farris Bryant was scheduled to speak at the banquet but was unable to because of a severe case of laryngitis. Governor and Mrs. Bryant did, however, attend the banquet.

President Blackwell told the banquet audience, which included Board of Control members and state legislators as well as alumni, that he could "hardly see that Florida can support more than two large universities."

He cautioned that the state should, "Be sure as to how our resources can best be used."

He said that he saw a need for further state-wide coordination of the patterns of education Higher education especially at the graduate level and in research work is very important if Florida is to "meet its destiny in the space age."

"Continuing support of our alumni" was called for by Dr. Blackwell as being essential to the further progress of the school.

intent of the Legislature, the surplus moneys will be used for merit increases. These merit increases will be recommended by the presidents and approved by the Board of Control through the normal budget process," the committee report said.

The merit increases which the University would be able to offer will not equal the amount which the Legislature recommended, Dr. Blackwell said.

There will be 14 full weeks of instruction in each of the terms on a semester-credit basis, the committee said.

Actually, the faculty members would be working more than 14 weeks, because they would be involved with registration, orientation, and examinations.

AMOUNT OF WORK

Faculty members will be doing the same amount of work in two trimesters as they do in eight months, Dr. Blackwell said.

The universities must see, however, that the quality of their work is just as much as under the trimester system, he said.

Some faculty members feel that since they will be doing 25 percent more work, they should be paid a 25 percent overall increase in pay, the FSU president said.

CALENDAR

The BOC also approved the calendar for next year, stipulating that the institutions could alter the dates slightly.

The first trimester will begin and all scheduled activities will schedule classes on the Friday following Thanksgiving.

The second trimester will start Jan. 7, 1963.

The third trimester (first session) will start around May 1, and all scheduled activities will be concluded by Aug. 10.

The second session of the trimester will begin June 20, 1963.

COMMENCEMENT

There will be only one major commencement ceremony at each institution each year, the Council of Presidents recommended.

Thanksgiving Day will be a happier, more meaningful day...

WORSHIP together this week

you need not walk alone

IT'S a story we all know and love—the first Pilgrim Thanksgiving. The excitement in their little homes must have been pretty much as it is today—the tantalizing smells of roast turkey and pumpkin pie—the bustle and rush of eager children—it must have been a wonderful day!

But before the Pilgrims sat down to their feast they observed the true meaning of Thanksgiving. They all gathered together in their meetinghouse to give thanks for the good they had received, for survival through a long year of hardship, and to pray for the strength and courage to keep their faith in this strange, new land.

This Thanksgiving, why not take your family to your house of worship. A quiet hour of prayer and thanks will make your holiday so much more meaningful.

Wherever you are . . . whatever your beliefs may be . . . take time to offer your words of thanks . . . just as the Pilgrims did more than 300 years ago.

Worship together this week

you need not walk alone

DORMAN HALL TOOK FIRST PLACE IN WOMEN'S ON-CAMPUS RESIDENCE DECORATION (above) while Alpha Chi and Sig Ep skunked all other entries in the Most Humorous division

Decoration Award In Areas Are Told

Pi Kappa Apha fraternity took top honors in two divisions of the Homecoming decorating contests this weekend.

The Pikes received first prize for fraternity housing decorations, and their float built in cooperation with Alpha Gamma Delta sorority for the Homecoming parade was designated "Best All-Around." Theme of the float was "Give Those Southerners the Blues."

HOUSE DECORATIONS

First place in the sorority house decorating contest went to Zeta Tau Alpha.

Phi Delta Theta received second in fraternity house decorations and Chi Omega, second in the sorority division.

Kellum Hall won over Smith West Hall for first place in men's residence halls decorations.

Dorman Hall took first place in the decorating contest for women's residence halls with Jennie Murphree coming in second.

In the off-campus housing division Selby Women's Scholarship House took first prize with the second place award going to the men's scholarship house.

The Baptist Student Union received first prize among the non-residence centers with the Catholic Student Center receiving second place.

FLOAT DECORATIONS

In float competition, the Zeta Tau Alpha and Theta Chi float, "Old Folks at Home," received the prize for being "Most Original."

"Hunt 'em Down," the Alpha Delta Pi and Kappa Sigma float received the "Most Beautiful" award.

The prize for the "Most Humorous" float went to Alpha Chi Omega and Sigma Phi Epsilon for their "Skunk 'em Seminoles" float.

The "Most Appropriate to the Theme" award went to the Kappa Delta and Kappa Alpha float, "Southern Fun in '61."

Honorable mention in the float competition went to Delta Gamma and Lambda Chi Alpha for their float "Riverboat and Canoe."

PIKE HOUSE

The Pi Kappa Alpha house decorations consisted of a rocket shooting at a Confederate general lying in a crater waving a Confederate flag with the theme "Just for fun! Sammy Slays Southerners in '61."

Theme of the Zeta decorations was "Scare those Cotton Pickin' Southerners." A 20-foot scarecrow and a Southern gentleman were in the front yard amid large cotton plants.

Dorman Hall theme was "Southern Chicken is Easy Pickin' with chickens representing the Mississippi Southern players being chased by a Seminole Indian.

KELLUM THEME

"Swinging Fun In '61" was the theme of the Kellum decorations with a Seminole Indian who has just kicked a Southern gentleman over the goal post where he is swinging back and forth.

A Seminole Indian Dixieland Band was represented by cutouts on a stage at the Selby House carrying out the theme "Dixieland Fun In '61."

A huge steamboat covering the entire front of the building comprised the decorations at the Baptist Student Union.

PI KAPPA ALPHA SWEPT THE FIELD IN DECORATING PRIZES THIS WEEKEND as judges awarded them First Place for both their float and the house decorations.

Alums Elect Officers

Edward M. Eissey of West Palm Beach was named president-elect of Florida State University's Alumni Association at a business meeting during Homecoming at which Philip J. Fleming of Bradenton took over as president for the next year.

Eissey, principal of Greenacres School in West Palm Beach, received the B.S. degree at FSU in 1950. He is a member of Kappa Delta Pi, the Palm Beach County Guidance Center and a Suncoast Conference Commissioner. He is a director in the FSU Alumni Association.

Elected secretary was Mrs. Randall Chase (Julia Alice Gehan) of Sanford. A member of Alpha Omicron Pi, Mrs. Chase received her B.S. degree at FSU in 1952. J. C. Hartsfield of Tallahassee was elected treasurer. Hartsfield is sales manager of Foremost Dairies Inc. and past president of the Leon County FSU Alumni Club. He received his B.S. degree in 1949.

Other officers elected at the Saturday meeting include the following district directors: District I, Charles F. Maxoo of Tampa; District III, James Robert Crabtree of Pensacola; District IV, Peter Llewellyn Nimkoff of Miami; District V, Carl L. Thompson, Jr. of Orlando; District VII, Hana W. Tews of Sarasota; and Out of State Director Carmen Louis Battaglia of Atlanta.

Southern Hands FSU Homecoming Defeat

Tribe Faces Houston Last

Wendell Campbell and Charlie Parker haul down Gene Roberts at the FSU 32

Florida State Seminoles are eyeing their final game of the season against the Houston Cougars as they recover from a decisive 12-0 whipping at the hands of Mississippi Southern.

An enthusiastic Homecoming crowd watched the Southerners manhandle the tribe in every category. The score was not indicative of the extent of the setback.

The loss closed the Seminoles home schedule and gave them a 4-4-1 record going into the final tilt.

Southern scored once in each half to achieve their sixth win over Florida State. Seconds before the close of the first half, Bill Coleman prepared to hold in an apparent field goal attempt. The kick was a fake, however, and Coleman pitched to halfback Jim Harvard for the touchdown.

In the final period, Southern knotched their final tally after Gene Roberts, FSU fullback, fumbled on his own 35. Quarterback Don Field slipped for six inches and the touchdown.

Wenday Campbell, Southern fullback from Pensacola, Fla. spearheaded the Mississippi attack in the final drive. All total, the big fullback compiled 86 yards in 15 attempts.

Florida State never seriously threatened the victor's goalline. The tribe never got closer than the Mississippi 18 yard stripe.

Sophomore Charley Calhoun was one of the sole bright spots in the FSU contribution. The slight punting specialist averaged 44.6 yards on six boots. His longest was a 52 yard effor: in the third quarter.

Ed Feeley, Seminoles' leading offensive threat, found going rough against the stout Mississippi defense. The little quarterback passed for only 33 yards and was set-back enough to give him a minus 18 yards in rushing.

Florida State will be out to avenge a tight 7-6 defeat by the Cougars last year.

Houston, with a 3-4-1 record to date, will have one more clash, against Oregon State, before closing the season.

Seven Florida State linemen and three backs will be playing their last game for the tribe. Ends Jim Daniel and Fred Grimes; tackles Don Donatelli, Steve Klesnis, and Joe Verbinski; guard Frank DeFrancesco; center Larry Hood; fullback Paul Andrews; quarterback Ray Bickford; and halfback Jack Foreland will make their final appearance.

Houston has an experienced team manning its 1961 edition. The Cougars have 27 returning letternen, seven of these were starters last season.

Houston's big strength is a rushing defense. Before their recent defeat by Oklahoma State the Cougars had allowed only 89.4 rushing yards per game.

Houston will have a punter to match Florida State's Charley Calhoun. Larry Lindsey holds the Cougar school record with a 40.6 yards per kick average.

Billy Roland, a junior quarterback, will be directing the Houston attack. The Cougars operate from a winged-T, slot-T, and spread formation. Roland, who scored on a 54-yard touchdown run against Tulsa leads the team in total offense. Before the Oklahoma State tilt, Roland had passed for 228 yards and run for 200

Freshmen Cagers Battle Varsity

By DALE MARLER

Florida State's veteran Seminole basketball team will take on the school's freshman team and transfers tonight in a pre-season warm-up game.

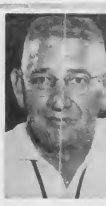
Game time is 7:45 p.m. at FSU's Tully gymnasium. There will be no admission charged. Head Coach J. K. (Bud) Kennedy and Assistant Coach Hugh Durham feel that this year's freshman team will give the varsity Seminoles a better than average battle.

Coach Kennedy said "that this year's freshman team should be one of the finest in the history of FSU.

"Of course, they're handicapped by the fact that they will have to adjust to FSU's type of offense," he continued.

With 13 men on this year's varsity squad, the Seminoles will depend heavily upon the game experience of seven returning lettermen. Coach Kennedy stated that, "last year we installed a new type of offense (the Seminole shuffle) in a period of six weeks. A year's experience has made a lot of difference, and with the loss of one player, the Cagers are in good shape for the 1961-62 season.

The Seminoles play their first varsity game on Dec. 2, at Ohio State.



Kennedy has been impressed with the individual performances of almost every player on the squad. He has been especially pleased with 6'4" letterman, Rufus Ashworth, a senior from Miami.

A forward last year, Ashworth was shifted to guard this season and readily adapted to this change. "He is about the only double-duty man we've got," Kennedy pointed out. "He is doing a fine job for us."

Two highly talented transfers, 6'7" Bob Rose and 6'2" Pete Rogers, will be ineligible this season, but will start for the freshman team in Tuesday night's warm-up game.

The probable starting lineup for the varsity in the pre-season game will be as follows: center, Ray Swain, Jacksonville; forwards, Dave Fedor, Zephyrhills, and Charlie Long, Louisville, Ky.; guards, Dale Ruckets, Versailles, Ind., and Rufus Ashworth, Miami, or Jack Davis, Hagerston, Ind.

The freshmen starting line-up will consist of Bob Rose, center from Jacksonville; forwards, Jerry Shirley, from Mobile, Ala., and Cal Hugo, from Madison, Wis.; guards, Ross Winter, from Mobile, Ala., and Pete Rogers from Daytona Beach.

Frat Playoffs Slated Tonight

Final games between the top teams for the first, second, and third places in fraternity basketball will be played tonight at 5:30 p.m., preceding the Varsity-Freshmen game in Tully Gym.

A playoff between Phi Delta Theta and Lamba Chi Alpha will determine the third place winner in the Garnet League while the final game in the Gold League will be played between Theta Chi and Kappa Sigma.

In the total fraternity team standings for swimming, golf, and tennis, Kappa Alpha has the leadeding out Theta Chi by two points. Sigma Chi, Kappa Sigma, and Phi Delta Theta are the other teams in the top five groupings.

In the dorm-independent tennis results, Geology copped the lead, followed by the Wesley Foundation for the singles tournament. In the doubles competition the Villagers, who finished third in the singles, copped the title. They were followed by the Yankee-Doodlers.

The total team points for the dorm-independent standings rank the Kellum I team as first, and the Physical Education Majors club second. The Villagers, Geology and the Foundation Scholarship Organization were ranked as the third, fourth, and fifth teams respectively.

The playoffs in the basketball tournament will begin November 27, and will be between the top two teams in each league.

How Political Is Student Politics? Few People Know, Says 'Harpers'

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article is the fourth in a series which have been condensed by FLAMBEAU special writer Ann Carrell. The series has been taken from a special college supplement in the October issue of HARPER'S MAGAZINE. The article is entitled, "The Mirage of College Politics", and was written by Dr. Philip Rieff.

Once again we are hearing a good deal about the "politics of college youth" . . . Few campus phenomena seem to be so widely reported and, at the same time, so oddly distorted. For there has been very little careful analysis of what, precisely, is new about the present student activity, and even less concerning the ways in which it is, and is not, political.

One reason for the distortion, I think, is that so many of the reactions to the political moods of college youth today come from my own generation of the radical 'thirties and 'forties, and these views are likely to have no firmer basis than our own autobiographies—. . .

The fact is that no one compels the young today. Therefore they must compel each other . . . What passes for politics among them may be more accurately described, perhaps, as their mood of excitement at discovering that they are alone and without direction from the adult worlds of power and responsibility . . .

We must remember, however, that a lack of connection with power and responsibility is an established quality of college life in America. Until the 'thirties, this isolation was taken for granted by the students themselves—they happily pursued other interests. From the 'thirties until today there has been a slow—and very partial—development of a different style of political life . . .

In effect, American students still remain in their comfortable ghetto, apart from the political process, but some no longer think their condition is a fortunate privilege, and they try to express their feelings about it.

* * * *

. . . It is significant that the effort to marshal young people —particularly students—into national or party organizations largely failed in this country in the 'thirties. This was not because similar conditions of unemployment did not exist here but because the parties and the American government had different attitudes toward the young . . .

. . . through most of our history, American students have been both uniquely free of adult politics and notoriously uninterested . . .

. . . in order to maintain his status and his privileges, the student is required to keep out of trouble. His politics, like his other extracurricular activities, must be conducted in approved ways. And the way most approved is a mock version of adult national party politics called "student government." This is encouraged, not to give the students an opportunity to govern themselves, but as a way of rendering genuine political interest innocuous. Student government is most acceptable when it mimics—indeed parodies—adult politics . . .

All the political trimmings are there except the real issues and the real relation between action and power which are the very substance of politics. Such a relation might be built by an attempt to imitate the European model, in which students would be given a disciplined and active role in adult politics and would in return have some voice in adult political decisions. But even during the 'thirties this was regarded as not to most of the students themselves as well as to their elders.

* * * *

. . . there have been insistent claims that, after years of apparent deadness, American college life has recently undergone a mysterious political quickening . . .

I would argue that no such major change has taken place and that beneath the publicized flurries of student political activity, the same basic attitudes continue. In the first place, the students involved in the new activity remain a small minority—the great mass of students remain quite apathetic and resigned . . .

But this is not a major change, for the politics of American youth has always been a negative anti-politics. The chief actions the students have taken recently have been protests against abuses of power by their elders and indeed against power itself . . .

* * * *

On the campus itself, the radical young are, predictably, anti-organization men. Their own organizations function as gadflies to the main body or student organizations which are generally conservative. And in the last year or so, overt student conservatism has become more vocal and publicized than ever before . . . Some teachers have observed among the professedly conservative students both articulate criticism of organized mass society in all its forms— . . . —a kind of nostalgic individualism.

My own observation at the campus conservatives is somewhat different. These students seem to me to be rejecting not only radicalism but the advanced college culture. They are able to locate both resentments on the campus intellectuals . . .

In effect, the young conservatives form an aggressive minority of nonintellectual students who now stand openly for the traditional college culture which implicitly approved of athletes, fraternities, old-fashioned patriotism, and the virtues of good business as opposed to good works . . .

Moreover, by backing the campus liberals and their many mentors on the faculty, the conservatives do demonstrate an old-fashioned American individualism of a sort . . . And

Senate To Help Buy Circus Tent

Steps to underwrite the purchase of a bail-ring tent for Flying High, the nationally-known University Circus, were taken Wednesday afternoon by the Student Senate.

The senators agreed to underwrite the purchase of a $22,600 tent from Ringling Bros., Barnum and Bailey, and guaranteed a $10,000 loan payment per year . . . The tent will be paid for in full by the University, according to Student Body Vice President Ken Vinson Assenderp.

The university will borrow money from the university surplus, and will be able to get an interest-free loan, the vice president said.

IN FIVE YEARS

The tent must be paid for within five years, starting next spring. First, however, the State Board of Control must give its approval for the action, he said.

The university must point out to the BOC other ways that the tent can be paid for in case the Circus revenue doesn't cover the $3,000 yearly payment.

The yearly $1,500 rental of the present tent would account for $7,500 of the purchase price—leaving $15,000 for the Senate to underwrite.

Coach Jack Haskins said the

Novice Debate Team Travels

Debaters from Florida State University will travel to Gainesville this weekend to debate in the University of Florida Invitational Debate Tournament.

The novice team that will represent FSU against novice teams from Florida and Georgia, will be James Smith and Bill McCarron on the affirmative and Joan Avery and Richard Erickson on the negative.

They will debate in five rounds on the topic: Resolved: that labor organizations should be under the jurisdiction of anti-trust legislation.

FSU is also sending a varsity affirmative team, to debate the varsity negative team, in a demonstration debate for the benefit of the novice debaters at the tournament. The varsity affirmative team will Linda Diz and Marilyn Young.

Miss Jeanne Graham, a graduate assistant in speech, will accompany the debaters on the trip. Immediate plans for the debate squad include a trip to Birmingham, Alabama next weekend for the Birmingham Southern Invitational Debate Tournament, and a debate with the alternate members of the squad against two inmates of the Federal Correctional Institution in Tallahassee, in the near future.

Future Interns Meet Wednesday

All prospective teachers throughout the University are urgently requested by Dean of the School of Education Mode Stone to attend a meeting in Westcott Auditorium at 7 p.m. Wednesday.

All available information will be presented concerning the trimester plan and its implications for students. An attempt will be made to answer questions raised by the students, he said.

Derby Is Tomorrow

College Avenue will be converted into a soap box derby runway tomorrow at 1:30 p.m. when Alpha Gamma Delta and Phi Delta Theta jointly purchase a derby race.

Eighteen soap boxes have entered the race. The entries are sponsored jointly by individual sororities and fraternities. A member of the sponsoring sorority will drive the car to the foot of the hill on College Avenue. Phi Tau pledges are responsible for the hay which will stop the speeding cars.

The entries include cars sponsored by Lambda Chi — Alpha Delta Gamma, Pi Kappa Phi-Zeta Tau Alpha; Pi Kappa Alpha-Sigma Kappa; Theta Chi-Delta Zeta; Kappa Sigma-Phi Mu; Alpha Kappa Psi - Kappa Kappa Gamma; Delta Tau Delta-Alpha Delta Pi; Tau Epsilon Phi-Alpha Xi Delta; Sigma Chi-Alpha Chi Omega and Delta Chi-Delta Delta Delta.

Concluding the list of entries are Phi Kappa Tau-Alpha Phi Sigma Phi Epsilon-Pi Beta Phi; Alpha Tau Omega-Chi Omega; Sigma Alpha Epsilon-Kappa Delta; Alpha Phi Omega - Gamma Phi Beta; Kappa Alpha - Sigma Sigma Sigma; Kappa Alpha Psi-Pi Kappa Phi and Sigma Nu-Alpha Omega Pi.

The winner of each heat will run in the finals. A trophy will be awarded to the sorority and fraternity who place first at the Alpha Gam Open House to be held tomorrow evening from 8 p.m. to midnight.

Cokes and popcorn will be sold by the Alpha Gams and Phi Delts at the derby.

A second safety inspection of all entering racers will be made at 11:30 a.m. Saturday morning on College Avenue.

THIS IS ONE OF THE PIECES SCULPTURED BY RALPH Herzel which will be exhibited in the University Art Gallery next week.

Sculpture Exhibition Opens Here Monday

Twenty-five small metal sculptures by Ralph Hurst of the Art Education and Constructive Design Dept. at Florida State University, will be exhibited in the University Art Gallery Monday through Dec. 23. Several represent a new process of hollow casting developed by the sculptor during a summer's research at FSU.

A public preview on Monday from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. will open the one-man show. Hurst's second since coming to FSU in 1953. The art works are of bronze, aluminum and pewter. Hurst will lecture on his work at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the Gallery.

All the pieces were sculptured using a process originally developed at Massachusetts Institute of Technology by Dr Howard F. Taylor, professor of metallurgy, in which the original piece is carved in polystyrene or styrofoam and the molten metal poured into the form.

In the original work only solid castings were done according to Hurst, who said that he attempted to extend the process in his research to include a method for making hollow castings. The pieces on exhibit represent both methods.

Sponsored by a grant from the FSU faculty research council, the results of his research are reported in a paper entitled, "The Exploration of a New Approach to Casting Sculpture in Metals."

Hurst's previous work has been principally in clay, wood carving and stone carving and he has been represented in many nationall, international and regional exhibitions. He has won several prizes and awards.

His work has been shown this fall in one-man shows at Jacksonville Art Museum, St. Simon's Art Center, Georgia, and Bay Junior College, Panama City.

Student Fees May Finance $20 Million Bond Issue

By JOAN ABBOTT and TONI DICARLO

Pledging of revenue from student registration fees already designated for building purposes for a 20-year period or longer may provide for over $20 million worth of buildings in the University System.

Florida State University will contribute approximately $5.3 million to the financing project.

The proposed bond issue which has been under consideration for some time is still in the planning stages, however, said Executive Director of the Board of Control J. Broward Culpepper.

Detailed plans as to which buildings will be constructed, estimates of the amount from the fees, as well as plans for the actual borrowing and repayment must be made he said. This planning has been staarted and some of the plans will be presented at the Dec. 5 meeting of the State Board of Control in Fort Lauderdale.

Study At Universities

Study of the proposal is also underway at each of the universities concerned. At Florida State University administrative staff members have been going over the Board of Contro revenue estimates to make sure that FSU can meet the amounts that it will be expected to contribute to the pool of funds that will be created.

The portion of the semester registration fee of $113 that goes to the student building fund at FSU is $18, said President George W. Blackwell. The amount designated for the building fund at the other major state universities is slightly higher.

However, of that amount FSU has just $10 per semester per student that is unpledged, except that $60,000 is being used to retire previous bond issues, Dr. Blackwell said.

The use of student fees to support the bond issue "will not increase the present fees," said Dr. Blackwell. The amount that FSU will contribute to the University System pool will increase each year as enrollment climbs and the students have fuller use of the three trimesters per year.

Student Fees

Student fees have been going into a building fund for several years now, the president said, as was designated by the State Legislature. The fund was originally planned to be used for the construction of a student union; however, under the bond issue plan FSU will also get three additional academic buildings, he said.

Bonds related to the construction of the union will probably be held by the federal Housing and Home Finance Agency at a lower interest rate than those for other buildings which will be bought by private investing interests.

The HHFA will probably also hold bonds for union, dormitories and food service facilites constructed at the other universities.

Buildings in addition to the $2,768,000 union at FSU will include the addition of a third floor on the Nuclear Bldg.; an addition to the Psychology Bldg. costing a total of $250,000, $225,000 of which FSU will get from federal funds; and the first unit of the Physics Bldg. in the Science Center costing $1,704,000, Dr. Blackwell explained.

Total Plant

The total plan for buildings throughout the system "does not involve any construction that has not already been approved by the Legislature," said Dr. Culpepper. The bond issue may permit these buildings to be completed sooner.

In its session last spring, the Legislature approved a number of buildings. When or if money will become available for their construction is not known.

After the plans are completed the governor and Cabinet-comprised Board of Education and Budget Commission will have to approve the proposals and then the bonds will have to be validated by the courts.

State lawyers will go to the Circuit Court for validation but will probably also carry the proceedings to the Florida State Supreme Court in order to establish positively the legality of the procedure.

It Approved

If the re-enact certificates are approved they will then have to be put up for sale. Currently the only building that will immediately be ready for construction will be the Nuclear Bldg. addition for which final plans are

'Misanthrope' Tickets On Sale

Tickets are now on sale for the Florida State University production of Moliere's The Misanthrope.

Tickets for the sevoteenth century play may be purchased at the Central ticket office in Westcott, for $.75 for students. General public tickets are $1.50 per person.

This comedy - satire, written with a French setting and directed by FSU's Dr. Arthur H. Cullag, will be performed Wednesday through Saturday at 8.15 p.m. in Conrad Theatre.

Prior to its production here, The Misanthrope was performed for the Great Books Festival at the Biogling Museum Asolo Theatre.

The "Misanthrope," played by Wendell Barthoff, is a man who does not adjust to the society of his social entanglements and commentaries provide the basis for the story. Celimene, the subject of the Misanthrope's love, is played by Claudia Melian.

Other members of the cast include. Terry Rogers, Oronte, Tom McDonald, Acaste; William King, Clitander; Mitchell Franks, Basque and DuBois; Bruce Bodkin, officer; Carolyn Johnson, Eliante, and Pat McCoy as Arsinoe.

Dr. Blackwell Says

Fifth Freedom Is Added In America

In the future, a "fifth freedom will be added to the American credo, freedom from ignorance concerning our rapidly changing civilization," Florida State University President Gordon Blackwell said Wednesday afternoon at a higher education seminar.

He said that institutions of higher learning need to bridge the gap between the latest discoveries and the interests and needs of adults. Noting that colleges and universities account for only four per cent of adult education, he predicted that "traditional patterns of university extension will not be adequate for future needs and opportunities."

NEED FOR BREAK-AWAY

President Blackwell stressed needs for a break-away from traditional patterns of organization, for imagination in developing new programs, and for new integration of continuing education with regular on-campus teaching and research.

He mentioned the use of continuing education in alumni education, education for the aging, and education for industry, and discussed problems inherent in university continuing education.

Regardless of these problems, he emphasized that the university should 1) offer a wide variety of programs in general and liberal education, 2) incorporate a well-organized extension program into its general program, 3) strengthen a program in education for public responsibility, and 4) develop its arts and cultural program to enrich aesthetic experience.

Dr. Blackwell discussed the implications upon continuing education of such social trends as European immigration and Westward mobility, movement of population from rural to urban and suburban centers, and the rising education level. He noted also that pressures of conformity are great, and that quite often the individual doesn't know how to define a social situation.

He cited several sociologists who believe that what they consider "lack of consistency and signs of disintegration in the values of American society" may be due in part to these social changes.

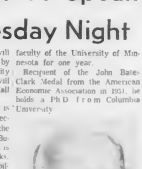
Hotel For Dorm?

Florida State University plans for a possible purchase of the downtown Tallahassee Cherokee Hotel for men's housing have been dropped, according to President Gordon W. Blackwell.

The University has studied the problem and decided that the purchase was financially unfeasible, he reported.

Last week state newspapers had reported that the school might purchase the building.

Economist To Speak Here Tuesday Night



"Capitalism and Freedom" will be the subject of a lecture by Dr. Milton Friedman. University of Chicago economist, who will speak in Opperman Music Hall Tuesday at 8:15 p.m.

Dr. Friedman, whose lecture is sponsored by the University Lecture Series, is a member of the research staff of the National Bureau of Economic Research and is the author of two recent books, "A program for Monetary Stability" and "A Theory of the Consumption Function."

Having served as associate economist for the National Resources Committee from 1935-37, Dr. Friedman was a principal economist for the Division of Tax Research of the United States Treasury Department, 1941-43.

Prior to joining the University of Chicago faculty in 1946, Friedman served as associate director of a Statistical Research Group in the Division of War Research at Columbia University for three years, and on the economics faculty of the University of Minnesota for one year.

Recipient of the John Bates Clark Medal from the American Economic Association in 1951, he holds a Ph.D from Columbia University.

Students Make Plans

Students at Florida State University may in the near future, have an opportunity to study abroad under a Foreign University Exchange Program.

Lewis Barnett and Dick Hume, administrative assistants to the Student Body President Bobby Byrd, have been working with Byrd on the necessary arrangements. Barnett, who has lived abroad for several years and is familiar with several of the foreign universities, has written to various schools in England, Germany, France, and Spain concerning the possibilities of creating an exchange program with FSU.

Faculty members and administrative personnel, who have attended foreign universities ,have also been consulted for opinions concerning the schools. Universities in the U. S. which have already established an exchange program have also been consulted concerning the procedure and the success of their programs.

There are various details, such as finances and the method of selection of students to study abroad, which must be worked out before the program can be put into effect, Byrd said.

Circus May Become Gem

Senate wisely gave its acclaim to the Florida State University Circus by passing unanimously a resolution pledging to underwrite the purchase of a tent. The anticipated fight over the action turned into a battle for the floor by senators eager to laud the organization. The praise was richly deserved and we hope the Board of Control will be as receptive to the Circus' needs as were the students.

The Circus is beneficial to FSU both as entertainment for students and their parents and as public relations for the general public. It has received wide note in the nation's press and has appeared on a national television hookup. The Circus has become the center of attention on Family Weekend and has become popular with the taxpayers of the state on its traveling tours. Citizens from all parts of the nation have taken note of FSU because of the Circus. It is unique among the nation's universities and is certainly appreciated both on and off campus.

Some would argue that it is not appropriate for FSU to receive note for a Circus. This would be a good point if FSU was the type of university to be classed with Harvard and other institutions of its nature. However, FSU is a state university supported by taxpayers, and state universities characteristically are noted for outside pursuits. Universities such as Ohio State, Wisconsin, UCLA and Georgia Tech, have outstanding academic offerings, but are still noted for athletics among the general populace. And the general populace foots the bill for the academic offerings.

So public relations becomes a vital matter of dollars and cents. The $7,000 coming from Student Government is small pittance to pay for the good will generated by the Circus. Certainly this good will would be worth triple the price—even if the $3,000 a year was added as an outright gift.

But this is not a gift. It is an underwrite—which means that Student Government will foot the bill if the circus can not pick up the tab. In appreciation for this confidence, the Circus should make every effort to make the money on their own.

Any one of Several plans might provide the money. The addition of 500 more seats will provide additional revenue. The tent may be rented out to Ida Casa Calloway Gardens, a recreational area near LaGrange, Ga., at $1,000 a month for three months. With a tent to guarantee the performance, the circus can capitalize on advanced sales. Prices on tickets could be easily upped, for the show is certainly worth more than the charge. A "Circus Boosters Club" could be formed to provide revenue and support as has been done with the football team. Any of a providing the $3,000 seem plentiful and the Circus should take the initiative to raise the money themselves.

The Circus is in something of an enviable position. It is appreciated and supported already. Now it has the opportunity to serve as an example for other campus activities by paying its own way. This might inspire others to search for ways to follow suit. In this age of rising cost, an organization which can produce excellence and also pay much of its own way is a jewel. With a little more financial effort, the Circus will become a rare gem. BCS

The U of F Beer Ad

The University of Florida, like Florida State University, just published its Student Body Directory. Unlike Florida State, it has had difficulty in the distribution of that publication because the back cover bore a beer ad.

As of this date, whether or not the book will be released to the U of F student body is a highly debatable issue. It seems that University publications cannot accept ads from alcoholic sources, but nobody appears to know what to do with the expensive directory that rolled off the presses with such an ad, bought and paid for, comfortably situated on the back cover. One delirious answer to the dilemma has been the suggestion that "something" be pasted over the offending advertisement, in all copies of it.

We assume that beer ads and kindred inducements are taboo as a protective measure for students. We doubt that an ad for a used car lot specializing in chrome-plated time bombs would have caused any furor. You seldom hear of a student dying of acute alcoholism, but motorized contraptions take lives each school year.

Somehow, it seems to us, the only real solution to the 3.2 dilemma downstate is to reprimand whoever may have goofed ad-wise, advise them not to do it again, and go ahead and distribute the directories. Most college students won't have achieved a first by viewing one lonely, misplaced beer ad. LP

Blackwell Speaks

President Gordon W. Blackwell made some extremely well-chosen points in his talk to the higher education seminar. He discussed a new frontier for universities—adult education.

This is an important field; one which FSU should consider thoughtfully. For more and more adults are realizing that their past education is not sufficient for this rapidly changing world.

Civilization, as we know it, is a dynamic, ever-changing force. It demands a continuing education to keep pace with this rapid change.

Some adults are given to tossing stones at universities as centers of subversion. They would better understand the fallacy of this thinking if they were to become a part of the university community.

Adults, as well as students, need contact with a university to understand both the quickening civilization and the universities themselves. BCS

Married Mail

Married students living in some university owned facilities do not have mail delivery service. Among the married students not having such service are some who are not seniors; therefore they do not have the privilege of parking on campus between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. This situation brings on forbidden parking in the post office area which brings on, in turn, parking tickets and fines.

The P.O. windows aren't open after five; apparently somebody is assuming that non-senior married students getting their mail through the campus post office will never need stamps, money orders or receive items too large for the mail boxes. LP

ROTC May End At FSU In Fall

Six senators chose to kick an old dog in the last meeting of that body by introducing a resolution to investigate compulsory ROTC. It was not unusual—for many politicians who wish to make a close affinity with the electorate often take a boot at the dying hound.

Neither was it unusual that none of the group bothered to do any prior research. Many of the bills introduced thus far would not have wasted the Senate's Wednesday afternoons had prior work been done. The lack of preparation is evident because the resolution is useless in the light of last year's investigation of the same subject.

Last year's investigation revealed that ROTC may be out completely beginning next year.

Dr. Paul Reynolds, dean of the School of Arts and Sciences, explained: "We were quite aware of student government's consideration of this. However, The Air Force has proposed to the Department of Defense a program which would do away with basic ROTC and substitute a summer camp before the junior year in its place. We are waiting for the decision from Washington before making any move."

* * * * *

The decision on abolishing ROTC completely and substituting an Officer Education Program (OEP) is forthcoming promptly.

The Defense Department will consolidate Army, Navy, and Air Force opinions and make its decision by the end of December. The proposal will then be forwarded to the Budget of the Bureau and then to the President to be presented to Congress in January.

The OEP, if enacted into law, will bring several changes. Besides having no military program for freshmen and sophomores, it will do away with drill on the upperclass level. Uniforms will probably go also.

The curriculum leading to a commission will consist of a three-hour class each trimester during the junior and senior years and two summer camps, one before both the junior and senior years.

Students qualifying for this program will receive a scholarship paid directly to them and increased pay for the summer camp periods.

* * * * *

The actual beginning for the OEP will not be until the fall of 1963. But if this program is enacted into law, ROTC for freshmen and sophomores may be out at Florida State University next fall.

This would have to be a university action since the ROTC program is geared around institution cooperation, but it would seem useless to take in freshmen next fall if no sophomore class will be taught the following year. Likewise, it would seem needless to force sophomores to continue with ROTC when they will be beginning the OEP program the following year.

Of course, the OEP is not law yet, but military men privately feel that it will be approved.

The program plan was released long before last Wednesday's meeting when the half-baked resolution was introduced. So was Dean Reynolds, the man directly responsible for ROTC. But no move was made to investigate the situation.

The senators could do themselves a favor by doing more thinking and investigating and less writing. It would save wasted time and paper.

Modification Need

TO THE EDITOR:

I read with some discomfort the fifth, and thank God, final article by Allan Dermott on the Communist Ideology. It is discouraging to realize that such a series could appear in a college newspaper. Apparently our mortality isn't the only thing that's degenerating.

Of course Mr. Dermott is entitled to his own opinions. If he chooses not to distinguish between the socialist ideology or politico-economic equality (based on a belief in economic determinism), and the present state of affairs in totalitarian countries, he may do so, if he wishes to regard as "fellow - travellers" (following "Dr." Fred C. Schwartz of the Christian Anti-Communist Crusade) all persons who cannot, in sincerity, espouse some religious doctrine, than a his right; if he prefers to ignore the fact that for months before his trial Powers had been in the hands of his Russian captors, or cares to pretend that a self-styled person can withstand any amount of torture, he may. He may even equate "the moral and high standards of our nation" (whatever he means by that) with intelligence and individuality". But when he invokes the Trojan War and the Fall of Rome, it is time for him to review History 181.

In spite of Schliemann's findings concerning the city of Troy, the Trojan War as he thinks of it is not a verifiable historical event. Concerning the barbarians, allow me to quote Bertrand Russell — a humanist, socialist, agnostic, and staunch anti-totalitarian — in his The Study of History.

"It is customary among the ignorant to bring up the Fall of Rome. . . and link it with the decadence of Nero's court. As the Fall of Rome occurred fully 100 years after Nero, when the principal Roman religion was not pagan but Christian, this example is ill-chosen."

In conclusion, Mr. Dermott, the greatest threat to our way of life is our inability to recognize our responsibility to the rest of mankind. Capitalism has an unfortunate history of exploitation, while communism, collectivism and socialism promise benefits to the world's poor. With or without help from Russia, our economic and political system will decay unless we modify it to meet the needs of a changing world.

CLAIRE ARMEST KEMPER

'Out Of Order'

TO THE EDITOR:

After more than two years at FSU, I can't help but wonder if a considerable amount of money couldn't be saved by eliminating doors in many of the buildings. Certainly much would be saved by planning new buildings. Why waste money for engineers who laboriously plan for entrance and exit of "X" number of students, when, after completion of the building, the "key ring janitor" by building superintendent keeps half the doors locked regardless of class schedules?

It is also quite obvious that repair of inoperable doors is far down on the maintenance list. Witness the main doors on the entrance to the business building. It's about three weeks since the sign "Out of Order" went up.

But take heart, fellow students. In case of emergency, remember — in view of the recent accident — these doors are fairly easy to walk through. Perhaps each class close to an entrance should "elect" a battering ram to be the first one through so that casualties will be kept to a minimum.

The Unfunny Fireworks

By DR. ARTHUR L. MURPHY,
Assistant Professor, Office
Of The Dean of Men

Recent incidents involving unlawful use of fireworks on campus serve as a reminder to all members of the university community of the dangers inherent in such activities. One day a few semesters ago, for example, you were taking a shower in your residence hall content with the world. Suddenly, the door to the shower flew open and a cherry bomb exploded in your face. Result: shock, painful injury, and permanent damage to one ear.

MANY STATES, Florida included, have recognized these dangers by individuals. Both local laws and university regulations across the land have attempted to protect communities and campuses through vigorous efforts to apprehend and punish the irresponsible element in their midst and to hold them accountable for their actions. And such as the case at Florida State University. Your student government, wisely recognizing that the welfare of the entire student body was at stake, condemned such activities by passing Men's Senate Bill No. 1, (1959-60). This bill empowered responsible student opinion and provides for suspension from the university of any student found guilty of the use or sale of fireworks or other explosives. It also provides for the immediate removal from residence halls and loss of rent as a penalty for possession of fireworks.

If we need a constant reminder of the necessity for protecting ourselves, consider the following cases which, like the above, are taken from actual happenings:

1. A RESIDENT walking up the steps to a main entrance and greeted by a shower of firecrackers and cherry bombs was startled so that he fell down the stairs. Result: a near mass—bruises, a sore head and temper. It could have been a tragedy.

2. SPRING, 1960, found unknown students fashioning a six tbal bomb of a 27 inch length of pipe and filled with powder from an undetermined number of fireworks. Only the action of an alert graduate student who pulled the fuse at great personal risk stopped an explosion that could have killed or injured not only men in the dorm area, but the families in the Mabry Heights housing units nearby.

3. A FIRECRACKER was exploded among the flourescent bulbs in an elevator in one of the major campus buildings. Person in the elevator were bombarded with tiny glass fragments and poisonous gas released from the shattered bulbs. Result: Sheer luck prevented serious injury to the passengers.

If our campus is to become a place where any student may suffer painful injury or perhaps loss of life due to the irresponsible actions of a few students, it will become so only through the indifference of the student body. However, by exercising responsible student action, with the full support of the administration, the more immature students can be confronted with full responsibility for their actions and the campus can become a reasonably safe environment for all.

The Daily Awakening

By BONNIE FREEDMAN

Ah, the fate of the freshman . . . plagued with the fulsome task of awakening an upperclass roommate every day. It begins something like this:

"GOOD MORNING, upperclass and therefore revered roommate. It is now seven-colon-fifteen, and you have a class to go to this morning. Please get up."

From the recesses of the room comes, "I am. GO away."

And so I GO away for a few minutes, to put my eyes in and wash my face. And then I return to approach the task once more.

"GOOD MORNING," I say. "It is now seven-colon-thirty, and you have a class to go to this morning, and may I borrow your knife? Please get up."

And the wizened roommate says, "I AM up. Go away. And yes, you may borrow my knife."

AND AGAIN I go away, for to get dressed, and to prepare a delightful breakfast of peanut butter and jelly between breadcloths. And then I say, "Hey roommate, it is now seven-colon-forty-five, and the elevator is almost here. Do you have any last words?"

And the great and beloved roommate says: "I AM up. Go away. And yes, you may borrow my knife."

THIS STRIKES ME somewhat surprisingly, so I do not go away right quickly this time. I stay just long enough to hear. " bleep . . . I AM up. Go away And yes, you may borrow my . . ."

END. Three wonderful dates with that special someone. The first night she eats garlic and you can't stand to get within six feet of her. The second night you get stuck with playing croquet with her relatives who never call you by your right name, and the third night you wind up playing with her brother's electric train he's going to get for Christmas but has had since July.

The first thing when you step to the door you are handed deportation papers for the road you blew homecoming, but because you flew for school you have a new wardrobe, three new tires for your rickshaw and 13 dozen avocado marmalade crunch cookies to eat on your way back to school.

Those Holiday Homecomings

By BOB FOSS

Greetings and welcome back from your Thanksgiving pilgrimage to the once tranquility of college life. Home's such a great place, but what a rat race. See this aunt, that uncle, this grandma and all the other goodies that befall you on your trip home.

Going home is really quite an institution, you get to see mom and dad and the rather distant cousins, if said creatures roam your domain. You get to check out all the old buddies if they aren't married or off colonizing some John Birch society in Quagliano, Utah. By the way new, every body hold up your hand that got to see Santa while they were home. It's been rumored that Santa is going to besiege us Thanksgiving eve for those of us who plan to be bad before Christmas.

WHAT A WONDERFUL WEEK-END. Three wonderful dates with that special someone. The first night she eats garlic and you can't stand to get within six feet of her. The second night you get stuck with playing croquet with her relatives who never call you by your right name, and the third night you wind up playing with her brother's electric train he's going to get for Christmas but has had since July.

Richard Fallon

Speaker Issues Challenge To University Theaters

University theaters have the opportunity of lifting the dramatic arts above "the puny concept of entertainment," according to Richard Fallon, who delivered the lecture last night in Mortar Board's Last Lecture series at Florida State University.

Universities, complained Fallon, who is associate director of FSU's University Theater and who recently directed production of the Mark Van Doren play, Last Days of Lincoln, are losing sight of their real purposes and preparing students to "wrestle with the small, relatively trivial truths of life to the neglect of the basic, fundamental truth of life itself.

"The result is that these specialists demand higher standards which merely mean that they can fit the specialized student into his particular, petty, little niche and not have to teach at all. This view of education for the most specially skilled and clearly motivated is like a doctor who is only interested in those who need the least amount of treatment."

In the same way the professional theater has lost sight of its real purpose, said Fallon. "My subject is the need for an accurate mirror of mature art. We are all striving to create our lives and find purpose, meaning and divine inner satisfaction, and this accurate mirror of the greatest of the arts, theatre—in the hands of mature artists — could and should help us toward these goals."

"A mistaken realism that is basically sordidness, a lack of poets, the intrusion of sick, self-aggrandizing misfits into the theatre, and the loss of the unique place of theatre with a number of other reasons have brought about smaller audiences, fewer theatres and theatre as a second-rate art form in this country," he continued.

"I have stated that I believe that this loss is of major importance to all of us and should be of major concern. Is there a hope of a more accurate mirror and more mature art form," he questioned.

"Yes, I believe so through the rising educational theatre in colleges and universities. Here is the chance to reach the great American audiences once more instead of the small, sick group of pseudo-intellectuals that haunt a diminishing Broadway. Here is the chance to give stage to the poets of the past such as Wilder, Saroyan, MacLeish, Fry, Anouilh and nurture the poets of the future with a bare living, enthusiastic and unspoiled talent and an audience," he explained.

FALLON

"Here is the chance to build the audience of the future especially if we bring an appreciation and an awareness of theatre to the children in grade and high schools. This building of a solid program of theatre appreciation, much like music and art appreciation in the public schools is most important to this objective," the director added.

"Finally, here is the place to create artists for the theatre in place of showmen who take what they can for themselves without ever leaving a heritage for the future. Perhaps, one day, also, the community theatres will join with the educational theatres in achieving this end. At the moment most of them are satisfied with becoming the little theatre off Broadway," he concluded.

Mystery Door Opens For Faculty

By MARY ELLEN HARRIS
Flambeau Feature Editor

At first glance, it might be taken for a quiet restaurant or lounge. The large red canopy covering the steps leading downward to the solid panel door lends an air of authenticity. The low-key lighting, the turquoise ceiling and the samples of art decorating the beige straw matting walls creates a mood of quiet reflection.

Only the small plaque bearing the letters "Faculty Club—Members Only" designates the function of the mysterious-looking entryway.

MEMBERSHIP GROWN

The Faculty Club at Florida State University was opened for charter members Feb. 1 last winter. Officially incorporated and operating under the state laws which govern such organizations, its membership has grown to approximately five hundred in less than a year.

Originating from a committee appointed by the late President Robert Manning Strozier, the Faculty Club operates on dues. Its membership is open to all faculty members and career staff members.

The Board of Directors for the club includes Finley Belcher, Ray E. Green, Dr. Wiley Housewright, Dr. Ivan Johnson, Dr. Tom Lewis, Dr. William Randel and Miss Marie Williams.

BASEMENT LOCATION

Miss Williams, secretary of student activities as well as a member of the Faculty Club Board of Directors, remarked that the "hardest thing" the planning committee for the club had to face was "finding a location." She explained their concern when they found that the only place readily available was the basement of the Suwanee Dining Hall. According to Miss Williams, University engineers were consulted and as a result, the unpromising basement was "made into a lovely place."

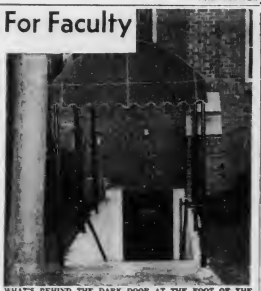
The Faculty Club was able to purchase all its equipment through Morrisons Food Service, which also serves as caterer.

The club consists of a large dining room, cafeteria-style facilities, a small conference area, the Bamboo Room, and a lounge adjoining the entryway.

ART WORKS

The turquoise and beige color scheme is accentuated by the dark furniture, the white and tan-perine chair seats, the plants thriving quietly in their containers and the art objects lining the walls. These works are contributed by the Art Dept. and rotated periodically.

Some of the equipment and furniture was donated by persons interested in the Faculty Club. For example, the lounge furniture was given by the University Wives Club and the modernistic clock on the wall in the main dining room was the gift of several alumni.



According to Mrs. Bert McKay, official hostess, the Faculty Club is available to non-members at night for a nominal fee. She remarked that several organizations had used the facilities for banquets and other functions.

The approximate capacity of the dining area is 80, said Mrs. McKay, and 22 is the maximum for the Bamboo Room.

OPENING NIGHT

A recent innovation of the Faculty Club according to both Miss Williams and Mrs. McKay is a smorgasbord prior to all opening nights of the Artist Series, operas, plays and other such functions.

Miss Williams expressed the opinion that they plan to expand the facilities of the Faculty Club in the near future. The Board of Directors hopes to build a separate clubhouse on or near campus at a later date.

WHAT'S BEHIND THE DARK DOOR AT THE FOOT OF THE stairs? Nothing more sinister than a faculty club, although the subterranean location might be called mysterious. (FLAMBEAU photo by Del Kittendorf)

Student Politics . . .

since they can sometimes spot worms at the core of standard liberal policies, they feel superior to the liberal establishment, which they see as dominating campus thought.

The student radicals and conservatives are thus strangely alike: both feel embattled and both can only protest. Lacking political solutions of their own, the radicals now pit their ethical consciences against the dangers of the political game itself.

It is, however, only too easy for members of the adult generation to criticize college students today . . . Adults would do better instead to examine their own political institutions . . . The plain fact is that in our complex society most college students are not able to formulate political beliefs and programs of their own. And they are not old enough—or involved enough in adult political and economic realities—to accept an adult political system based on responsibility for decisions, compromise of convictions, and the balancing of opposed interests. They have not yet acquired worldly interests of their own. They look for ideals and men in which they might believe, and quickly reject them when their acts are at odds with their words. They have not yet learned, in short, to act without conviction.

It is certainly true that exemplary men and programs are hard to come by in any modern industrial society, but every generation of students continues to need them for models if it is to commit itself to political action . . .

Lacking direction from any group . . . most of our own political youth remain stranded. They can only devise attitudes of protest against the possibility of dying without a cause they deeply believe in and without leaders they can love. Unless our society can produce political leadership and ideas which will compel their positive emotions, we may expect that the more aware among our college students will continue to act out their kind of rejection of all power and politics I have described in this article.

Houston Pounds Seminoles 28-8 In Terminal Game

By BILL CHEEK
Flambeau Spor Editor

The 1961 football season at Florida State has drawn to a close, leaving the Seminoles with a 4-5-1 final record.

Much Bill Peterson's Seminoles completed the best season mark since 1958. The 1958 club, with a 7-3-6 record, went to the Bluegrass Bowl.

In the last effort for the 1961 season, the Seminoles took on the University of Houston Saturday afternoon and were trounced 28-8.

The Seminole downfall has been attributed to the passing arm of Don Sessions. Totaling 139 yards in 19 trists, Session set up a touchdown, passed for another and aided his own cause by scoring one himself.

A sparse assemblage of 15,000 football enthusiasts were scattered throughout the 76,000 seats of Rice Stadium to witness the Seminole massacre.

FSU got a look at Houston's air force early in the game. The Cougars put the first tally up on the first play of the second quarter. Larry Broussard pushed the ball across from the one and Eddie Mitchamore added the extra point. Larry Lindsay set up the touchdown on an 11 yard pass from Sessions.

Billy Roland added to the Seminole plight by his demonstration of aerial warfare. In eight attempts Roland connected six times, gaining 71 yards through the air for the afternoon's work. Roland piloted the Texans to their second touchdown with a 13 yard spiral to Milt Perkins in the end zone. Mitchamore toed the extra point.

With only seconds remaining in the first half, a Sessions pass found left end Ben Howe standing on the goal line. Upon the addition of Mitchamore's PAT Houston left the field at the half time a 21-0 leader.

Houston's final tally came when Charley Calhoun got a low snap on a fourth-down punt attempt, was unable to get the ball away and was swarmed under on the eight.

Sessions took to the air once again and moved the ball to the one yard line on a short pass to Gene Ritch. With Sessions sneaking over from the one, the Cougars were in front 27-0 and Mitchamore once again split the uprights.

Florida State's lone touchdown came when Ken Russom intercepted a Sessions aerial and crossed the goal line unmolested. Eddie Trancygier connected with Tom Hillabrand for a two point pass.

Ten seniors have played their last football game for Florida State. Comprising this group are seven line and three backs. Seniors are: Jim Daniels and Fred Grimes at end; Don Donatelli, Steve Klesius and Joe Verbinski at tackle; Frank Francesco at guard; Larry Hood at center; Paul Andrews at fullback; Roy Bickford at quarterback; and Jack Forehand at halfback.

FSU Cagers To Play Ohio

By DALE MARLER
Flambeau Sports Writer

Florida State takes on the top ranked team in the nation, Ohio State at Columbus, Ohio Saturday night in the St. John arena. A capacity crowd of more than 13,500 are expected to be on hand in the season opener for both states' school's basketball teams.

MARLER

The Seminoles have seven returning lettermen from last year's squad that posted a 14-10 record. The tribe has five seniors, three juniors, and five sophomores on the team.

Senior Dave Fedor's All-American candidate, leads the returning lettermen. The 6'6" forward averaged 19 points a game last season hitting over 50 percent of his field goal attempts. Fedor has scored in double figures every varsity college game of his career.

Helping Fedor in the front line will be senior Ray Swain. The 6'4" center averaged 17 points a game last season as he set all time FSU field goal percentage record, hitting nearly 54 per cent of his shots.

Starting at the other forward will be junior Charlie Long. The 6'4" jump shot specialist hit nearly 50 per cent of his field goal attempts after a shaky start last year.

Probable starters at the guard spots will be senior Rufus Ashworth and junior Dale Ricketts Ashworth is 6'4" and Ricketts is 6'2".

Ohio State returns 11 lettermen from last year's NCAA runner-up team. The top-ranked Buckeyes lost only one starter from last year's squad, All-American Larry Siegfried.

Probable starters for the Buckeyes are 6'5" John Halicek and 6'4" Bob Knight at forwards, 6'8" All-American Jerry Lucas at center and 6'2" guards Gary Gearhart and Melvyn Nowell. All five starters are seniors.

After the Ohio State game, the Seminoles will travel to Madison, Wisconsin for Monday nights encounter with the Wisconsin Badgers.

The Seminoles will return for their first home game Wed. against Rice University.

Frosh Cagers Open

Tonight the Freshman Basketball team will open its 1961-62 season against Central Florida Junior College at 7:30 p.m. in Tully Gymnasium. The probable starting lineup will come from the following seven players: Cal Ruge, Floyd Lorenz, and Jerry Shirley, forwards; Bob Gemming, center; Ross Winter, Ken Black, and Bob Gonzalez, guards.

Murals Near Final Games

By SHIRLEY HARDISON
Flambeau Sports Writer

Fraternities and dorm-independent leaguers are vying for the top spot in the basketball tournaments this week which will begin final competition Dec. 8, in Tully Gym.

In the fraternity league, Kappa Alpha, Delta Chi, Delta Tau Delta, Lambda Chi Alpha and Sigma Chi are the contenders. Alpha Tau Omega dropped out during the second series of games. In the first series Lambda Chi Alpha and Alpha Tau Omega were the winners. The second series of games clashed Kappa Alpha and Lambda Chi, the winner being Kappa Alpha by a score of 45-40. Delta Chi won its bout with Alpha Tau Omega when ATO forfeited the game. The double elimination tournament will end next Wednesday night, with the finals to be played the following Friday.

The same schedules exist for the dorm-independent leaguers, with their finals to be Dec. 8. Kellum I is the only team which has scored two wins over the opponents. Geology was eliminated in the second game series, with two losses against no wins. The Majors Club and the Yankee Doodlers have both won a game and lost a game. These two clubs will play Monday night in the semi-final tournament, and the winner will compete against Kellum I in the finals.

All the fraternities are entered in the table tennis competition which will begin Monday afternoon for the dorm-independent league and Thursday afternoon for the fraternities. The tournaments are expected to run for three days in both singles and doubles competition.

Wednesday afternoon fraternities will also begin their horseshoe rivalry which is expected to continue for three days also. The horseshoe competition will wind up the 1961 intramural season for the men at Florida State University. After Christmas vacation another season will begin, with football the first sport on the agenda for 1962.

Track Has Meet

Florida State's track teem recently finished its fall practice workout with its second annual Gold and Grey inter-squad track meet.

The squad was divided evenly between two teams.

The final score wound up with the Gold team defeating the Grey team, 74½ to 61½ points.

Coach Long said, "The team as a whole looks good, but I feel there is still a lot of work to be done before competition begins this spring."

For Two Years

Dean Day Travels To Europe

Dr. Harry Day, associate dean of students at Florida State University, will take two years' leave in January to serve as a staff member of the Salzburg, Austria, Seminar in American Studies.

He will leave Tallahassee Jan. 11, and sail from New York Jan. 13, on the ocean liner United States. A member of the FSU staff since 1955, Day received his B.A. in political science from the University of Miami in 1947, and his Ed.D. in 1957 from FSU.

As a Salzburg staff member, he will have a leave of absence from the university to spend two years in residence in Austria. His wife and two young children will accompany him.

The altburg Seminar, established by a private group in Cambridge, Mass., 14 years ago, sponsors six month-long seminars on America each year. Each session is devoted to a topic such as "American Foreign Policy," "Art and Music in America," and "American Law and Legal Institutions."

American teachers and professional leaders serve as faculty members. They work without salary but receive a travel allowance and lodging. Among the 300 Americans who have lectured at Salzburg are Walter V. Schaefer, chief justice, Supreme Court of Illinois; Walter Adams, professor of economics, Michigan State University; Robert E. Osgood, associate professor of political science, University of Chicago; and Louis G. Cowan, former president, CBS Television Network.

Sixty Europeans attend each of the seminars, during which the meetings are occupied by lectures and the afternoons by group discussions. Over 2,800 people have attended the 70 sessions since the establishment of the program.

"Young Europeans don't want to hear about the United States 50 years ago," Dr. Day said. "They want to know what has been happening here in the past 15 or 20 years so they can see where the trends are going." The program was instituted to give them this information.

The fellows come from 15 West European countries and are from 25 to 35 years old. They are writers, curators of art museums, journalists, judges, musicologists, government officials, teachers, business men, labor leaders and lawyers.

There are no limitations in regard to race, creed, political opinions or economic need, but all fellows are selected on the basis of their educational background, professional standing and facility with English, the language in which the seminar courses are conducted.

One of Dr. Day's chief duties as a staff member will be to travel around Europe interviewing and selecting prospective fellows.

The purpose of the Salzburg Seminar is "To conduct education for Europeans in American history, literature, economics and other subjects; to operate a school and seminar in the vicinity of Salzburg, Austria."

Dr. Day became interested in the program while working with Arthur S. Adams, president of the American Council on Education. Adams is on the Board of Directors of the seminar, and it was he who recommended the FSU man for the position as staff member.

Dr. Day will be one of the three staff members in residence in the modernized Schloss castle just outside of Salzburg. Each staff member serves for two years.

"I see the opportunity to live in Austria as a challenge," the dean said. "Too many Americans go abroad and then they try to live there as they do at home. Since we're going to be there for two years, we hope to learn to follow the patterns of the citizens of Salzburg."

Maid Of Cotton Contest Announced

Women interested in entering the Maid of Cotton Contest must mail their entries by midnight tonight. They should be mailed to National Cotton Council, Box 9905, Memphis 12, Tenn.

To be eligible a woman must be between 19 and 25 years old, at least 5 feet 5 inches tall, never married and born in a cotton producing state.

The Maid of Cotton, to be chosen Dec. 28 and 29, will be awarded a European tour, a new car and a complete cotton wardrobe.

Circus Tent . . .

Calloway Gardens, a circus concern in Georgia, has said it would definitely rent the tent for one summer for $3,000.

The organization said it could possibly rent the FSU tent for five summers for a total of $15,000. This amount would nearly cover the $15,000 which the student senate would be asked to underwrite.

Men's Vice President Carl Kittler said the tent could be expected to last eight to nine years if it weren't rented out, adding that financially the purchase was unsound. But he urged the senators to support the Circus because it was such a great benefit to the University.

MORE PUBLICITY

The Circus probably gives the University more publicity than any of the intercollegiate activities, he said. The Senate may not have legal authority to earmark funds for five years from now, but based on legislative processes the following administrations probably would honor the purchase, he said.

The circus may be harried if a tent is not purchased, Coach Haskins said.

The transient system will force the Circus authorities to schedule Parent's Weekend in March, thus making it impossible for Flying High to predict the weather in case they had to perform in the stadium.

Flying High would be unable to use the men's gym to perform in because of a lack of clearance when the nets are installed, because intermural and basketball teams would be wanting to practice in the building, and because of the cost of installing the braces.

UNPREDICTABLE WEATHER

The unpredictable weather of the past years wiped out the advanced ticket sales, but the tent could allow Flying High to build up the sales to the former 10,000

Two sources of income are available to the Circus, said Sen. Joe Ferraro on the Student Government radio show.

The new tent will hold 500 more spectators than the old tent. At an average cost of $1 per person, the Circus could hope to draw about $2,500 in six evenings.

Also, about $30,000 additional funds will be added to the student activity fund under the trimester system.

Fees . . .

already completed. Some of the funds from the bond issue sale will have to be used for architects' drawings. These plans will have to be completed before bids on construction can be let, Dr. Culpepper explained.

Without the additional buildings, the director said that the institutions will be finally forced to say--"I'm sorry, no room in the inn."

Both Dr. Blackwell and Dr. Culpepper termed the situation an "emergency." They agreed that, faced by a coming college-age population explosion, state supported higher education will be denied to many qualified students in the future unless additional facilities are provided.

Bond programs are used to finance construction in many other states, Dr. Blackwell said. "Florida cannot meet the building needs in this emergency under our present tax structure . . . I doubt that we can meet this need on a pay-as-you-go basis," the president concluded.

The Board has estimated that total college enrollment by 1970 will reach 178,000. A figure over twice as high as the enrollment this year of 70,000. Until recently the estimate was 158,000

The Peace Corps representative's visit to the Florida State University next week has been cancelled.

However, other representatives will visit the campus in the spring, the Chaplain's Office announced yesterday.

Restaurateurs Saluted Here

Restaurant executives from over the South are expected in Tallahassee today for the 10th annual two-day Salut Aux Restaurateurs at Florida State University during which the outstanding restaurant men in a dozen southern states will be given awards.

The award-giving will come at a banquet in the Suwanee Room at 8 p.m. tomorrow. Those selected for the awards have been chosen by the restaurant associations of their respective states on the basis of service to their community and accomplishment in the restaurant industry.

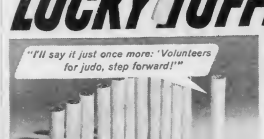
After the awards are given the restaurant men will be inducted as honorary members into The Scullions, an honor society of students studying restaurant and hotel management at FSU. The Scullion president, George Bogrand, will use the traditional Scullion ceremony involving a giant spoon and oversized pan to provide sound effects for the "tapping."

Dean Charles A. Bovetta of the School of Business will award the certificates to the honorees. On hand for the occasion will be many of the 160 juniors and seniors studying in the Hotel and Restaurant Management Dept., according to Peter Dukas, the department head. These students have come to FSU from places as distant as New Hampshire and California to study in FSU's restaurant and hotel program.

The banquet speaker will be Robert Heilman, director of the National Restaurant Association.

About 80 persons are expected in for the two-day meeting. They will begin to register at the Hoetel Duval at 2 this afternoon. Restaurant men will tour the capitol from 4 to 6 p.m. and trade association executives of the various states will meet at the [illegible] between 5 and 7.

At 10 a.m. tomorrow trade association personnel again will meet and from 3 to 5 p.m. will tour the FSU campus.



The event will end with the banquet.

THE FLORIDA FLAMBEAU

Vol. XLVIII, No. 22 | Published By The Students Of Florida State University | Tallahassee, December 5, 1961

'Misanthrope' Is Tomorrow

The University Theatre players will present their second production of the year, The Misanthrope, tomorrow through Saturday at Conradi Theatre at 8:15 p.m.

Tickets may be purchased at Westcott Ticket Office for $1.50, while and $.75 for students.

ASOLO FESTIVAL

Prior to the presentation at Florida State University, the University Theatre players presented the play, as a representation of the work done by the Asolo Festival, at the Great Books Festival at the Ringling Museum Asolo Theatre on Nov. 26.

The Asolo Festival, which is held each summer in Sarasota, is a joint venture of FSU and the Ringling Museum. The summer theatre group produces seventeenth and eighteenth century plays.

TRANSLATION

Dr. Arthur H. Dorling of the speech Dept., director of the production by Moliere, made a special translation of the seventeenth century comedy-suture from the original French.

The Misanthrope is the story of the social entanglements of a seventeenth century Frenchman who refuses to adjust to the society of his day. Alceste (the misanthrope) played by Wendell Bartbol experiences in the first act his feelings toward society—"It hurts my soul to see how tactfully vice is treated; Sometimes I feel I like to escape to some desert—away from the human race."

SITUATION COMPLICATED

The situation becomes even more complicated by the fact that Alceste is in love with Celimene, played by Claudia Melton, who is very much adjusted to society.

Other members of the cast include Terry Rogers as Philinte; Virgil Austin as Oronte; Tom McDonald, Alceste; William King as Dandre; Mitchell Franks, Basque and DuBois; Bruce Bodine as officer; Carolyn Johnson, Eanie and Pal McCoy as Arsinoe.

REHEARSING A SCENE FROM MOLIERE'S "THE MISANTHROPE," WHICH WILL BE PRESented at Florida State University's Conradi Theatre Dec. 6-8, are, left to right, Virgil Austin, playing Oronte, a poet and lop; Patricia McCoy, playing a noble lady and prude, Arsinoe; and Wendell Bartbol, playing the misanthrope himself, Alceste.

Motar Board

Day student junior women students may pick up ballots to vote for next year's Motar Board members at the main office in Longmire.

The ballots must be returned by next Tuesday.

Ballots will also be distributed to all other junior women this week.

These votes will be considered along with the votes and recommendations of staff and present members of Mortar Board.

Derby To Be Held On Sat.

The annual Sigma Chi Derby at Florida State University will be Saturday.

The day's activities will take place at the hockey field and will include an obstacle race, key hunt, coke-drinking contest, dee-a bridge, broom race, beauty contests, and a secret event. Members of each sorority and fraternity will compete in the various events.

Trophies will be awarded to winners in each of the seven events and to the first, second and third place winners in overall points.

Each sorority will sponsor a fraternity candidate who will wear bermuda shorts in the event. The queen will be selected by members of the faculty.

'Who's Who'

Dead Debate Reborn: List Has 2 Extra Names

By HOWARD DENSON
Flambeau Staff Writer

The supposedly dead Who's Who controversy leaped from the grave at the end of last week when several senators learned that two illegal names were left on the confirmation list of Who's Who in American Universities and Colleges.

The two students—Bobby Byrd, president of the student body, and Jack Ascherl, president of the senior class—did not have the 2.5 grade average, which is required by the Student Body Statutes.

The two seniors ranked first and third in voting by the student body.

SENATE ACTION

"The Senate has to take action to keep students from walking over the Statutes or amending them to suit their own purposes," said Sen. John Schaffner, summing up the opinions of the angered senators.

Nothing can be done to change the placing of the two students on the confirmation list, although the Senate will probably recommend to President Byrd that he write the Who's Who publishers asking them to strike the names from the list, and the Senate members recently approved the appointments of committee members on the assurance that this would be done.

The Who's Who Committee was headed by Ivylyn Frazier, the secretary of student events. When the committee members were being approved by the Senate, she told the senators that the names could be removed.

The committee which consisted of Ascherl, Crockett Farnell, Marianna Girtman, Charlie Hawkins, George Moore, Scarles Pogue, Doug Shank, Nancy Sill, Mary Ann Thornton and Susie Workizer, was appointed by President Byrd.

Chairman Frazier reported to Sen. Joe Ferraro that she did not know when the committee confirmed Byrd's and Ascherl's names.

He asked her if the committee members were aware that their action might be somewhat illegal. He said she gave an affirmative answer.

The question is now raised whether or not Chairman Frazier was acting legally. Several senators say she and other Cabinet members have not been approved by the Senate.

Marion Cain, attorney general, said the cabinet officers were approved last semester.

Vice President Ken van Assenderp, who seemed uncertain, said he did not believe the Cabinet members were approved last semester and they definitely have not been approved this semester.

Sen. Schaffner said the Flambeau files, the past minutes of the Senate, and the appointments file in the Student Senate do not reveal that the Cabinet officers were approved.

Women's Vice President Mygnon Champion does not remember Senate's approving the Cabinet officers.

MANDAMUS

Chief Justice of Honor Court Dan Walbolt was requested over the weekend to send a writ of mandamus to the student body president ordering him to submit the names of the Cabinet officers to Senate for approval.

However, yesterday afternoon the Secretary to the Student Body President Jackie Mathis found a letter dated May 4, 1961, in Senate in the office files listing the names of the Cabinet officers for approval. At press time yesterday it had not been determined whether the letter ever reached Senate or whether the appointments were approved.

Several senators have drawn up a bill, which will shorten the time the student body president has in presenting regular appointments to the senate. The bill will come before Senate Wednesday.

If will require that any regular appointment by the student body president be submitted for confirmation to the Student Senate within two weeks after such appointments are made. Failure to so would constitute misfeasance in office.

It also says that all regular appointments of the student body president which, as the passage of the bill, have not been submitted to the Student Senate for confirmation must be submitted within one week following the enactment of the bill. The bill would go into effect immediately.

Regular appointments are those

Secretary Adams Attacks Principle Of Bond Issue

Proposal Should Not Open A 'Back Door' For The Legislature To Escape Through

By JOAN ABBOTT
And JOHN SCHAFFNER
Flambeau Staff Writers

Proposals for providing needed buildings in the university system should not open a "backdoor through which the Legislature can escape its responsibilities," said Secretary of State Tom Adams yesterday.

The revolving fund that may be created should be limited to helping finance dormitories and other student service buildings, suggested Adams. The Legislature should not be permitted to escape its historical responsibility for providing academic buildings, he stressed.

LIMITED ISSUE

The proposed bond issue should be limited to about $12 million to meet the needs for student service buildings, the other needed buildings should be met from capital outlay and provided by the Legislature, he said.

The Cabinet could temporarily juggle the amount appropriated by the Legislature for all state building to give priority to buildings needed by the educational system, he said. In this way all the buildings that would be included in the proposed $25 million bond issue could be built, without committing future student fees to pay off such a large issue.

If this large bond issue plan is followed through there will be no further future revenues to be committed for student service buildings, he said. This would eventually result in the Legislature taking over the financing of such buildings in the future or the raising of student fees.

"If we reverse how the financing of these facilities . . . it can well destroy the orderly financing of future expenditures," he added.

The committing of fees for the next 20 years if the Legislature failed to act could cause the student fees to be increased $25 or $50. "This would put higher education beyond the reach of many capable people," he stated. "When that happens much of the fundamental benefit of public education is impaired," he added.

Adams said he was "opposed" to such fee raises.

His proposal to allow the revolving fund to take care of student service buildings and funds from capital outlay the remainder of the pressing building needs would not put all of the needs to be met right away, Adams stressed.

However, under the bond issue plan as has been proposed by Assistant Attorney General Ralph Odum, Adams said it would take four to seven years for the bonds to be issued. During that period there will be several sessions of the State Legislature and Adams felt such a long-term bond issue program would allow the Legislature to evade responsibility for capital outlay in the system.

REVENUE

Another danger is that unless the universities are immediately able to construct dormitories to house expanded enrollments, "revenue from student fees will be substantially less than forecast," he added.

Projections indicate that about $40 million will be available from projected funds over the next 20 years, however, because of high interest rates this would only support a $25 million issue. This would mean that the students would be paying almost $1 for every $1 worth of building.

Within the revolving fund supposedly the bonds for the student service buildings and dormitories would be held by the Federal Housing and Home Finance Agency. But Adams said he understood that if the issue were linked to bonds for academic buildings, the federal agency would not purchase these bonds. This would leave the Board of Control in place them on the open market which would result in far higher interest than the three and one-eighth percent interest that the federal agency would charge. The result would be that the bond issue would cost still more.

SERVICE BUILDINGS

If only student service buildings such as dormitories, student unions and utilities are constructed by bond issues, interest will be kept at a minimum.

Adams said that if the emergency building needs exist now, they existed on April when the Legislature met and that the Cabinet evaded its responsibility to the educational system by not calling this more emphatically to the attention of the Legislature. As it happened, the legislature approved buildings without making appropriations for them and funds will not become available for some time. This happened because the governor and some members of the Cabinet and Legislature were committed to maintaining a balanced budget without levying new taxes.

In regard to the priority of meeting the building needs, the secretary of state said those at the existing universities should be met first. "We should meet first the established needs at Florida State University and the University of Florida, then those at the new South Florida U. will be added."

However, Adams said, USF and the proposed university at Boca Raton during the next few years will have more needs than the existing schools.

36 Seniors Picked For 'Who's Who'

Thirty-six Florida State University seniors received notification of their selection to Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges yesterday.

These students, having been nominated by the FSU senior class, were selected by the student Who's Who national committee in Tuscaloosa, Ala. They were chosen on the basis of their contribution and participation in various phases of campus life.

'Project Awake' To Start Thursday With Film At 7:15

Communist Encirclement is the title of the film to be shown at the first program sponsored by Project Awake which will be Thursday at 7:15 p.m. in the Library Lecture Hall.

Dean of Students R. R. Oglesby will introduce the film.

Project Awake is sponsored by a group of students who are concerned about the growing threat of International Communism to the American way of life, said group member Duncan Moore.

TO INFORM

The purpose of the group is to inform the students and the University community about this threat by presenting a series of six programs on Communism.

The programs will be short and informal, said Moore. The first one, he said, will be an hour and 15 minutes in length.

The steering committee for the group includes Ross McVey, Sherod Campbell, Shannon Talbert, Crockett Farnell, Marian Thornton, Nancy Speer, and Moore.

Faculty adviser for the group is Hugh Adams of the Housing Office.

Project Awake is not affiliated with any other movement.

Other purposes and principles of the group include:

"To promote a better understanding of the nature and ultimate aims of international Communism We can fight Communism only if we understand it.

"To revive interest and understanding in our basic American documents, our heritage, our government of laws and our economic system which have made America the great country she is today.

"To offer to citizens certain suggestions which they may accept and act upon in their own way in providing a patriotic rebirth in this nation, and in helping us to stand alert against the enemy. Such suggestions include spiritual and moral reformation to the great Judeo-Christian code and activity areas of the individual's own choice in campus, community and government."

Concert

The Florida State University Symphonic Band will present their first concert of the season tonight at 8:15 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium, under the direction of Dr. Manley R. Whitcomb.

The band will play three parts from the "William Byrd Suite" by Gordon Jacob, Handel's "Concerto Grosso in C Major," "Prelude and Dance" by Paul Creston, "A Children's Chant" by Roger Quilter and "Jericho" by Morton Gould.

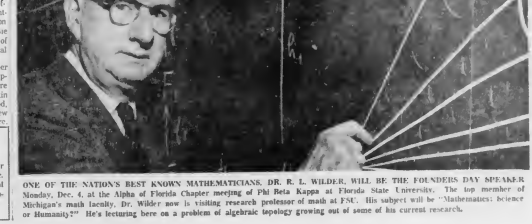
'Name That Tune' To Be Here Thurs.

GEORGE DeWITT

"Name That Tune," with emcee George DeWitt, a show that promises to be profitable as well as entertaining for those who attend it, will be presented at Florida State University Thursday.

Tickets for the show will go on sale today in Westcott Ticket Office. Students are reminded to take their I.D. Cards with them to the Ticket Office in order to secure student tickets.

TWO SHOWS



There will be two shows, one at 6:30 p.m. and another at 9 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium. Proceeds for the Student Artist Series sponsored event will go to the Campus Chest. Tickets are priced at $2 for the public and $1.50 for FSU students. There will be no reserved seats.

Contestants will be chosen from the audience to try their luck and "name that tune," when the musical director plays a certain melody. Winners will receive a number of cash and merchandise awards. The grand prize will be a study all-expense paid cruise of the Caribbean for two, aboard the luxury ship S.S Evangeline.

VARIETY SHOW

There will also be a two-hour variety show featuring various acts of television renown. The act will include the Crowells, a trampoline team, who have appeared in Canada, Cuba, Mexico and Hawaii. Other entertainment will be by "Sweetie" Jones, a rock 'n roll singer, and recorder for Varsity records. The Keppo Trio, a dance team; and Ida Mae, who will present a combination of hand balancing, acro-contortion and tumbling. Lou Meyer, a pianist, will present his slight-of-hand display. Meyer has frequently appeared in Las Vegas and on television variety shows. Jessie Griffiths, billed as the Lady of the Keyboards," will be musical director of the show.

DeWitt, the singing quizmaster of "Name That Tune" has appeared in night club and theatre appearances in Boston's Latin Quarter, Cleo's of Hollywood, Radio City Music Hall in New York and the Chicago Theatre.

ONE OF THE NATION'S BEST KNOWN MATHEMATICIANS, DR. R. L. WILDER, WILL BE THE FOUNDERS DAY SPEAKER Monday, Dec. 4, at the Alpha of Florida Chapter meeting of Phi Beta Kappa at Florida State University. The top member of Michigan's math faculty, Dr. Wilder now is visiting research professor of math at FSU. His subject will be "Mathematics: Science or Humanity?" He's lecturing here on a problem of algebraic topology growing out of some of his current research.

Students Judge 'Project'

Project Awake, a newly organized group to educate the students of Florida State University on the dangers of International Communism, may well have a good thing in its new series.

With the world situation in a dire position, no thinking individual can dismiss Communism as an idle threat to American democracy. Neither can a thinking citizen afford not to educate himself on the basic doctrines and tactics of this great world force. for Communism can only be fought by understanding.

But "education" comes in many forms these days and there is someone lurking around every corner ready to "educate" the listener on the evils of Communism. Groups who whisper and point their fingers at anyone who dares disagree with the status quo are plentiful.

Men in power, whether it be political, educational, or military, are anxious to force their own brand of Americanism down the throats of their fellow citizens. Certainly there is no lack of Americans who, in panic, would negate freedom of expression, freedom of assembly, and the due processes of law in their own efforts to "fight Communism."

We have been told by Duncan Moore, a student member of this group, that this will not be the case with the Project Awake movement. We sincerely hope so.

Moore says his group is just going to lay the facts on the line and allow the listeners to appraise them and evaluate them. He says that Project Awake will not attempt to slant the presentations toward any particular political doctrine nor launch any campaign to ferret the Communists out of cracks in the university walls.

This is to be a series of intelligent, unemotional, educational presentation of just what present day Communism is, Moore contends.

With this assurance, we applaud the venture. Thought-provoking adult presentations, worthy of Florida State students, are vitally needed. Students should attend these sessions and judge their merits.

A Pink FSU Christmas

The first signs of Christmas are appearing on campus. The Student Center bookstore has had beribboned merchandise in the windows for quite a few days now, and the Soda Shop has plenty of tinsel, bells, colored rope and a specially drawn yuletide mural in evidence.

THE FIRST SIGN of pre-final jitters begins about now with everyone immobilized by the thought of the long holiday and the need for real last ditch study effort. Christmas month at FSU is the time when all of us have to decide to either do the things we must or do the things we want.

December here is, if anything, a rival to the panicky days of spring when the student body gazes at the world through senses dazed by spring weather and all that that mad season conjures up in student minds. It is all very pleasant but very hectic.

IN JUST A FEW more days everyone will be deciding whether or not they'll cut classes the last several days preceeding the Christmas break. It may not be cricket but it is more or less expected to some extent.

The perfect way for parents to shatter the Christmas homecomers and turn the old fashioned white, green or blue Yule to pink will be to take Junior's pink slips from midsemester and place them under the tree neatly wrapped and beribboned. We'd bet he'd not leave early again when Easter holidays roll around!

Let's Get Serious

'Warmhearted' Nikita

By GERRY DOBSON

There is, at least to my way of thinking, some doubt as to whether the obscene mouthings of Comrade K should be given such prominence on the news pages of our newspapers for you may rest assured that this maniac propagandist says nothing for publication that is not designed to advance the communist conspiracy in one way or another. And moreover while one at least has a reasonable assurance that the comments of Western politicians are at least related to the truth as we understand it, no such statement can be made about Khrushchev whose most of us do not understand dialectics as practiced by the Soviets.

SO, OUR PAPERS ARE filled with free publicity for communism; we hang on every word uttered by that lord barbarian K. We will even find someone as gullible as Drew Pearson saying that if the West can reach an "compromise regarding Berlin" that ... "The United States and President Kennedy have an opportunity to win a real friend" in Nikita Khrushchev, and that K. is "warmhearted personally." Could K. have asked for more? If a person like Pearson, who has been around long enough to know better, falls for what K says, how is the average American going to make out?

Let he not find that K has been telling the world what a bad boy Joe Stalin was. He continues to say that Stalin was responsible for the murders of thousands of innocent "communists", etc. etc. etc.

YES, IT'S ALL TRUE, what K. says, but let's look behind the scene a bit. Isn't this a great way for K to disassociate from the crimes of Stalin's era" and want many persons feel that K. is really a good old boy, and not anything like that nasty old Stalin" Well here's the kind of "good old boy" that Nikita is. Just think about it the next time you read some of K.'s press releases:

NIKITA KHRUSHCHEV was a virtual unknown in the Communist Party until about 1934, when he was named to the Ruling body of the party. Coincidentally, his previous years had been spent in the Ukraine, where the communists had been methodically exterminating those peasants with "bourgeois" backgrounds. The method was simple: The communists would come to the small farms at harvest time and confiscate the entire crop, leaving the family to starve It has been estimated that about 7,000,000 Ukrainians died in this "purification."

In 1933, on Stalin's orders, Khrushchev, as first secretary of the Central Committee of the Ukrainian Communist Party oversaw the deaths of about 100,000 communist "deviationists." This, of course is one of the very crimes for which K. now condemns Stalin. K's guilt was in his own word ... to annihilate all Trotskyites, Zinovievites, enemies of the people to the last kin, so there will remain not even a relative behind them. . . ." For this Eichmann-like job, Stalin rewarded K. by appointing him to the Central Committee of the Party.

THE UKRAINIAN'S understandably took advantage of the German occupation during WW II to try to regain their freedom, so after the war it was necessary for K. to return (as a general in the secret police) to that unhappy land to deal with the Ukrainian liberation movement.

THE GREAT, RUTHLESS and barbaric betrayal of the Hungarian Freedom Fighters should still be too fresh in everyone's mind to need repeating K. over the misgivings of others in the Kremlin, engineered the whole thing.

This is Pearson's "warmhearted" Khrushchev. This is the creature who now is shedding crocodile tears over Stalin's victims. And this also is the creature who receives far too much "guest editorial" space in our newspapers.

Proposed Bond Issue Causing Much Debate

An air of tense excitement hangs over the office of the Student Body President these days. Something is going on behind the continually closed doors.

The deliberate manner and serious reflection of cabinet members and presidential assistants entering and leaving the office proclaims that something of unusual magnitude is in the wind.

Bobby Byrd and his aides are in the process of gathering data regarding the much-debated bond issue which Governor Farris Bryant is proposing. The issue has already been okayed by the Board of Control, but the Board of Education, which has the final say in the matter, still must discuss all facets of the bond proposal.

Byrd, and the student government leaders, want to know how the proposal is going to affect the university before it becomes law. This is something students certainly have a right to know, as anything for the bond issue is committing funds which the students must provide through their activity fees.

* * * * *

Byrd has arranged a staggering number of conferences with state leaders in his efforts to procure accurate information.

He has already talked with Tom Adams, Secretary of State, Jimmy Hines, aide to Governor Ed Ervin, Attorney General. Today he confers with J. Broward Culpepper, chairman of the Board of Control, and Tom D. Bailey, Supt. of Public Instruction, meets with the FSU delegation tomorrow.

When the bulk of the information is compiled, the student group will go to President Rickwell to get his thoughts on the matter. A cabinet meeting to sift and analyze the information and to decide on a possible course of action will follow.

Dr. Juanita Gibson, a former FSU professor now working at the capitol, is advising the student and aiding them in gathering facts and figures.

* * * * *

It is fitting that Florida State students have shown the initiative and interest to seek out the details on a controversial issue with directly affects the university. Too often too many students remain uninformed on issues far removed from the inter-action taking place in the outside world.

A university, however, should be more than a hermitage for academic absorption. Students gathered from text books must be applied to present, practical problems. An exercise in this is often worth more in later life than many hours of memorizing soon-to-be-forgotten facts.

Such practical experience with state problems also provides a more realistic test of one's ability to apply facts to problem than does student government. The results of creating a revolving fund for purchase of university buildings certainly has more real significance than the addition of two cheerleaders, the striking of two names from Who's Who, or other such trifling issues.

Students have the opportunity to make a material contribution to the university. It is encouraging that they are making the effort to do this.

Sigma Watta Coma

By LESLIE POWELL

Coma huffed into the pseudo shop wearing a new wig in deference to the season of goodwill. As a matter of fact, she carried her cheer under the bright turban perched in beligerent holiness upon the wing. From time to time, as the hair swung away from the left eye, a sign flashed magenta lettering at the world: See Rock City.

"LLVELY TIME, LUVELY TIME," she chortled. "Went to a embroidery party at the Sigma Watta household. Always wondered what them superiority houses were like on the inside. Couldn't get into the Tryalot outfit because I belched in the reception line. Apple Pee wouldn't take me in because they said I looked like a stevadore. Said I had utterly no couth and acted like a card carrying anarchist party member-ed.

"So wha needs the organized organs anyway," she said. "Actively I prefer the Sigma Wattas. Theres reside the most rambunctious collection of goldfish in the whole world. Just loved tasseled singing fish. One is named Tosca, another is called Euridice and the anonymous one is called Goldie Fish. A Musical Weekend

By DALE JENSEN

Jacques Barnum quotes a young composer friend as saying an era is born by the fine arts it fosters, and the present era needs onl yto provide its artists with the means and its heritage is assured. A means necessary in music is the opportunity to be heard. Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia provided this opportunity by presenting two fine programs over the weekend.

FRIDAY EVENING the Cambodian Room of Conradi Hall offered music written by FSU students and faculty. We haven't the space to detail each number deserving, but must contest ourselves with the three, which in our estimation, should be mentioned. Julie Adams' sprightly Trio For Woodwinds, well played by Sylvia Jones, Rodney Hoff and Sara Carter, was by turn witty and tender and well received by the sizeable audience

Dr. John Boda, teacher of composition on the faculty, was well represented by his latest work, Sonatina for Flute and Piano. Ronald Wyatt was soloist with Composer Boda accompanying. The beginning of the composition was particularly effective.

CHARLES THREATTE'S Kyrie, Sanctus, and Agnus Dei suffered in performance by a too hastily organized chorus. Nevertheless, it was a high point of the evening. The effort was to be wished for individually fine musicians, pulled itself together for the last of the three parts and it is to be wished we could hear the first two portions again. Overall, the composition proved an interesting and provocative.

Faculty Concerts, initiated at FSU in 1957, provide a perfect drawing-room feeling so vital to chamber music. Reminiscent of Lounge is just right and the light refreshments and informal atmosphere lends to the relaxing and satisfying Sunday afternoon Coffee Concert. Undoubtedly others share this feeling for the lounge is always filled . . . SEO.

ESPECIALLY NOTEWORTHY in Sunday's concert was the Brahms Horn Trio, Opus 40. Boakie Kitchengs, the fine Sophomore French Hornist, was superlative in a demanding performance. Penny Jones, on violen. Steve Smith on piano, and Kitchengs displayed an ensemble feeling that, for all its effortless sound, is extremely difficult to achieve. We hope to hear more of them, singly and together, in the future.

Letter From Germany

TO THE EDITOR:

Before expressing my request I should like to introduce myself to you. My name is Peter Vaite, I study medicine here at Munich University and I am 25 years old.

I should like to correspond in English and French with some student interested in literature, ballet, music and painting. I am intensely interested too in social problems, psychology and genetics.

Could you communicate my request to the students reading the journal by some ad. Any student (colored students included) interested in the subjects mentioned above will be welcome.

If any expenditures are linked to the endeavors you take in fulfilling my request, please let me know it.

I want to address you already here my sincere thanks.

Yours Truly

Tallahasseeans Are Propaganda Targets

By ROBERT SANCHEZ

It is a wonder that the people of Tallahassee retain any political perspective whatsoever, considering the amount of right-wing propaganda which is daily aimed at them. The reactionaries get off to an early start each day with an enlightening session by Reverend Carl McIntyre. Reverend McIntyre is carrying on a one-man campaign against the National Council of Churches and against communists, which includes just about everybody. His learned assistant on these broadcasts confines himself to grunts of approval and harumphs. A great deal of the good reverend's time is occupied with requests for funds from listeners in order that he might enlarge his network of stations in order to ask for more funds, etc.

LEST ANY LISTENER lose his zeal during the course of the day, WTNT airs editorials. That is good, for they certainly need a good airing, containing, usually, the musty political viewpoints of Barry Goldwater and the other right-wing extremists of whom the President warned.

But it is in the evening that the propagandists work full blast. A program called "Lifeline" features the noted scholar of Political Science, Wayne Poucher, who combines religious fundamentalism and right-wing politics in a crusade against the income tax, social welfare legislation, the United Nations, flouridation of drinking water, mental health, and other ideas of those whom he calls "the mistaken." A more appropriate name for the program would be "Pipeline." For the show is supported financially by multi-millionaire Texas oilman, H. L. Hunt, a man who has never quite gotten over his indignation at the fact that he pays more taxes than the men who work in his oil fields.

HARDLY HAVE THE airwaves cooled off when the grand cosmopleo of the extreme right fringe, Fulton Lewis Jr., stumbles onto the air. Mr. Lewis' political views are about as much of a monotone as his voice. Furthermore, he has a way of becoming obsessed with one issue for weeks at a time, like a broken record, oblivious to other world events. During the height of the Berlin crisis, he spent most of his broadcasts attacking Senator Fullbright and others who would keep the military out of politics.

Television viewers do not escape either. The ace reporter of WCTV, Frank Peppe, sometimes finds it such a struggle to read wire service reports that he resorts to clever little asides of penetrating commentary. And as a super spectacular extra for viewers who find these tidbits insufficient, the station has shown the discredited propaganda film, "Operation Abolition," a film so bad that even the Army has discontinued using it.

CONSIDERING THE AMOUNT of propaganda on the airwaves, it is indeed fortunate for Tallahasseans that they have a great metropolitan newspaper to serve them. The Tallahassee Democrat, which is undoubtedly the best daily paper published in Tallahassee, recognizes its serious responsibility to the public, realizing full well that as a monopoly it is morally bound to give all points of view. Thus you will find in the fun-filled pages of that journalistic marvel opinions ranging from right-wing to reactionary to monarchist. Students and faculty members who wished to compliment the genius chiefly responsible for the Democrat, Mr. Malcom Johnson, had a chance this Sunday evening as he addressed Liberal Forum at 7:30 at the Unitarian Chapel. As per Liberal Forum custom, the speaker was questioned following his presentation by members of the audience. I am sure many students were eager to ask Mr. Johnson how he puts out such an outstanding newspaper.

Guest Column

A Small Town Like This Cannot Be Compared To City, Writer Says

R. J. GOLDSTEIN

It is indeed unfortunate that a school newspaper is used as a tool for certain individuals who wish to see their name in print and/or have no conscientious desire to state a point of view of a sincere nature. It is further unfortunate that the individuals in charge of a school newspaper appear to show little judgement in their choice of letters of retort. The result is no editorial page that is very entertaining, but which reads like a Hearst newspaper rather than the New York Times, or any other nationally-considered sophisticated newspaper.

Mr. Sanchez's column degrading conditions in the South was not entirely without warrant, but his choice of adjectives displayed a controversy-provocation intent, altogether unnecessary and quite unfair to Southerners. His letter did not misrepresent anything, nor do I think it was meant to. I consider his second column as strong evidence for my assertion.

Several students answered Mr. Sanchez's first column, but I failed to see any intelligent replies. Worse, I saw only a linkage with southern flag-waving of such North proposals. Mr. Franklin's letter, cleaked in humor, was the most sophisticated and the fairest reply to the first unfortunate column. However, I think that he could have done better, as he appeared to have the ability.

As a New Yorker, I personally resent the comparison of my city with the conditions in the South, but only when these comparisons are lopsided to begin with and are filled with statistical conclusions which are manufactured by the letter-writer, not reported from some sociological journal. Granted, there is a great deal of filth and intergroup prejudice in New York City. Granted, there is a great deal of violence in certain areas. Granted, there probably is a great deal of political corruption. However, let us outline a quadrant containing eight million people in any geographic area of this country, and I am sure that the results may be comparable. As for culture, one cannot compare any large northern city to the South and still be fair to Southerners. The North has the larger cities, and wherever large cities are to be found will also be found the larger museums, operas, business establishments, heterogeneity in population (with the resultant intergroup conflicts) and opportunities. A small town like this cannot be compared to a large city, when one wishes to compare any differences. It would be fairer to compare it to a small northern town with the average southern town.

One thing, further: New York City does not represent a typical northern large city. It is, and always has been, a melting pot for people from every country in the world, and especially for those without a country. At one time there were conflicts between the Irish and the previously-settled inhabitants; at one time the conflict was between the Italians and the Jews. Presently there is a conflict between the incoming Puerto Ricans moving into the low income area know as the Upper West Side, and the people already living there. The reason for this conflict is the same as it always has been; namely, a language barrier complicated by cultural differences. It is a gross barrier complicated by cultural exaggeration (sic) and an unfair and poorly-founded statement that one cannot walk the streets of New York at night in safety. We are no more a group of wild animals than are you. The street gang phenomenon is isolated, for most people in this presenting dangers only to its constituents. I am sure that Southerners feel that way about KKK groups as well.

I don't see any point in discussing the school system in the South, or cases of federal intervention in southern affairs. I don't like segregation, nor do I like the term, "integration." I think desegregation is more intelligent. But the essence of my feeling is that I don't like racism. How many Southerners lost their parents or brothers fighting racism in World War II? When I see racism exercised in this part of the country, I see American principles going down the drain. New Yorkers can teach the South the lesson that intergroup conflicts in our city are usually gone after the first generation, once people have had become established. We have learned, as we feel you ought to learn, that every man has the right to any and every public offering regardless of his race or creed. This country was founded on equality, not separation and equality. We all have our personal prejudices, as these are often instilled into our personalities by our parents. But we have no right to pass these prejudices on to our children. They deserve to grow and develop in the best environment we can provide them. New Yorkers, I feel, do not want to change the South per se. We would just like our logic heard without the inevitable interruption, "If you don't like it here, who don't you go home!"

Research With Blind Done

A new series of laboratory experiments at Florida State University has mea- ed for the first time the ability of blind people to distinguish distance, shape and ure texture of objects several feet away.

ese same ability has been de- ered to an unusual degree by purpoise, which for 10 years been the subject of study by Winthrop N. Kellogg, profes- of psychology.

ilt a 30-foot-wide "purpose imming pool" divided into com- ments with openings which ld be varied for experimental poses, Dr. Kellogg and his as- ants have measured the por- e's uncanny ability to "see his ears," easily identifying and shapes of objects un- nier, even in complete dark-he porpoise, he says, makes an nsistent sputtering noise, ving the echoes against ob- under water to find his way ectly his prey. In the same says Kellogg, a blind man his way by tapping his cane, the echo to identify po- obstacles in his path.

SPUTTERING NOISE

new series of experiments for the first time measured ability of two totally blind ects to identify distances and and more surprisingly anything the hardness or ness of an object, telling ure it is, for instance, velvet metal.

our Navy could use its elec- sonar with equal success could distinguish between ts and submarines as well, ming what occasionally has ered—blasting a whole out e ocean with a depth charge," said Kellogg.

"Our experiments were conducted without any regard to the type of sound used by the blind person for his echoes. This is itself is an exciting field and has many possibilities," he said.

BLIND PERSONS

Blind persons, in addition to using a cane, sometimes shuffle their feet as they walk, whistle, hum, click their tongue, snap their fingers, sing, hiss, repeat words or use other methods of sending sounds out for echo purposes. The auditory scanning of echoes showing what is before them sometimes requires that they rotate or nod the head. A blind man experienced in this can handily make his way through a maze without ever touching a wall, he says.

Two totally blind subjects, both students, were asked to use their usual auditory scanning methods in a series of laboratory tests conducted during the 1960-61 school year in a soundproof room in the Psychology Bldg.

While seated in a chair, the subjects were asked to gauge the distance of disks which were placed in front of them, from one to six feet away. One subject was able to gauge distance within about four inches—better on the average than a sighted person using only one eye.

To about the same extent the subjects were able to identify sizes of various disks ranging in size from about five inches in diameter to 12 inches. In both distance and size experiments the blind students did far better than sighted subjects who were blindfolded for the tests.

Finally, disks of different kinds were used—some covered with wood, others with glass and others with denim or velvet cloth, metal or other materials. With two disks in front of him, a blind subject was told the disks were, for instance, of velvet and glass and he was asked to say which was which.

"We found there was little to indicate an ability, for instance, to tell the difference between denim and velvet, or between glass and metal," Kellogg said, "but there was an ability to tell a soft from a hard surface. One could, for instance, tell the difference between a door and a person a few feet away. The experiments showed 100 per cent accuracy in this," he added.

While the experiments were in progress, said the psychologist, drapes were put over windows at the side of the room to improve the "soundproof" quality. One of the subjects, said Kellogg, after turning his head in the direction of the windows for a while, observed: "Say, haven't you put curtains up over those windows?"

SIGHTED SUBJECT AT RIGHT, STUDENT MIKE SCHNEIDER OF ST. PETERBURG, IS UNable to gauge distance and size of disk nearly as well as a blind person experienced in using "auditory scanning" of echo, according to Florida State University Psychology Prof. W. N. Kellogg, who has found blind persons also are able to determine texture of the disk. Here graduate student Steve Feinstein of Jacksonville manipulates disk (note bicycle wheel pulley overhead) during a psychophysical experiment at FSU.

Coffee Hour

English Unlocks Doors To Learning

"From Ackron to Zanzibar, English is the key that best unlocks doors to knowledge," said Dr. Paul Stoakes, English professor at Florida State University, during the English Coffee Hour Friday.

The reason for this is that more literary and scientific works have been translated into English than into any other language, Dr. Stoakes explained. Japanese who want to read French or Italian literature have to learn English and read the translations, or else learn both of the other languages.

WIDELY STUDIED

Because of this, the professor believes that English is "the most widely studied single subject in the world."

Dr. Stoakes, who has experience in teaching English to foreigners as a second language, explained that the first problem is that of sounds which occur in English but not in the other language.

As an example, he pointed out that Spanish makes no distinction between "sh" and "ch." Therefore, Spanish speaking people first learning English cannot hear the difference between "cheat" and "sheet."

"Sounds are the main point of difficulty," he said, "so we concentrate on the spoken language first. We don't let them see how we spell it until they can say it."

The U. S. Information Agency, Voice of America, and many other groups are interested in teaching English abroad, Dr. Stoakes said.

In Japan alone, there are 50,000 native teachers of English who have never heard the language spoken by a native speaker of English. The main goal of the English teachers abroad is to train these teachers, Dr. Stoakes explained.

He warned, however, that the fact foreigners want to learn English doesn't necessarily mean that they love the nations which speak English.

In Russia, for example, students are required to learn English because of its technical usefulness, but Uncle Tom's Cabin is given to them as a picture of contemporary American life.

Cavalier, Cotillion Choose Members

After weeks of lessons, and tryouts, Cavaliers and Cotillion, the social dance honoraries on campus, have selected new members.

Invited to Cavaliers, the men's honorary, were Terry Christiansen, Buzz Geoghagen, Larry Hall, Junior Holland, Eric Jenkins, Ed Lyons, Mark Owen, Larry Shiller and Bob Stone.

Bids for Cotillion members were issued to Fred Allen, Willice Bunker, Carol Cleveland, Janet Dunning, Randy McGregor, Carol Russian, and Sally Sparks.

These groups consist of about 30 members and have as their special project the teaching of social dancing. Lessons are given each Tuesday and Thursday night at the Student Center for periods of about seven weeks.

The latest steps as well as the old standards are taught. Such dance crazes as the Hully Gully have been introduced to this campus through the Cavaliers-Cotillion lessons.

A new project planned for this spring, according to Fred Dillon, Cavaliers president, will be the teaching of dancing in the various fraternity and sorority houses. Cotillion members will teach in the fraternity houses while the Cavaliers will instruct the sorority members.

SOCIAL ORGANIZATIONS

Both organizations closely resemble social fraternities and sororities with membership by invitation, pledging, big brothers and sisters and initiation rites. Their pins also are similar to those of national Greek-letter social organizations.

Founded on this campus in 1910, Cotillion Club has quite an extensive history. According to a 1945 issue of the Flambeau, Cotillion members played "boys" while Village Vamps were the girls in social dancing situations.

A 1934 edition of the Flambeau stated that "dancing with men" was soon to be permitted in sorority and dormitory parlors.

When Cavaliers were organized on campus, the Cotillion members could stop playing boys.

Free Concert

The University Brass Choir will join the Percussion Ensemble in a concert at Florida State University at 8:15 p.m. Thursday, in Opperman Music Hall.

The program is free and open to the public.

The Brass Choir, conducted by Dr. William F. Cramer, will open the program with "Padnana" by Benedictum Grep and "Canzona per Sonare No. 2" by Giovanni Gabrieli.

Featured on the program will be a composition by Dr. Ramon Meyer, conductor of the Percussion Ensemble. The composition, "Ostinato for Percussion" will be performed for the first time at the concert.

FSU Loses First To OSU Badgers, Owls Gators Next

By BILL Cheek
Flambeau Sports Editor

The 1961 basketball season got off to a fine way Saturday night at St. Johns arena in Columbus, Ohio as the Florida State lost its opening game to Ohio State 75-57.

The Ohio State, who has been picked by a pre-season poll to be the number one team in the nation, was unable to gain any advantage with their twice All-American, Jerry Lucas. Lucas could manage only 11 points against the FSU man-to-man defense. On offense the Seminoles used a deliberate style of play designed to pull the 6-8 senior out on the floor. This is the second lowest total of his career.

Last season Lucas' low point was against Louisville in the NCAA regional tournament when he was only able to score nine points.

Ohio came out shooting and took a quick 6-0 lead. Rufus Ashworth sank FSU's first field goal with the game almost five minutes old.

The largest point spread during the first half was a 10-2 edge by the Buckeyes.

Near the end of the first half Ray Swain sank a jump shot to provide a brief lead for FSU, 22-21.

The first half ended with Ohio State in the lead 39-24.

The Seminoles kept the game close during the first half by working for layups or jump shots.

Outscoring Florida State 43-33, the Buckeyes were in command throughout the second half. The widest point margin came late in the game when Ohio had an 18-point lead.

John Havlicek paced the Buckeyes with 22 points for ten hits on 12 attempts. Havlicek was a starter on Ohio State's national championship team last year.

Dave Fedor led the Seminoles with 18 points on ten tries. Ray Swain was second with 13 points to his credit.

Ohio hit 38 per cent of its shots from the floor connecting on 30 field goals out of 56 attempts.

Florida State shot 53 times sinking 24 for a 45 per cent total.

Ohio State Coach Fred Taylor noting Fedor's field goal percentage said Fedor was the best corner man the Buckeyes will face all year.

Head Coach Bud Kennedy spotted two things that led to the downfall of the Seminoles: early mistakes and a too cautious approach early in the second half, allowing Ohio State to get a spread.

The Seminoles took on the University of Wisconsin last night in Wisconsin Fieldhouse in Madison, Wisconsin.

The Badgers boast six returning letter men and an outstanding group of sophomore personnel.

Head Coach John Erickson, now in his third year with the Badgers, piloted Wisconsin from tenth place to ninth place with a 4-10 record his first season. Last year the team moved into eighth place again with a 4-10 record.

Tom Hughbanks, a 6-5½ forward, is the Badgers lone senior. Hughbanks is the school's leading scorer with 613 points in 47 games.

Ken Siebel, a 6-5 junior, is the team's second leading scorer with 481 points in 38 games. Siebel, who plays either guard or forward, was voted Wisconsin's most valuable basketball player his sophomore year. Siebel was ranked as the Badgers' third best rebounder a year ago.

Ron Jackson, a second semester sophomore, had the best average of any player per game last year. Jackson scored 187 points in 12 games.

Wisconsin has three players who reach the 6-7 mark, and three other players who tip 6-5.

The results of the Wisconsin-FSU game were not available at the time the paper went to press.

Tomorrow night at 7:45 p.m. in their first home game of the season, the Seminoles will take on powerful Rice University.

The Owls downed a better-than-average Georgia Tech team in Atlanta Sat. night 84-80. Rice played the University of Florida last night but the results of the game were not available at press time.

Rice has three seniors and two sophomores on its starting line-up.

Ollie Chipley, a 6-6 forward and Mike Maroney, a 6-7 center were the top two scorers for the Owls last season.

Shipley averaged 13.8 points per game; Maroney was not far behind with 12.8 average, and he led the team in rebounds.

Although the Owls have a team that is heavy on the sophomore side and therefore lacking in experience, their ability was demonstrated in the defeat of Georgia Tech.

Thursday night the Seminole Five travels to Gatorland to do battle with its arch-rival, the University of Florida.

Florida will be carrying at least one loss to third-ranked Duke, 80-58.

Lou Merchant, Florida's All-American candidate, and Cliff Luyk were the Gator's top scorers last year. Merchant led with a 17.6 average and Luyk was second averaging 15 points per game.

Merchant, who has been out with influenza, was used in very limited action again at Duke scoring only four points.

The starting five will probably be Dave Fedor, Ray Swain, Rufus Ashworth, Charlie Long, and Dale Ricketts.

Kennedy Is In 14th Year

For the past 14 years the Florida State University Cagers have been coached by "Bud" Kennedy.

Coach Kennedy, who was born in Lawrence, Kansas, has coached some of the finest basketball players and teams in the nation.

The head coach attended Kansas State University in Pittsburgh, Kansas and graduated from the institution in 1932.

Upon graduation Kennedy began his coaching career. His first coaching job was at Orangeberg, Missouri. Later, he was transferred to Madison, Wisconsin until 1942.

Through 1942-45 Mr. Kennedy served with the United States Navy.

Coach Kennedy came to FSU in December of 1947. At this time he was appointed business manager of athletics and assistant basketball coach. He worked under the direction of Dean Donald Loucks, who was then head basketball coach of the Seminole team.

Coach "Bud" Kennedy is married and has two sons, both former students at Florida State.

Freshman Take Opener 78-44

By DALE MARLER
Flambeau Sports Writer

Florida State's freshman basketball team won their opening game Friday night by beating Central Florida Junior College by a score of 78-44.

The Freshman Cagers scored a big second half to pull away from their opponents by a big margin.

After a back-and-forth battle in the first eight minutes, Jerry Shirley, FSU's forward, hooked a jump shot to make the score 10-9 and put the Seminoles ahead to stay for the rest of the evening. When the horn sounded ending the first half, FSU led Central Florida J. C. 39-25.

The Tribe then came back very strong in the second half to add 49 points to their previous score and completely dominated the scoring in the last five minutes.

The top scorer for the Seminoles was Jerry Shirley, 6-5 forward, who contributed 16 points and led the rebounding with 17. Ross Winters, 6-3 guard, was the second place man with 13 points.

FSU's starting lineup consisted of guards Ross Winter and Pete Gonzales, forwards Cal Hupe and Jerry Shirley and center Bob Gerning.

Also seeing plenty of action throughout the game and adding greatly to the Tribes win were: Ken Black, Floyd Lorenz and Tom Lund.

The Seminoles will play their next game this Wed. night against Kentucky's Lindsey Wilson Junior College at Tully Gymnasium starting at 5:30 p.m.

After Wednesday's game the Freshman Cagers travel to Gainesville to play the University of Florida Baby Gators.

Phifer Leads Rifle Team

Although hit hard by graduation, the Army ROTC Rifle team has hopes of fielding a first rate team for the matches which begin in January and run through April.

This year's team, composed mostly of freshmen and sophomores, is built around a nucleus of six returning lettermen. Led by team Captain Jim Phifer, a senior, the other lettermen are George Brown, also a senior, Paul Williams, junior, and Chip McGee, Bob Botz, and Tom Kentonholtz, all sophomores.

Thus far, the team has participated in several postal matches with other colleges and universities, including Georgia Tech, Auburn, Furman, the University of Miami and the University of Florida. Regarded mainly as practice for the later shoulder-to-shoulder matches, postal matches are carried on through the mail with both teams exchanging targets, which are then graded by the opposing squad. Held every Friday afternoon, the postal matches are both good practice and a fairly accurate comparison of skills.

The high point of competition is reached in February when the team goes to New Orleans during the Mardi Gras for the national matches. Last year, the Army ROTC team placed fifteenth in a field of thirty-six.

The Army ROTC Rifle Team is coached by SFC Dewey Furches and sponsored by Capt. Harry Sutton.

Versatile Journalist Rode Soapbox In Derby

By MARY ELLEN HARRIS
Flambeau Feature Editor

Newspaper people are versatile people. They have to be.

They have to be able to cope with an irate Editor-in-Chief as well as with those deadline-day migraines. They have to develop a calloused attitude toward the world in general and reporters in particular and an agile index finger to dial innumerable telephone numbers.

These people also need an unfailing sense of the ridiculous as well as a Sherlock Holmes quality for detecting lost pencils, erasers, glue pots, rulers, copy paper, typewriters and ash trays.

If they're little, as most of the people in the second floor offices of Bedlam, they also have to drive soap boxes.

That means they get to hurtle themselves in a pile of hay and, if they're among the un-fortunate, they get to do it all over again.

Driving a soapbox means suffering from acute anxiety for weeks before the event, worrying about weight fluctuations and trying on the soapbox for "size."

It also involves anxious queries about student insurance and tactless remarks about "I heard that one year some girl ran into the curb . . ." or "You aren't going to drive in that thing are you? Well, it's been nice knowing you . . ."

It also means getting up at the crack of dawn some morning and going for a happy little jaunt down some deserted country road to see if the steering is tight or the wheels aligned.

Sometimes the soap box driver never reaches the hay at the bottom of the longest ride in the world. Sometimes . . . .

Oh well, it's almost time for visiting hours. "Hey, nurse, d'you suppose you could loosen this bandage on my knee . . ."

DTD, ADPi Took Honors

First place winners in the annual soap box derby Saturday were the Delta Tau Delta fraternity and the Alpha Delta Pi sorority.

Doug Brooks of Phi Delta Theta and Karen Edgar of Alpha Gamma Delta presented the trophies to the winners. The Derby is annually sponsored by these groups to raise money for Campus Chest.

Second place winners were the Phi Kappi Psi fraternity, a newcomer to this campus, and the Kappa Alpha Theta sorority.

Third place went to Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity and Kappa Delta sorority.

Brooks stated that this was by far the best Derby for a long time because the course was longer, the cars were better and there were absolutely no serious mishaps.

A follow-up of the Derby was an open house at the Alpha Gamma Delta house featuring the Embers.

Contest Offers 2 Scholarships

A graduate school scholarship will be the first prize to a male and female winner of the 1961 Edward P. Morgan essay contest sponsored by the ABC Radio Network.

The contest entitled "Youth's role in U. S. Foreign Policy," is open to any undergraduate student in the United States. Entries are to consist of a 600 word essay on the topic and must be postmarked not later than midnight, Dec. 31.

The contest's judges are Chester A. Bowles, R. Sargent Shriver, Sen. J. W. Fulbright, Sen. Everett M. Dirksen, and Morgan.

As well as the scholarship award the authors of the two best essays will be flown to New York and Washington. At this time they will meet, talk and dine with high level government officials.

In addition, the authors of the eight best essays—after the winning two—will receive complete sets of the 1962 Encyclopedia Britannica.

Entries will be judged on both content and freshness and form.

All entries should be mailed to: Edward P. Morgan Essay Contest, P. O. Box 75, Mount Vernon 10, New York.

Further details will be announced regularly on the Edward P. Morgan and the News program, Monday through Friday on any ABC radio station.

Senate Tables Bill, Awaits Court Ruling

By HOWARD DENSON
Flambeau Staff Writer

A resolution to get National Who's Who in American Universities and Colleges to remove the names of two Florida State University students from the Who's Who list was tabled Wednesday afternoon by the Student Senate.

The legislators will act on the resolution next Wednesday after the Honor Court has rendered a decision concerning the legality of the action taken by the Who's Who committee. The court will meet at 2 p.m. Sunday.

RESOLUTION

The resolution, which was titled a Senate Resolution "pertaining to illegal action taken by the student body Who's Who Committee," was introduced by 16 senators and Women's Vice President—Myjmon Thompson.

It would require that President the Student Body — Bobby Byrd, President of the Senate— Jerry Van Assenderp; and Dean of Students—Dr. R. R. Oglesby, be asked to write letters individual and immediately to National Who's Who, urging that the names of Byrd and Jack Ascherl, president of the senior class, be removed from the list.

Byrd, appearing at the Senate meeting as a student, said the names of the 37th and 38th nominees in the Who's Who list probably will not be placed in the book according to literature from the national organization.

Byrd previously requested that the Who's Who Committee strike the two "illegal" names from the list.

ILLEGAL

The term "illegal" caused some conflict in the meeting. Sen. Carole Ferlita, one of introducers, said that the phrase "illegal" should be deleted from the title.

Other senators felt it was not the duty of the Senate to declare the Who's Who Committee's action illegal. They pointed out that there was definitely two interpretations of the Who's Who statute.

Sen. Arnie Gibbs said he was under the impression that the

The names of members of WHO'S WHO IN AMERICAN UNIVERSITIES AND COLLEGES may be stricken and replaced for "about six weeks" or possibly even longer; according to the National Office in Tuscaloosa, Ala.

"We would need a letter from Dean Oglesby," a spokesman for the organization told the FLAMBEAU in a long distance telephone call yesterday.

committee fell nominees had to meet only one of the requirements listed in the statute. Other senators, however, disagreed with him.

HASTY ACTION

The senators were cautioned against acting too hastily by Bill Greenwood, secretary of public relations. He said that, if the letter is submitted immediately and the names are stricken from the list, there is no reason for the Honor Court to meet this year —except to clear up the future matters.

Two senators warned the body that the controversy was dividing into a personality conflict.

Sen. Pattie Burke encouraged the senators to leave the matter on the list because of the prestige of the students. She asked if they had questioned their constituents—many of whom approve not striking the names.

The senate should not consider the names of the students in deciding whether or not to keep them from the list. Sen. Joe Ferraro said. The legislators should not consider the two as personalities, he said.

The resolution was tabled by a 21-20 vote.

IN OTHER ACTION

In other action, the Senate once again struck out a constitutional interpretations—this time in the Hall of Fame Committee.

It sent to committee for study a bill which would delete the words "no exceptions shall be made by the Hall of Fame Committee" from the statute.

The bill also stated:

"Any student body officer or student serving in any capacity whatsoever with Student Govern-

Frazier Statement

"The reason the committee made the two exceptions for Who's Who was that we felt that the two students were extremely outstanding in the fields of leadership, service, activities and personality for future service to their communities," said Jvolyn Frazier, chairman of the Who's Who committee.

We were well aware that in the minutes a statement to this agreement is set up as one of the requirements, however, we based our decision on a very strong precedent that has been set in the past," she added.

Therefore, since exceptions have been made in the past, the committee felt that it too could make exceptions," she stated. "If Senators would have been interpreters allowing exceptions in the by-we felt justified in also interpreting them in this manner," explained.

Exceptions have also been made concerning the grade requirement for Hall of Fame. However, after finding out about the exceptions, Senate inserted a clause in the Statutes saying that "no exceptions" could be made by the Who's Who Committee felt the Senate desired that no exceptions be made for Who's Who. They would have also inserted such a clause in this section of the Statutes, she concluded.

Sir Gerald:

FSU Lecture Series Features BBC Man

Sir Gerald Beadle, past president of the British Broadcasting Corporation's TV Network, will be the last lecture Series speaker at Florida State University Wednesday night.

The lecture, on "The Functions Television in a Modern Society" will be in Opperman Music Hall at 8:15 p.m. A public reception will follow in Longmire Building.

EDUCATIONAL OPPORTUNITY

Dr. Bernard Cooper, associate professor of speech and a worker in the radio-television field, describes Sir Gerald as "A great man and a great wit." He says he will be an outstanding educational opportunity especially for radio and television majors.

Educated at Cambridge, Sir Gerald fought in World War I as a Royal Artillery officer. In 1918 King George VI conferred upon the honor of Commander of the British Empire and last December, Queen Elizabeth conferred on him the honor of Knight Bachelor.

PIONEERED RADIO

Sir Gerald pioneered radio in Africa, South Africa, was responsible for major radio developments in London, Northern Ireland and Western England and according to Dr. Cooper, "the man who built the BBC."

He became increasingly associated with television following its advent in 1936 and was responsible for the creation of the world's largest electronic program center, BBC's television center in London.

Since retiring from the presidency of the BBC in June, Sir Gerald has devoted his attention to global aspects of television. He is now serving both for the British government and the BBC to stir up interest in ideas for international television.

Besides lecturing over this country, he includes among his subjects "Global TV—A Must for World Unity," "Social Consequences of TV," "TV As An Educational Force," "TV and World Events," and "The Future of International TV."

TALK TO CLASSES

While here at FSU Sir Gerald will talk to television and radio classes conducted by Dr. Cooper, who was instrumental in arranging his visit here. At 11 a.m. Wednesday he will meet with radio and television majors and any other interested students, in an informal question and answer session in Conradi Theatre.

Sir Gerald and Lady Beadle will arrive here Tuesday and will be the guests of FSU's President and Mrs. Gordon W. Blackwell during their stay. They will be guests at a formal dinner given by Governor and Mrs. C. Farris Bryant at the governor's mansion, Wednesday evening, preceding his address.

ODK Taps Twelve Men

Seven senior and five junior men were tapped Wednesday by the Florida State University circle of Omicron Delta Kappa, national men's leadership honorary.

Seniors tapped are Hugh Davis, Charlie Hawkins, Chuck Kemman, Steve Klesius, Carl Kuttler, Tom Schultz and Dan Walbolt.

Juniors tapped are Wayne Edwards, Spence Guerin, Johnny Smith, Buddy Waring and Ken van Assenderp.

FIVE AREAS

Five major areas of campus life are recognized by ODK, scholarship; athletics; student government social and religious affairs; publications; and speech, music, drama and the other arts.

The organization considers five qualifications for membership: exemplary character, responsible leadership and discriminatory service in campus life, superior scholarship, genuine fellowship and consecration to democratic ideals.

All of the new taps are in the upper 25 percent of the student body scholastically, stressed ODK President Jack Ascherl. This year ODK strove not only to recognize the campus leaders but also junior men who have exhibited great potentiality for leadership, Ascherl added.

Among the activities that the senior men were recognized for are Davis, president of Pershing Rifles and Phi Beta Kappa; Hawkins, Gold Key president and former chairman of Traffic Court, Klesius, captain of the Football Team and fraternity officer; Kuttler, men's vice president and former senator; Schultz, secretary of welfare in the student body president's Cabinet and fraternity president; and Walbolt, chief justice of Honor Court.

JUNIOR TAPS

Among the activities of the junior taps are: Edwards, secretary of finance in the student body president's Cabinet and former president of Alpha Council; Guerin, editor of Smoke Signals and Flambeau staff cartoonist; Smith, senator and past president of Alpha Phi Omega, men's service fraternity; Waring, past president of Phi Eta Sigma and member of Alpha Council; van Assenderp, student body vice president and Senate president and the former chairman of the Lobby Committee.

These men and three other undergraduate men, Ascherl, Duke Scott and Bill McLemore, several graduate students and a number of faculty members and community leaders will comprise the FSU ODK circle this year.

Phi Beta Kappa Speaker:

Math Is Science And Humanities

By LANA MURRY
Flambeau Staff Writer

"Mathematics is a science whose concepts, symbolically expressed, have a humanistic aspect which to many of its devotees is of greater importance than its scientific aspect." Dr. R. L. Wilder said Monday night.

He spoke on the subject "Mathematics: Science or Humanity?" at the annual Founders' Day banquet of Phi Beta Kappa.

MATHEMATICS AN ART

"To many mathematicians, mathematics is an art, and to them we can conclude, the humanistic aspects of mathematics are more precious than the scientific aspects," he said.

Dr. Wilder discussed the sharp schism between so-called "pure" and "applied" mathematics. "The main difference . . . is that they are dealing with different aspects of reality."

"So long as a mathematician works . . . developing his theory but constantly keeping his eye on some aspect of his environment in order to watch the interplay of theory and that part of his environment modelled within the theory, I would call him an 'applied mathematician.'

PURIST

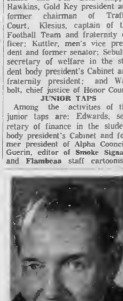
"But when he becomes so enthralled with the concepts and becomes engaged in studying their implications without any regard for his environment, then he becomes a 'pure mathematician,'" he commented.

"This is the age of specialization, and this is just as true in mathematics as elsewhere. The day of the mathematical giant who 'knew all mathematics' is gone forever," he stressed.

Dr. Wilder stated that mathematics has made such rapid advances in the past 40 years that a top-notch mathematician of 1920 probably couldn't understand current journals in the same fields. He defended new teaching methods at all levels of education and traced the development of mathematical history.

POWERFUL TOOL

"By making mathematics simpler while at the same time a more powerful tool, and at the same time more beautiful . . . we shall also be encouraging more students who are capable to enter mathematical and other scientific careers," he added.



Contrasting science and humanity, he said, "I think of science as the construction of theories or models of physical or other (e.g., social) realities with a view to adaption and prediction, and possibly involving descriptive and empirical activities designed to furnish bases for and checks on the theories."

AESTHETIC PURSUIT

"I conceive of a humanity as an aesthetic pursuit, usually employing the tools art, literature and music—in a nutshell, the use of symbols of some sort in order to achieve beauty, simplicity, harmony, and other types of what we consider to be aesthetically satisfying qualities," the speaker said.

He deplored the point of view that divides the scientific and humanistic aspects of mathematics. "I don't think, really, that they can be separated."

Dr. Wilder, visiting research professor of mathematics at FSU, has been a professor in the Mathematics Dept. of the University of Michigan since 1926, and research professor since 1947. During 1955-1956 he was president of the American Mathematical Society, and in 1950 was vice president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

SIR GERALD BEADLE

SG Cabinet Okays Bond Issue In Meet

By JOAN ABBOTT
Flambeau News Editor

Unanimous support of Governor C. Farris Bryant's bond issue plan was voiced by the Student Body President's Cabinet at Florida State University in a meeting late yesterday afternoon.

The Cabinet came out in favor of the plan which would pool unpledged revenue from the student building funds at all of the state-supported universities to finance a bond issue for building construction.

BUILDINGS INCLUDED

The $21 million issue would include the student unions at FSU, the University of Florida and Florida A and M as well as academic buildings and other student service buildings at all of the universities in the system, including the proposed university at Boca Raton.

Other buildings at FSU would include the third floor addition to the Nuclear Bldg., an addition to the Psychology Bldg. and the first phase of the Physics Bldg.

The Bryant plan provides for bonds for all of the construction to be validated at one time rather than in a series of issues.

Repayment of the bonds would be over a 30-year period.

Student Body President Bobby Byrd, other Student Government leaders and several members of the Cabinet met with Bryant and various other State Cabinet members before they endorsed the plan.

STATEMENT

At 5:30 p.m. yesterday the student Cabinet issued the following statement:

We the Student Governmental officials of Florida State University, acting in the interest of our fellow students and on our own accord, contacted and talked with various State Cabinet members concerning the proposed bond issue. We never opposed or favored this plan at any point but were seeking information since there seemed to be many conflicting ideas concerning the issue. Each official we contacted was very cooperative and congenial, and Governor Bryant was most receptive in answering our inquiries. Our main objective was to determine how the Student Activity Fees would be involved. Having received the information we sought, we conclude that the proposed bond issue is in the best interest of the State of Florida. This conclusion is reached by Student Body President Bobby Byrd, his Cabinet, and the President and Men's Vice President of the Student Senate.

"Bryant told us that in this recognized emergency this was the best plan as he saw it for getting the buildings that are needed now," Byrd said.

He reassured those that were in doubt that all needed student facilities that had been requested by the universities and appropriated by the Legislature were included in this plan," Byrd concluded.

Solons Defeat Bathroom Bill

A bill to limit the use of the bathrooms by freshmen women was defeated Tuesday afternoon as the Women's Senate blitzed through several bills.

"The bathroom bill" would not let freshmen women utilize the bathroom between the hours of 11 p.m. and midnight without permission. After that time, they would be able to use the room, but would have to return to their rooms immediately.

The women senators unanimously defeated it.

SIGNIFICANT PRIVILEGES

The legislators extended two light privileges per school week to freshmen women. Each light privilege will give an hour extension for study (which may be completed in part or whole), which may be used by the requester and her roommate.

A bill was passed saying that women may not practice musical instruments in the residence houses, but may play instruments, phonographs, and radios for pleasure as long as they aren't an annoyance.

"SMOKING BILL"

A "smoking bill," which was unanimously passed, permits women to smoke in the recreation area, but refused them the right to smoke in the bathroom. Corridors, business area, and the parlor of the halls.

The senators also knocked down a bill which would require that women who are visiting in other dorms, except sister sorority houses, etc., sign their dorms' guests books and the guest books of the place which they visit.

New Greeks To Be GivenFullCharters

Two Greek colonies on the Florida State University campus will receive their charters this weekend and be accepted into their national organizations as full chapters.

After approximately three semesters of colonization, Delta Chi colony has received permission for their chartering from Delta Chi International and FSU.

Installation ceremonies will be this weekend and will begin tonight with an open house featuring the "Buffs." Formal installation will take place tomorrow night at the Holiday inn. A semi-formal dance will conclude the festivities.

SPECIAL GUESTS

Among the special guests present for the services will be B. K. Roberts, Chief Justice of the Florida Supreme Court; Louis Armstrong, national president; Claude Layfield, national secretary and Jefferson Coleman, regional representative. Delta Chis from the Universities of Alabama and Florida, Auburn University and Rollins College will also be present.

Initiation and installation of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority will also take place this weekend. The program will begin tonight with a Fireside Service followed by a coffee hour in Longmire

Initiation and installation will take place tomorrow morning in the Florida Union. Pledging will be at 4 p.m. tomorrow afternoon when the pledges will receive the official pledge pin and pledge letter Sigma within a Delta.

A banquet at the Downtowner at 7 p.m. tomorrow and a reception at 3 p.m. in Longmire Sunday will conclude the weekend's activities.

NATIONAL OFFICERS

Present will be the national president, vice president, secretary-treasurer and the directors of chapters and membership. Kappa's from Rollins College and the University of Alabama are also expected to attend.

New initiates will be Trish Bassett, Jane Ann Briggs, Ginny Brown, Lynn Butler, Sandy Clary, Jerry Elliott, Lynne Geisler, Dansye Gibson, June Goforth, Penny Hamilton, Leecia Lewis, Tallula Long, Beverly Marchetta, Judy Merrill, Patti Lou Pierre, Linda Lee Pursley, Nita Sue Reeves, Claire Stanton, Lynne Thorpe and Cathy Young.

Dr. Friedman:

'Trend Leads To Socialism'

The present trend toward more government interference with business is leading this country toward socialism and loss of freedom, University of Chicago economist Milton Friedman said Tuesday night.

Dr. Friedman, who has done extensive research on the effect of the money supply on prices and economic activity, spoke on "Capitalism and Freedom" at the University Lecture Series.

DEMOCRATIC SOCIALISM

The idea of "democratic Socialism" indicates the widespread belief that politics and economy are separate. "That is not true," he said. "If we are Socialistic, we shall no longer be democratic," he emphasized.

Citing such governmental subsides as agricultural price supports, tariffs, minimum wages and old-age pension, Dr. Friedman declared that all these "constitute interference with our existing freedom and threats to our individual freedom."

There is a strong tendency, he said, for people to regard the present situation as the normal one. But the normal state is tyranny and misery, not free enterprise.

There has never been an example in history in which you had anything approaching a politically free society in which the bulk of economic activity has been carried out through private enterprise." Free enterprise and competitive capitalism are necessary in free democracy, he added.

"The problem of political freedom is a problem of concentration of power," Dr. Friedman asserted. This concentration of power can be prevented only by dispersal—and open market and free enterprise are means to dispersal.

During voluntary exchange, greater total output tends to occur. Each man benefits, regardless of function and division of labor, Dr. Friedman said. "If two parties engage in a deal, it is possible for both parties to benefit," he added.

ESSENTIAL FEATURE

The essential feature of the market system is that it protects each person, he said. That "each man is an island unto himself" because he can withdraw if the arrangement doesn't suit him, he said. "Each man, in effect, votes for what he wants and gets what he votes for," he added.

Dr. Friedman said it is difficult, but not impossible, to reverse the kind of movement now in progress. "But we must persuade people at large to do something about this," he stressed.

"We must cut the state down to its proper position as an umpire or referee not allow it to act as a player, interfering here, there and everywhere," he concluded.

Word From Who's Who

Student Senate made a wise move in not taking hasty action on the Who's Who selection committee. Emotions have flared on this issue with hasty, unfair charges being hurled from all sides. Only through calm, intelligent processes of law can an acceptable decision be made.

The problem is thorny enough as it is without agitators attempting to hasten the legislature into making ill-considered decisions.

THE PROBLEM BOILS down to several factors. The Selections Committee rejected Pres. Bobby Byrd's request to remove the names of Jack Ascheral and himself from the list, feeling that it was in their power to do so. Many senators resent that the stated requirement of a 2.5 overall grade average was violated. Some contend that it was Byrd's duty to demand that the names be removed. Honor Court, the body duly designated to interpret the statutes, will puzzle the problem Sunday afternoon.

Until then, the senate has refused to be baited into calling Miss Frazier's name out of committee to be acted on separate from other cabinet recommendations and has tabled a motion to ask Byrd, Vice-President Ken van Assenderp, and Dean R. R. Ogleby to write Who's Who national office asking the names to be dropped

To call Miss Frazier's name out of the committee alone and without proper committee consideration would have amounted to a trial. Such a trial is inappropriate for a legislative body. Honor courts can do any trying necessary and the senators may act from this ruling.

The discussion of the resolution to have the names stricken was based on the time factor. Proponents contended that the names must be removed immediately, or they could not be removed at a later date. They were wrong. The National Who's Who in American Universities and Colleges said yesterday that names could be removed for a minimum of six weeks and that an extension could be granted in a special circumstance.

The holding of these two actions until next senate meeting puts the burden on the Honor Court.

We feel that the Senate has a good case in complaining about the circumvention of the 2.5 grade average requirement. Precedent is a weak basis for making an exception to a statute, no matter however strong the precedent has been in the past.

Making exceptions to statutes because of the absence of a clause stating that "There will be no exceptions" is also very weak. Laws are passed with the inherent intent that exceptions are not to be made to them.

However, this does not mean that the committee was necessarily violating a statute. No official ruling had been asked for before the final confirmation action was taken. It was merely a case of opposing interpretations made by two factions, neither of which had the authority to make a binding legal interpretation.

Both factions seemed to be acting in good faith, believing that their actions were right. One senator proved wrong that afternoon and we feel that it will likely be the Committee. In this case, the necessary removal can be effected before the publication has gone to press, absolving one problem.

We feel, however, that individual action against members of the committee will serve no constructive end. Rather the removal of the names and the interpretation should close up any possible misinterpretations in the future.

Why Not Speak Out

One of the top administrative officials of Florida State University was alleged to have said in the past few days that "students should speak their minds more often," or words to that effect.

That's a commendable sentiment, and one that might in the long run help erase the word "state" from the minds of people who have reason to think about FSU. Unfortunately there is a hitch: in the past the administration has done nothing to foster the speaking of minds.

At this stage of the game it appears to many students that for every good reason that can be given in favor of speaking out, there are two better reasons for keeping one's mouth shut.

Before students speak out too freely and that applies to the classrooms here too, they have to have a minimum of mutual respect and must know that they will at least receive the courtesy of attention. Nor do they wish to be held up to ridicule at the discretion of professors and officials.

Too many students here can draw up a list as long as your arm of people who were outspoken and aren't here anymore. The people-punters didn't exactly kick them out . . . it was a more subtle gentle shoving, a slow but sure edging toward the gate.

While many of our administrators stamp about campus looking for all the world like Father's Day ads, there aren't many students willing to believe their eyes. More likely that they'll believe their ears, and at FSU that is not such a bad idea. It gets tedious, admittedly, listening to the outpourings of rashy rumor and counter-rumor, but it is playing the game the way FSU plays.

Rumor is used as a weapon here. Any faintheart that likes to see an axe fall but hasn't the strength to do the job himself can use rumor with often devastating effect. Rumor is one source of the vague discontent that eats away at FSU. Rumor has undermined the trust of the student body. Rumor has made it the time and again that to make the Dean's List isn't necessarily an honor.

To be blunt, students don't trust the officials here out of sight. And that includes the many, many minor officials with their assorted student satellites.

One thing that might take a portion of the hot air out of the mouthpiece sails around here would be to make known who is carrying tales and to whom they carry them. Students can, like the man said, hang together or hang separately.

There are plenty of students that would love nothing better than speaking out. But until students have some idea that what they say isn't going to be used as a blunt instrument to knock them out of college they aren't going to be quick to speak. There is always the feeling at FSU that you don't really know which ears attuned to your conversations are "borrowed" ears. That doesn't speak too highly of a campus that could use some speaking out.

Important Expression Is Student Concern

The most important aspect of the recent week-long investigation of the bond issue is not the carefully thoughtout stand reached by the Student Body cabinet.

Rather, the expression of genuine concern for the welfare of Florida State University, and the university system as a whole, by members of the student body outweighs any result of the investigation.

This expression of concern had many forms. It was shown in the energies which these students gave readily to gather information of genuine significance. It was expressed in the facial faces of the group as they returned from meeting after meeting. This concern meant spare time, precious to all college students, freely sacrificed. It meant studies that will have to be made up and long nights in doing so.

Those who fervently declare the apathy of all college students will be hard pressed to find a reason for this sacrifice and concern. Somehow the yardstick for measuring the "beaten generation" does not seem to apply.

* * * * *

Of course, there are personal interests involved, the critics might sneer. But they are not personal interests in the usual sense. There is no money to be awarded; no trophy to be copped; no free beer to be won.

The only personal benefit derived will be in the form of educational enlightenment. Principles learned in the class room have real meaning to those who have seen them applied.

Terms like political power and pressure become more than text book words. Close contact with the decision makers of the state make these terms meaningful. Both are present in any political situation and the capital of Florida is certainly no exception.

Men in political positions have always been forced to hedge a little, to talk in circles a little, and to run around the bush a little. This contact with state officials has given the FSU students experience in distinguishing between these and fact.

Certainly, the students have learned that the only real way to find out everything is to ask everyone. There is nothing like talking to men of opposing sides for bringing all facts and factors to light.

* * * *

The most material benefit of the investigation is the public approval and support proved by the students. This can not be underestimated, for students who show concern for Florida are certainly looked well upon by the citizens of the state.

It is satisfying to know that when State students were tramping around the capitol, University of Florida students were caught napping. They concurred with the governor's decision. Both newspaper applauded the idea before ramifications were completely evident. So FSU students, who have refused to commit themselves until they know what they are talking about, have just reason to be proud.

They have just reason to be proud of the reception they received at the capitol. At the onset, it looked as though state officials did not want to be bothered with students. But after seeing that they meant business, the reception was a great deal warmer. This also reflects well on the state officials.

For the ordinary student, this bond issue investigation can mean one particular thing. Indeed one person's interest is of more significance that whether two names appear on a book or two more cheerleaders will be added. It is encouraging to see student government do something with real meaning, for a change.

Reflections

The Duress Of It All

BY LESLIE POWELL

Some days would be an abomination in the sight of the most easy going dean. As a "for instance", take Wednesday past. It was a gross day. A horrible day.

FOR ONCE I TRIED being a gentleman and volunteered to change a harp playing angel's flat tire, no, not Dean Lee, I meant the rubber object on which her car was ordinarily cushioned on four of.

So taking into consideration recalcitrant tire tools and greasy clothes and other such curtailments laden passersby, the angel and I got the tire changed. Then, when the jack was out of the way and we stood in momentary triumph, we heard a shhhhing sound that proved as ominous as you might think. The spare had just exploded. Worse, the tire made on the other side of the car joined the general strike. Now we had three flat tires.

THE DINNER WEDNESDAY night was bad. The food was fine, but it is my own considered opinion that there's only one way to eat chicken . . . with my fingers. So I glutted myself and disciples under the cold, disapproving stares of those talented people than can enjoy a drumstick and use a knife and fork. Worse, the blonde that always gets up my dinner beer chewed her hairstyle, which I had hitherto found most fascinating.

And the lodge meeting later! Nobody showed up but the Ladies' Auxiliary. As the only member present, I found it impossible to show equal attention to all the auxiliary members. The result has been a schism. The other lodge member thinks I'm a hog (hawg in this area).

AND THE SIGMA WATTAS reported that I had drawn attention to their pogey bait-holdings and they were receiving phone calls from people wishing to join a lively organization. Sorry, people, but the Wattas are all pledged out. Try them again about 1965.

The Conservatives for Progressive Action met Wednesday with a resounding flop. Only we founders (Mygnon Champion and I) showed up. The idea is that campus politics are mussing that little extra bit of confusion and besides, as a third force the CPA (a respectable abbreviation second only to the PTA, AMA and PHD) could ally itself with, as the need arose, either SP or SRP.

AS A MATTER OF FACT, about the only nice things that happened Wednesday were that somehow the pity of it all touched a talented heart, so beginning shortly Cyma can appear as a distinctly visual individual. Any resemblance to assorted campus damsels will remain a most question.

The only other nice thing is that we got paid. I like money. I always liked money. It is dirty and sometimes when you get a dollar bill that's been around a long time it actually stinks, but for something that smells, money is the easiest disposal of objectionable item that has ever come to my attention.

OH, YES. I FORGOT. Something else did happen. Someone named something like Feethen Beem brought me a book to read all about someone else named Ayn Rand, but I licked that problem—I read the synopsis and bought a new TV Guide.

But Wednesdays are better than Thursdays, though at least on Wednesday you won't find me writing a column (?) under duress. Besides, Thursday comes after Thursday unless it has been rescheduled since last week, and that means we maybe can rest up enough to face it all over again next week—flat tires, flat wallets and flat spirits.

Mural, Mural On The Wall

A day in the life of a Soda Shop, season: Christmas-spirit. This is the time of joy and goodwill, and wonderful things. Lo . . . cin spite of drawbacks aforementioned, same page, different author) . . . an artist at FSU.

IT IS A PRESTIGE SYMBOL to be in Claire's mural. In the mural are pictures of Elvis pictures a typical soda-shop-table with the typical quagmire of cups, saucers and etceteras, of the eight people seated about the table, thirty-seven have been positively identified.

"Hey Claire," they shout. "It's beautiful!"

THEY CLAIRE," they shout. "I like it!"

"Hey Claire," they shout. "Is that me?"

"What a funny mural," says the Humorous Fellow. "I hate to point this out," says someone, "But your partridge is a pigeon, Claire." "Hey Claire, I hate to coffee. It is obvious that the gods do not agree with him

"Oh, oh, Lord, look look look. See the Santa," say some misplaced education majors.

WITTY "What a funny physical education major," says the Humorous Fellow.

FREIBERGER NEE ANGELO painted this wonder lying on her back in the Soda Shop while, and it took her fourteen years.

The soda shop even has a time gauge as good as any in your glass. The one record of Christmas carols takes about thirty-seven minutes to play, so that you know when you hear O Tannenbaum for the third time that it is time to go to anthropology class.

BUT I DIGRESS. "What a funny memorah in the Santa sleigh," says the Humorous Fellow.

"It's nice," says a philosopher. "But is it truth?"

Art Serves History As Man's Mirror

BY ROBERT SANCHEZ

Historians would do well to note the editorial in the November issue of Art News. Although it concerns the current state of art history, there are some worthy ideas about history in general. The magazine laments the fact that today's historians are, for the most part, "an army of microscope examiners who highly usefully turn archives inside out, within their respective pinpointed areas, and along with these, a few popular stars in the shape of moralizing historians in general, the Durant and Toynbee type who . . . rearrange and retell history to the masses for the latter's own supposed good."

WHAT MOTIVATED Art News' expression of concern was the recent Congress of the History of Art, held in New York earlier this year. The congress reflected the great progress which has been made in the mechanics of art history, but it failed in two respects. First, it stopped short of the twentieth century. This tendency to neglect the recent past is found in other fields of history as well. Such a practice ignores the fact that history is as recent as today's newspaper. Furthermore, in art the fruits of this century are especially significant.

The second fault of the congress was its failure to relate art to the context or background which produced it. As John Dewey comments in his book Art as Experience, art cannot be separated from the experience of mankind any more than religion can. With these two ideas in mind, it is particularly gratifying to be able to commend highly a new book on art recently published by the Museum of Modern Art which avoids both of these pitfalls.

NEW IMAGES OF MAN by Peter Selz is a beautifully designed book which features the work of twenty-three contemporary painters and sculptors. Included are such well-known artists as Balcomb Greene, Leonard Baskin, and the late Jackson Pollock, plus several others whose reputations are not yet as firmly established. Two features combine to make this book especially rewarding and unique. First, there are comments by the artists themselves concerning their work and the forces which motivate it: and second, there is the book's significant central theme, the various images of man in modern society.

The images of man in contemporary art are not altogether cheery. "Man is seen as having undergone a holocaust or facing annihilation or mutation." says painter Leon Golub. Sculptor Leonard Baskin adds, "Man has made a landscape of death. In this garden I dwell, and in limning the horror, the degradation and the filth, I hold the cracked mirror up to man." And in Lebrun's painting, "Study for Dacbau Chamber," we see the image of modern man's brutality reflected most shockingly, while Baskin's "Man in a Biier Box" depicts the terrible isolation of modern man in society.

THERE ARE THOSE who say that art goes too far in its view of modern man, dwelling on the sordid in much the same way as later realistic and naturalistic writers did. Paul Tillich answers these critics in his excellent introduction to the book in which he says, "the works of art of our century are the mirrors of our predicament . . . one need only look at the dehumanizing structure of the totalitarian systems a one-third of the world, the dehumanizing consequences of technical mass civilization in the other half, and the possibility of conflict between them leading to the annihilation of humanity."

Man's predicament is at the center of significant contemporary art. Those who feel that modern abstractionists are somewhat more remote from life than, for example, the neo-classicists or even the realists, show a lack of understanding of contemporary art. Nazism and Man makes it clear that as never before, concern for humanity is a central motivating force in art. As Bonnell Green comments in the world today "the slung to dread a mankind is reason. . . . The shrinking vision, of himself"

Projectionist Unreels

TO THE EDITOR:

Last Saturday night, during one of the frequent "unannounced intermissions" in the campus movie, I offered a brief explanation, via the auditorium P.A. system as to why such incidents took place. I would like to elaborate on this, hoping that it might soothe the nervous, calm the angry and enlighten the feeble-minded. I believe this is best done by taking each aspect of the problem into consideration singly.

To begin with, the equipment in the Westcott projection booth is in dire straits. The two projectors are more than old pensioners of the University Audio-Visual Department. Let's Get Serious

Not All Are Ready

By GERRY DOBSON

Ah, the wonders of American foreign policy! One might think that if we made a mistake, at least there would be enough sense not to repeat it. Unfortunately this is not the case. There are too many persons in our State Department who can't get it through their thick skulls that not all nations in the world are ready for the noble democratic experiment. And because of this blind spot, we continue to repeat the very mistake we made in Cuba; to undermine stable, pro-Western governments, the inevitable consequence of which is to present chaos in such nations and give the communists an opportunity to seize power.

THERE ARE TWO CASES in point. First of all there was the Dominican Republic where Dictator Trujillo was obviously a greater threat to freedom than is Soviet Russia or Cuba. The sanctions we imposed against his government were like a child's temper tantrum which were at that time imposed against either of the above mentioned communist nations. There can be little question that these sanctions did much to destroy a stable, pro-Western government.

The second case is that of Katanga. Here the hypocrisy of our position is just as evident. When Syria seceded from the UAR she was immediately recognized as an independent nation, and admitted into the UN. Why not Katanga, too? The reason seems simple. Katanga is under the control of white "mercenaries," which, translated, means that the Katangese feel that they can better build their nation by working side by side with the whites, than by terrorizing, raping and bumiliating them. And since this idea is so repugnant to those who make anti-colonialism their fetish, the good old UN must step in and subdue Katanga by force of arms. And we're helping.

IT'S ABOUT TIME we started to think a little about our own self-interest in this world, for we have been singularly unsuccessful in trying to win friends by bribery, and by pulling their chestnuts out of the fire. The Chinese communists were "agrarian reformers," self-confessed communist Fidel Castro was "a great democrat." And when the Dominican Republic and Katanga are in the communist orbit we can say that Trujillo was a nasty old dictator, and that Moise Tshombe licked the boots of the white man.

Women Singers Celebrate Anniversary With Vespers

The Woman's Glee Club of Florida State University, now celebrating its 50th year as a choral organization, will present a Christmas vespers concert at 5 p.m. Sunday in Westcott Auditorium.

A tradition since December, 1916, the vespers program is designed to present in song the religious mood of the Christmas season. The four-part program conveys the Christmas Story as given in Luke with the prophecy from Isaiah.

The public is invited and there is no admission charge.

TRADITIONAL CAROLS

The well-known choral group of 67 voices, directed by Miss Betty Jane Grimm, will include several traditional English carols in the 18 - number program. Chaplain John J. Carey will read the scripture. The Brass Choir will open the program with a prelude.

Two of the selections on the program are by campus composers. "Before the Paling of the Stars" is by John Boda of the music faculty and "One Little Manger" by Richard Powell, a graduate student. Irving Cooper, professor of music education, has made a special arrangement of the 18th Century Latin hymn. "O Come All Ye Faithful," for the group.

Other numbers on the program include: Sweelinck's Christmas Motet, "Hodie Christus Natus Est"; two Polish carols: Handel's "Joy to the World"; Bach's "O Jesu So Sweet" and "Silent Night."

Soloists will be Rosie Wildes, Daisy Coley, Carolyn Reeves, Pat Pippin, Gwen Alexander and Judy Hughes.

ORGANIZED

Organized as the Florida State College Glee Club in September, 1911, the nine member choral group gave its first concert in March, 1912. For the next eleven years they presented mostly operettas and cantatas, then in 1926 began presenting choral compositions from the classic, romantic and modern periods.

The Glee Club began assisting in the Sunday Vespers as far back as in December, 1916, the first Christmas Vespers program was presented entirely by the Glee Club. Directed for many years by Etta Lucille Robertson, the vespers has become one of the traditions of the University.

In 1955, Miss Grimm of the music faculty became director of the Glee Club and under her guidance the group has given many performances both locally and in nearby cities. Miss Grimm, a contralto, has appeared as featured soloist with the Robert Shaw Choir and other well known groups and has recorded for both Columbia and Victor.

SURE AS THE POINSETTIAS COME INTO BLOOM THE WOMAN'S GLEE CLUB AT Florida State University is ready with its Christmas Vespers concert, to be presented at 5 p.m. Sunday. The organization is celebrating its 50th anniversary as a performing group this year. ...ey, creating a Christmas card effect, five members pose before a roof-high clump of poinsettias growing at the apartment house of H. D. Hendershall, 718 West Pensacola. L. to r. are Carolyn Reeves, Judy Hughes, Ellen Whigham, Anne Huston and Rosie Wildes.

Debaters Compete In Birmingham Meet

Members of the Florida State University Debate Squad are competing in the Birmingham Invitational Tournament in Birmingham, Ala., this weekend.

The Birmingham Invitational Tournament is co-sponsored by Howard College and Birmingham Southern.

The debaters representing FSU in the varsity division are: affirmative—Linda Diz and Marilyn Young; and negative—Betty McIntosh and Mike Odum. In the novice division the debaters will be: affirmative—Jan Duggar and Louis Barnett; and negative—Anne Rushing and Carolyn Cooley.

Besides debating in six rounds of debate, most of the members are entered in one of the individual speaking events. These include persuasive speaking, after dinner speaking, impromptu speaking and oral interpretation.

The debate topic will be: Resolved: that labor organizations should be under the jurisdiction of anti-trust legislation. The topic of the individual speeches is chosen by the speaker.

Last year FSU finished second to Alabama for the over-all sweepstakes trophy at the tournament.

R. A. Hahn, the debate coach, and Dr. Gregg Phifer, accompanied the team on the trip.

Twenty schools are entered in the tournament

THE GREAT CARUSO, starring Mario Lanza and Ann Blyth, will be shown tomorrow at 7:30 and 9:30 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium.

This motion picture is based on the life of Enrico Caruso who, for twenty-five years, symbolized the magic of operatic music.

50 Singers Perform Tonight In Westcott

Christmas songs from many lands and many ages are on the program tonight of the University Singers and the mixed chorus at Florida State University will close its program with an American cantata first performed in 1958.

The 76-voice Singers, conducted by Dr. Wiley Housewright, will present its program in Westcott Auditorium and the public is invited. The concert is one of the principal events of the Christmas season at FSU.

CONTEMPORARY WORK

The contemporary work ending the program is "The Christmas Story," the first major choral work written by the young American composer, Ben Nelson. It is based on the 17th century setting of the Christmas story by Heinrich Schultz, although the music and the mood are entirely different.

Two contrasting sections not usually found in settings of the Christmas story are interpolated into the cantata: a lullaby, "Slumber Now, Beloved Child," and a section on the Prophecy of Jeremiah about the murder of the children of Bethlehem.

The cantata was written for the Festival Concert presented by the Brown University and Pembroke college Glee Clubs at the Central Baptist Church, Providence, R. I. The composer conducted the glee clubs in the first performance Dec. 16, 1958.

The program will be repeated by the Singers at the First Baptist Church in Dothan, Ala., Tuesday. The Singers, along with other leading college and university performing groups, have been asked by Mutual Broadcasting Co. for a taped recording including the program numbers for a two-hour Christmas program to be aired later this month.

"Angels We Have Heard On High," an ancient carol known throughout France and arranged for the Trapp Family Singers by their conductor, Franz Wasner, will open the program. This will be followed by a Russian Christmas anthem by Johann Topff, "The Angel To The Shepherds." Three carols of the Dutch, Polish and Czechs will follow.

On the second part of the three-part program will be a composition by the contemporary British composer, Anthony Hopkins, "Carillen," written for double choir, and "Te Deum" by Gustav Holst.

Gene M. Simmons is assistant conductor for the Singers. Joyce Faggioni is pianist and K. Michael Cohen, the organist.

JOHN VAN RYSSELBERGE, SPONSORED BY ALPHA OMICRON PI social sorority, looked like a creature from outer space or maybe a Frankenstein-type monster in the last contest.

BELIEVE IT OR NOT . . . THAT WAS JERRY GLANCY UNDER all that camouflage. Glancy masqueraded for the Alpha Xi Delta's.

'Ugly Man' Contest Returns Via APO

A tradition will return to Florida State University next week with the revival of the Alpha Phi Omega-sponsored Ugly Man on Campus Contest.

Alpha Phi Omega national service fraternity has adopted this contest as a national money-making project. Any campus group, sorority, fraternity or residence, all—may enter a contestant or two groups may go together to sponsor one entry.

No specific rules limit the techniques used for making the contestant ugly. When the make up job on the contestant is "finished," photographs are taken and put on display at various points around campus.

Voting will be held next Thursday and Friday at the Student Center and Westcott. A ballot will consist of a penny dropped in the container of a contestant. There is no limit to the number of times "ballots" can be cast.

Bonus votes will be awarded to the groups which place bills in the container of their choice on the scale of 200 votes for $1, 1,500 votes for $5 and 4000 votes for $10.

The prize for the group sponsoring the winning contestant will be an engraved plaque presented to that group by Alpha Phi Omega.

Information concerning contest rules have been sent to the fraternity and sorority houses and the residence halls. For further information, contact Jerry Spinks, president.

THIS NAMELESS MONSTER SPONSORED BY DELTA ZETA social sorority was wandering around campus during the last Ugly Man contest.

Christmas, Founders Parties On Calendar

By BETH STEPHENS and FLO NEILSON

Founder's Days and Christmas parties are on the top of the activity list this weekend as social groups plan for the round of holiday parties.

ALPHA DELTA PI

Sunday the ADPi's are giving a party for the International Club from 3 to 4 p. m. All international students are invited. Thursday the Pi Kaps will be their guests at a combo party.

ALPHA OMICRON PI

Founders Day today. A banquet and program have been planned to celebrate. Wednesday a Tree Trimming Party for the AOPi alums and their families and the AOPi's and their dates will be held at the house.

ALPHA PHI

The Pi Kaps will host the Phi's at their house next Wednesday for a Christmas party. Pledge of the month is Ava Sue Harold.

ALPHA XI DELTA

The Alpha Xi's will be hosts to the Kappa Sig's Thursday. These groups will carol together during the Christmas season.

DELTA GAMMA

Mrs. Robert Sheahan, Province Secretary will be visiting the DG's next week. In 1961, Mrs. Sheahan visited the AG's here. She was at that time Field Secretary.

DELTA DELTA DELTA

Tri Delt's will have a social with the SAE's Wednesday. A party is planned for next Sunday with the Kappa Sigma's to make food baskets for needy families this Christmas.

DELTA ZETA

Sunday night the DZ's will go caroling with the Theta Chi's. Monday the pledge class will give their annual Football Banquet for the Freshman team.

GILCHRIST HALL

Gilchrist Hall will hold their annual Christmas Dance tomorrow night. The theme is "The Enchanted Forest," and the music will be provided by the "Organ-aires."

KAPPA ALPHA

This week-end the KA's are having a costume party in the Rebel Room.

KAPPA ALPHA THETA

Tonight the Theta-Pi Phi Party will be held at Silver Lake. Sunday is a tree trimming party with the Sigma Chi's. The caterer is going caroling with the Pi Kap's Thursday.

KAPPA DELTA

Sunday the KD's are having a Spaghetti Dinner. Wednesday the Sig Ep's and the KD's are having an exchange dinner. Chaplain Carey will be guest speaker for the vespers held afterwards at the KD's house.

KAPPA SIGMA

Sunday is Kappa Sigma National Founder's Day. Christian A. Natvig, national treasurer, will be the principal speaker and the guest of honor at the yearly banquet. Ray Allen, chapter president, was chosen Kappa Sig man of the year. Tonight the Kappa Sig's and their dates will enjoy a special theme party at the house. Tomorrow night a Quo Vadis party featuring decorations and costumes is scheduled. New pledges are Gene Parrish and Nicky Daniels

LAMBDA CHI ALPHA

New pledges are Chris Cox, Aldon Corley, Bob Kerrigan, Bill Luten, Bruce Mnlar, Dick Spear, and Joe Van Vasel. Tomorrow night the brothers and dates will decorate the tree at the house. Monday they are going caroling with the Alpha Gam's. Wednesday there will be a social with the Pi Phi's.

PHI MU

Sunday the Phi Mu's will go caroling with the Delt's. The pledge class will hold its annual tea for all pledge class presidents and representatives on Thursday.

PI BETA PHI

Governor and Mrs. Bryant will give a pre-Christmas party Thursday night for the Pi Phi's and the ATO's.

PI KAPPA PHI

Tonight the Pi Kap's are having a combo party featuring the Untouchables. This weekend the group is observing the 37th annual celebration of Founders Day. Jim Newman and Dave Pavasle are new pledges.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

The National Supervisor will be making one of his two official visits to the FSU chapter this weekend. A Jungle Party will be held at the house tonight and a hayride will highlight tomorrow night. Tuesday the SAE's and the Kappa Kappa Gamma's will have a Christmas serenade for faculty members and Sue Peeta Terry Garvin is a new pledge.

SIGMA CHI

Tomorrow the pledges are going Derby. Tomorrow night the Derby Dance will be held at the Shriner's Hall on U. S. 27 North. Winners will be announced at that time. Entertainment will be furnished by the "Ramblers."

SIGMA KAPPA

Tomorrow tre pledges are going to have their annual Christmas decoration party.

SIGMA PHI EPSILON

This is annual pledge week-end for the Sig Ep's. Tonight is a party at "Hernando's Hideaway" (at the house). Tomorrow night the "Queen of Diamonds Ball" will be held at the Women's Club

TAU EPSILON PHI

Tonight the Tep's are having a "Blast-Off" party. Tomorrow night they are having their annual Beatnick Party.

THETA CHI

Tomorrow the Theta Chi's and their dates are having a tree decorating party followed by dancing to records.

ZETA TAU ALPHA

Sunday is the Zeta annual Christmas Tea to which all faculty, students and alumnae are invited from 3 to 5 p. m.

'That Me?'

Chiefs Laud Drum Major

Drum major Bennett Shelfer received the Outstanding Bandsman Award from the Marching Chiefs as the annual band banquet at the Elks Club Wednesday night.

The Outstanding Bandswoman Award was given to Penny Cowell, a flutist who is also drill assistant for the band. Miss Cowell also spoke on "The Challenge to the Future Marching Chiefs," ending by saying "On to Mobile."

The Marching Chiefs will go to Mobile Jan. 6, for a halftime appearance along with the band from Mississippi Southern at the Senior Bowl.

The names of Shelfer and Miss Cowell will go on a gold trophy. Awards were presented last night also to the outstanding senior bandswoman, Carolyn Russell, and the outstanding senior bandsman, Nat Smith.

Dr. Manley Whitcomb, director of bands, presented pins to senior members: Charles E. Carter presented sweaters to juniors; and Robert T. Braunagel, assistant band director, presented letters to sophomore members.

Principal speaker for the occasion was Dr. R. B. Oglesby, dean of students, who urged the band to continue its outstanding contribution to the University's program.

Tribe Tangles With Auburn

By BILL CHEEK
Flambeau Sports Editor

With four games now completed the Seminoles will tangle with the Auburn Tigers tomorrow night in Auburn, Alabama.

The Tigers will be the second Southeastern Conference Team on the Seminole schedule—the first being Florida last night. Auburn has a 2-0 record with wins over Jacksonville Naval Air and Southwest Louisiana. The Seminoles will be seeking their first win over the Tigers.

Bill Cheek

Auburn has won the last six encounters in the relatively short basketball series. Auburn uses a shuffle-type offense very similar to that of the Seminoles.

Florida State's basketball mahogany meet their arch rival, the University of Florida, last night in the Florida Gymnasium.

Norman Sloan, the University of Florida head basketball coach, was elected Southeastern Conference coach of the year following last year's 18-11 record.

Returning to Florida this year is All-Southeastern Conference guard Lou Merchant. Merchant averaged 17.6 points per game and broke Florida's school field goal percentage record by hitting 45.3 per cent of his shots from the floor.

Merchant has a deadly jump shot and is capable of hitting from anywhere.

Cliff Luyk was the Southeastern Conference's second leading rebounder. Luyk had a 15.1 scoring average for the season pulling down 328 rebounds.

Other starters will probably be Taylor Stokes, a 6-4 sophomore from Tampa; Carlos Morrison, a 6-3 junior forward from Huntington, West Virginia; Buddy Bales, a 5-11 guard from Beckley, West Virginia.

Wednesday night the Seminoles met the Owls of Rice University at Tully Gymnasium and defeated them by a score of 76-56.

Rice, who had previously lost to Florida 70-67 and defeated Georgia Tech 84-80, relied heavily on Ollie Shipley, 6-6 senior forward, who was high scorer with 22 points. The second highest scorer was Jim Fox, who hit 12 points on ten attempts.

Dave Feder tied the all-time school rebounding record which he set last year against the Citadel, with 21 rebounds. The Seminoles controlled both ends of the court with 51 rebounds to Rice's 31.

FSU has hit 47 percent of their field goals thus far this year. Last season they were eleventh in the nation with 46 percent.

Ray Swain leads the team in percentage hits after the Rice game with a seasonal 16.3 average hitting 22 out of 41 field goals. Dave Fedor is second with a 15.3 average, but 21 out of 37 in the Rice game.

Third in line is Dale Ricketts with a 13.7 average, hitting 15 out of 27 in the Rice game.

The Seminoles have suffered two defeats, one from the University of Wisconsin 64-63, and the other from Ohio State 72-57. Both schools are in the Big Ten Conference.

Don Hearden, sophomore guard, sank a 12 foot jump shot in the final 12 seconds of the Wisconsin game to defeat the Seminoles.

With nine seconds remaining to play the Seminoles made their last attempt to regain their 30-29 halftime lead. Ray Swain rebounded the final shot of the game and sank it, but the ruling of the officials was that he had shot after the horn had blown.

Wisconsin had a seven point edge three times in the final quarter.

Fedor, Ashworth, Davis, Edney, Swain, Kennedy, Dale, Ek, Long, Reeves, Coogle, Lovell, Ricketts, Durham.

Sigma Chi's Hold Derby Tomorrow

The annual Florida State University Sigma Chi Derby will be held tomorrow at 2 p.m. at the Hockey Field.

Sponsored by Sigma Chi social fraternity, the event will include an obstacle race, key hunt, coke-drinking contest, dec-a pledge, broom race, beauty contest and a secret event.

The activities will be held at the hockey field where members of each sorority will participate in the various events and will have a decorated booth for their group.

Trophies will be awarded to winners in each of the seven events and to the first, second and third place winners in overall points.

Each sorority will sponsor a queen candidate who will wear bermuda shorts in the event. At 1 p.m. a parade will begin at the hockey field and will be at Campbell Stadium by 1:30. Each sorority will have two cars, including one for the queen candidate. The queen will be selected by members of the faculty.

Entries in the contest include: Jeanne Benedict, Phi Mu; Jan Brantly, Kappa Delta; Becky Campbell, Alpha Xi Delta; Fran Allen, Alpha Chi Omega; Kitty Miller, Zeta Tau Alpha; Mary Ann Croll, Alpha Gamma Delta; Dee Weber, Delta Zeta, Doi Hay, Sigma Kappa; Ellen Whigham, Chi Omega; Betty Hermon, Delta Delta Delta; Martha Lynn Harris Sigma Sigma Sigma; Mary Ann Hines, Gamma Phi Beta; Beverly Himes, Alpha Phi; Janet Rodebaugh, Delta Gamma; Paula Walker, Alpha Omicron Pi; Jo Dietrich, Pi Beta Phi; Sandi Staies, Alpha Delta Pi, and Ann Miller, Kappa Alpha Theta.

Swim Team Enters AAU

Florida State University's swimming team opens its 1961-62 season Saturday. The Seminoles are competing, for the first time, in the Southern AAU Championships at Tulane University's pool in New Orleans, La.

Coach Bim Stults is trying to better last season's 9-1 dual meet record—plus his collection of the Florida Intercollegiate crown and the Georgia AAU Championships.

Coach Stults, who is now in his fourteenth year at FSU, has compiled a phenomenal overall dual meet record of 99 wins, 18 losses and two ties.

This year the Seminoles will be without the service of a pair of All-Americans, lost through graduation last year. Dave Gilliland Genders, the 1961 NCAA low board champion, and freestyler Buck Illies, are going be hard to replace according to Stults.

Stults will be relying heavily—in the Southern AAU Championships—upon five sophomores who were members at last season's outstanding freshmen team. Besides the five sophomore, three juniors and two seniors will make the trip to New Orleans.

The Tribe will figure heavily in the medley relay which is made up of veteran swimmer, Sam Davis, Bill Lawrence, Risto Fryykka (juniors) and sophomore Bill Dahl.

Three of the freshmen who are attending the meet swam on last year's frosh freestyle relay team which shattered, unofficially, the FSU pool record in that event. The threesome, Dale Smith, Tom Brandley and Ned Searcy, combine efforts this weekend with FSU's All-American candidate, Paul Anderson, to form up the Seminole freestyle relay entry.

Thompson, who holds FSU pool records in the 200 and 400 freestyle relay events, will be shooting for the top individual threat for the Seminoles.

Searcy and Smith will also compete in their individual specialties—the 50 and 100 yard freestyle sprints.

Dick Acosta, FSU's freshman backstroke records holder, is slated for competition in the individual backstroke events.

The meet features the South's top swimming team. Preliminary heats are set for the morning and afternoon; finals will be held Saturday evening, beginning at 6 p.m.

Women's Intramurals To Begin Tournament Action

By SHIRLEY HARDISON
Flambeau Sports Writer

The second sports season of the women's intramurals program began this week with their individual practices, and will start tournament action the first of next week.

Shuffleboard and table tennis tournaments will begin Monday afternoon. Lora Golden has charge of the table tennis and Janet Shuff is taking care of the shuffleboard contest. The table tennis competition will be held in three places and will begin at five. The tables will be set up in both gyms and, if the number of participants increase, in West Landis as well. Shuffleboard competition will be played on the courts behind the Women's Gym. The competition is divided into two categories: singles and doubles. A Round-Robin tournament may be scheduled early in 1962 as the rivalry continues, according to Miss Shuff.

All day students will be able to participate in this season, as they did last season. A meeting will be held Tuesday afternoon in the Women's Gym at 5 p.m. They will decide upon having a day student team, or combining their efforts with the dorms or sorority members.

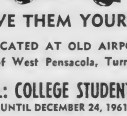
A new riding club has been established as a part of the intramural department. The new members will ride in their own time, but will be required to ride twice a month. This is the first time a club of this type has been part of the intramural program.

All the intramural managers have been urged to check the bulletin board for the dates of their practices and game schedule. Some of the dates have been changed and should be noted.

The basketball and deck tennis competition will not begin for the next two weeks but practices begin this week so as to allow each team at least three practice sessions.

All of the sports will begin before the Christmas holidays and will continue until the vacation begins. They will be resumed after the holidays.

Paul Thompson



Mural Hold D-I Meeting

Dorm and independent teams who are interested in playing in the football intramurals are asked to turn in their team lists to the intramural office by the end of next week.

The football competition will not begin until after Christmas but the teams must be signed up so that the intramural department will know approximately how many teams will be playing.

"HAPPINESS CAN'T BUY MONEY"

I have asked the makers of Marlboro—an enterprising and aggressive group of men, yet of the same time warm and lovable; though not without acumen, perspicacity, and drive, which does not, however, mask their essential great-heartedness, a quality evident to all who have ever enjoyed the beneficence of their wares; I refer, of course, to Marlboro Cigarettes, a smoke fashioned with such loving care and tipped with such an oracle-drawing filter that these old eyes grow misty when I think upon it—I have asked, I say, the makers of Marlboro—that aggregate of shrewd but kindly tobacconists—that cluster of hearty souls bound together by the profit motive and an unflagging determination to provide a cigarette forever flavorful and eternally pleasing—I have asked, I say, the makers of Marlboro whether I might use today's column to take up the controversial question: Should a coed share expenses on a date?

"Yes," said the makers simply. We all shook hands then and squeezed each other's shoulders and exchanged brave smiles, and if our eyes were a trifle moist, who can blame us?

To the topic then: Should a coed share expenses on a date? I think I can best answer the question by citing the following typical case:

Poseidon Nebensal, a student at Oklahoma A and M, majoring in hides and tallow, fell wildly in love with Mary Ellen Flange, a flax weevil major at the same school. His love, he had

"Oh, foolish reaper! Why how you not tell me before?"

reason to believe from Mary Ellen's sidelong glances and positively bluster, was not entirely unrequited, and by and by he mustered up enough courage to ask her the all-important question: "Will you wear my 4-H pin?"

"Yes," she said simply. Then shook hands then and squeezed each other's shoulders and exchanged brave smiles, and if their eyes were a trifle moist, who can blame them?

For a time things went swimmingly. Then a cloud appeared, Mary Ellen, it seems, was a rich girl and accustomed to costly pleasures. Poseidon was hen-pecked and he quickly ran out of money. Unable to take Mary Ellen to the posh places she fancied and too proud to tell her the reason, he turned surly and full of melancholy. Soon their romance, so promising at the beginning, was headed for a breakup. But at the last moment, Poseidon managed to blurt out the truth.

"Oh, beloved agrarian!" cried Mary Ellen, grappling him close. "Oh, proud husbandman! Oh, foolish reaper! Why have you not told me before? I have plenty of money, and I will contribute according to my ability."

Poseidon, of course, protested, but she finally persuaded him of the wisdom of her course. From then on they split all expenses according to their incomes. Rather than embarrass Poseidon by handing him money in public, a joint bank account was set up to allow him to write checks. Into this account each week they faithfully deposited their respective allowances—35 cents from Poseidon; $2500 from Mary Ellen.

And it worked fine! They were happy—truly happy! And what's more, when they graduated they had a nice little nest egg—eight million dollars—with which to furnish a lovely apartment in Lubbock, Texas, where today they operate the local laundromat.

So you see? You too can salvage your failing romance if you will only adopt a healthy, sensible attitude toward money.

Lucre is no obstacle when it comes to popular-priced Marlboro, or to Marlboro's popularly priced partner in pleasure—the unfiltered, king-size Philip Morris Commander. Get aboard. You'll find long enjoyment for short money.

RESEARCH ON LIGHT ADAPTATION BY DR. HOWARD D. BAKER, PROFESSOR OF PSYchology at Florida State University, has become well known among fellow scientists. On Tuesday night, Dec. 12, he will be the Sigma Xi speaker in 101 Mathematics-Meteorology Building, talking on the subject "The Nature of Visual Sensitivity."

Important Notices

Counseling Starts Monday

The counseling office reports that all students are to contact their faculty advisers during the period from Dec. 11 through Jan. 12, exclusive of the Christmas holidays. It is necessary that each student secure during this period a green trial schedule which has the approval of his adviser in order to register for second semester.

Freshmen and sophomores who are uncertain as to their adviser may secure this information from the Counseling Center, 302 Westcott. Juniors and seniors who need additional information should contact the office of the dean of the school in which they are enrolled.

Navy Officer Candidate School

Lieutenant F. C. Eckart, Jr. and the officer programs team of the U. S. Navy Recruiting Station, Jacksonville, will be at the Education Bldg. Tuesday, through Thursday. They will speak with and accept applications from seniors interested in the Navy Officer School Program at Newport, Rhode Island.

Senior men and junior or senior women who will graduate in February or June, 1962 may apply for OCS classes coovening in April, June and August of 1962. There will also be a display at the Student Center. Programs available include: supply corps, line, medical service corps and Wave officer (line or supply).

All processing requirements may be accompanied at the Education U. Bldg. rooms 102 and 105, from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. daily during the Navy team's visit. No appointments are required.

Dr. Baker Speaks On Visual Sensitivity

Dr. Howard D. Baker, a Florida State University psychologist whose experimental work in visual research has drawn widespread scientific attention, will be the second Sigma Xi duriog the year.

Dr. Baker, president of the FSU chapter of Sigma Xi duriog the past year, will speak on "The Nature of Visual Sensitivity" in 101 Mathematics - Meteorology Bldg at 8 p.m., Tuesday. Members of the society, faculty, students and the public are invited.

Dr. Baker has conducted research for several years under grants from the Office of Naval Research and National Science Foundation, his studies being principally in the field of early light adaptation. Recently he has become interested in comparing results with similar information io auditory research. He and a colleague, Dr. W. N. Kellogg, have just received a grant of $21,700 from the National Science Foundation for support of research in "Visual Problem-Solving in the Dolphin."

The speaker got his A.B. degree from Washington University in 1941 and he earned the M.A. also at that university. His Ph.D. was awarded by Columbia in 1949. He has served as a lieutenant in the Air Force and has been on the faculty of Columbia University Extension and Johns Hopkins University.

American Colleges Yield Bumper Crop Of New, Non-Regional Magazines

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article entitled, "The New Campus Magazine," by Richard Chase is the fifth of a series which have been condensed by Ann Carrell from a special college supplement in the October issue of HARPER'S MAGAZINE.

. . . in their efforts to clarify their thinking, present their views, and consolidate their influence. American students have come up in the last year or two with a bumper crop of new magazines. They come from all over the country . . . widely dispersed as these magazines are, they are not regionalist in spirit.

. . . In most of these magazines the emphasis is on the left, but all shades of opinion can be found. Some of the undergraduate papers make a point of NOT having opinions, even less an ideology. . . .

. . . the new magazines generally. . . . are literate but they are seldom literary; they are edited by students of history, economics, political science, law, and sociology, as well as the humanities. By contrast, purely literary magazines . . . seem, . . . chillingly outmoded or at least old-fashioned.

. . . Unless my memory fails me, the best of the journals are intellectually several cuts above the utterances of the campus radicals of twenty-five years ago. Furthermore . . . the consciousness of the students have of being a group—not merely a generation . . . is a kind of class or public in itself, almost, in fact, a "proletariat." This will surely be a source of great strength in whatever undertakings the young rebels decide on. Unlike the college rebels of twenty-five years ago, they do not identify themselves with the working class. There is still some argument about this . . . but generally speaking they see the working-class proletariat as a tarnished myth, especially under American conditions. And they see in themselves more solidarity and sense of being a "class" than the working class sees in itself. A sign of this is that they speak of themselves unabashedly as "intellectuals." The campus radical of yesteryear was likely to disown this title—certainly he did not wear it proudly as a badge of identification.

The new radical is likely to be terribly professional about everything. His intellectual ancestor of the 'thirties may have been more colorful, with his sense of himself as a "revolutionary" or a "worker" and with his generous anarchic or mystic or merely Statistical impulses. But the young people of today are far more sophisticated, efficient, and dutiful. . . .

The more ambitious of the new student journals print articles on social and political problems which are sometimes close to stupefying in their apparatus of argumentation. . . .

This alliance of pedantry and rebellion, scholarly sobriety and impassioned protest professionalism and dissent, seeks a political program and is, more or less distantly, Marxist.

The academic tone of these magazines contrasts rather sharply with the freer journalism of the young British radicals. . . . The academicism one finds in the American magazines . . . must be attributed in part to the uncertainty of the young rebels about themselves and their place in society. Relatively speaking, their British counterparts KNOW: they are Socialists and they are allied with the Left-Labor movement. This gives them a dynamism and self-assurance, so that they are not tempted to resort to the isolated world of footnotes and charts.

The new student magazines unite in complaining about the liberalism of their professors. This "liberalism of the Establishment" they identify with people like John Kenneth Galbraith, Arthur Schlesinger Jr., and Professor Daniel Bell of Columbia. They reject as defeatist Professor Bell's thesis that we have come to an "end of ideology"—although they have not, so far as I have seen, disproved it. They oppose . . . the . . . belief . . . that however well radical ideological solutions to social questions may have fitted other times and places, America has become a unique society with built-in restorative powers which work so well that no large scale reconstruction is necessary or applicable. The conception of the mixed and affluent society (Galbraith) with its vital center (Schlesinger) where contending social forces, economic contradictions, and clashing power groups (John) is tolerably harmonious balance and stability, seems to many of the new radicals to be a form of mysticism.

Rejecting the idea of America as a unique and self-regulating country, they think of it, or at any rate of themselves, in a context with Cuba, Russia, China, and Japan. They imply that America may not be exempt from revolutionary upheavals. And they sometimes seem attracted to C. Wright Mills' thesis that power in this country is not balanced by mutually compensatory forces but is in the hands of a relatively small elite of financiers and militarists to which the liberal, Stevensonian professors pay witting or unwitting tribute.

Attacks are also launched against the liberalism of professors by "conservative," or, as I would prefer to say, right-wing-radical student magazine. . . .

. . . this is not the occasion to argue but to try to sum up the burgeoning and heterogeneous political thinking on the campuses. It is not easy to do, but certain facts have clearly emerged. Despite its sallies into ideology . . . the student liberal-left movement remains pragmatic and eclectic . . . . The students are for immediate action on any front where they think it can be made humanly significant and might at least open out the possibility of profound political change (as do the sit-ins, for example). Intellectually they agree that they must avoid commitment to the apologetics of all the great powers; they preach dissent of a thoroughgoing kind as the first step toward liberating the world from the ironclad and potentially disastrous polarization of itself and policy that has come about as a result of the Cold War.

The second step, which they admit is being ancertiala about, is the establishment of an "organizational center" on the left, except for a few dominant, charismatic figures, radicals seem prepared to do this in whatever way it can be done, and without ideologiest preconceptions—for example, as to whether they are socialist or not.

But the difficulty in establishing an organizational center is that it seems to require an alliance with some group, class, or community which shows signs of evolving into a vital political and cultural force strong enough to change the life of the nation. This is where the major uncertainty comes in. The vital force does not seem to be in the labor movement, as is based even as it still is in England . . . Lacking this historic base of radical change the student look, on the home scene, to the Negroes and to themselves.

The students find solace in C. Wright Mills' theory, expounded in his "Letter to the New Left," that despite the enormous forces at work in the modern world and despite its overwhelming population the definative power is still wielded by small elites and that the "young intelligentsia" can become one of these elites.

What kind of society do the young intellectuals look forward to? When they ask themselves this question, the important thing seems to them to be how life is to be lived. Often repeated in the words "community" and "participation" are "democracy," "participation," "humanism," "humanism," "rationality." Except for a few zealots left and right, they do not, as did their

Court Ruling

The Honor Court has ruled that the Who's Who In American Universities And Colleges Committee of Universities and Colleges Committee acted illegally and contrary to the Student Body Statutes in placing two names on the final list which did not have all of the qualifications as stated in the Student Body Statutes. Honor Court has further decided that the responsibility for this action must rest with the Chairman and the Committee in their decision. The Honor Court is of the opinion however, that the committee acted in what they considered the best interests of the student body, and wishes no willful harm in their actions.

BOC Ups Faculty Salaries In Trimester

By HOWARD DENSON
Flambeau Staff Writer

Salaries for faculty members in state universities were adjusted by the State Board of Control at its meeting Saturday. The salary adjustment, caused by the installment of the trimester system, will amount to about $1,300,000.

The BOC assured faculty members employment for a ten-month period or two and one-half trimesters according to Dr. Gordon W. Blackwell, president of Florida State University.

REQUESTS

Some faculty members may be requested to work all three trimesters in one year and some may request to work all year. In this case the employee would be hired for two trimesters the following year to average out to two and one-half trimesters.

The administration will be able to keep a faculty member from working year in and year out. The University wants faculty members to carry on their professional interests and activities" said Dr. Werner Baum, dean of the faculties recently. A member of the board said as the November meeting the universities should keep professors "from burning themselves out." The presidents of the major universities all agreed.

Since faculty members will be teaching about one-ninth more per year the BOC gave them an 11 percent increase in salary.

14 WEEKS

Professors will be teaching about 14 weeks on the trimester plan. the presidents pointed out at a recent BOC meeting.

And some of the faculty members feel that, since they will have to increase their work by one-fourth, their salaries should be adjusted one-fourth, Dr. Blackwell said. This was a minority opinion, he added.

Faculty members who teach an additional one-half trimester will receive a 20 per cent adjustment. This is the same amount of money that was given under the semester plan.

This 21 percent over-all increase parallels fairly close to the 33 percent amount of time that the University will be in operation, Dr. Blackwell said.

Florida based its trimester plan on the system utilized by the University of Pittsburgh. The Pennsylvania university pays faculty members a 33 percent adjustment for teaching the entire year.

About $400,000 will be needed for the 11 percent adjustment, said Dr J. Broward Culpepper, executive director of the Board of Control. This will leave about $300,000 for other adjustments, salaries and possible merit increases.

BOND ISSUE

The Board did not act on the bond issue which would utilize activity funds in building construction.

At this moment, the bond issue is in the hands of the financial experts, said Dr. Culpepper. They will examine every aspect of it and try to determine all the possibilities of the plan and the circumstances surrounding it, he said.

Last week, he pointed out, Student Government officials had a meeting with Governor Farris Bryant and they discussed the issue with him. The students said later that they believed the governor was sincere in his proposal.

Dr Culpepper said the proposal would probably be discussed at the January meeting.

Battle Is Resumed With Court Case

By JOAN ABBOTT
Flambeau News Editor

The battle over the two exceptions to the grade requirement for Who's Who Among Students in American Universitias and Collegas was carried to Honor Court Sunday.

Opposing factions debated the validity of procedural questions of statutory law before the court for two hours and 45 minutes before presentation of the cases was concluded and the court adjourned.

Chief Justice Dan Walbolt said that the court would meet last night at 9 p.m to review the evidence and decide the case.

PLAINTIFFS

Women's Vice President Myrnon Champion and Sens. Ron Jones and Jim Johnston were the plaintiffs in the case. They argued that the Student Body Statutes clearly stated that a 2.5 average was required of the nominees. Two of the 36 elected to Who's Who and accepted by the national office, Student Body President Bobby Byrd and Senior Class President Jack Ascheri, did not meet the grade requirement.

Committee Chairman Ivylyo Frazier maintained that the committee was acting on precedent and because previous committees had made exceptions to this requirement. Every year's committee could also do so.

Counsel for the committee were Attorney General Marion Clark Jr. and Secretary of Student Welfare Tom Schultz. Sen. Joody Smith set committee members Scarlett Pogue and Doug Shank, both Cabinet members, also appeared to discuss and explain the committee's action.

EXCEPTIONS

Whether or not exceptions were made in the past and not caught was considered somewhat irrelevent to the issue at hand, by the plaintiffs. What really matters was the fact that statutes were violated, they maintained. "This would make a mockery of our Statutes if it were allowed to continue." Miss Champion stressed. The Senate does not feel that it is necessary to attach a "no exceptions" clause to every law it passes as it did in the case of the Hall of Fame grade requirement, they emphasized.

Countering this Clark read the definition of "precedent" from Webster's Dictionary as "something done or said that may serve as an example to authorize or justify a subsequent act, especially in law . . . serving as a rule for future determination . . . ."

The committee considered that various majors within the University have "degrees of difficulty" and that participation in leadership and service activities "will provide a distraction from scholarship," Clark said.

In placing the two names on the ballot and later on the list, the committee was "weighing achievement, effort and service to this University," Clark added. "This has to weigh more" in the case of an honorary of this nature," he stressed.

The defendants emphasized that the national office imposes no grade requirement.

RECOMMENDATION

Sen Jones questioned the committee on why, after the student body president sent a letter to the committee recommending that the names be removed, that they voted to place the names on the approved list. Schultz said, "The committee felt that it was not an executive order . . . but a recommendation," and treated it as such.

Dean of Students R. R. Ogles-by, the only person who is authorized to certify the list did not remove the names because he felt that this was an issue that should be settled by the students, Clark and Schultz explained. The dean said he would only remove names for disciplinary reasons or because the students were on Honor Court probation and otherwise accepts the list as submitted by the student committee.

Considerable debate arose as to the Senate's intent when they inserted the "no exception" clause in the Hall of Fame statutes.

Choral Groups Give Christmas Shows

Three choral groups, the Tallahassee Junior Chorus, the Choral Union and the Collegians, will be performing their Christmas programs this week at Florida State University.

All of the performances are open to the public.

JUNIOR CHORUS

The Tallahassee Junior Chorus, composed of students from the public schools, will perform today at 8:15 in Woodward Auditorium. Miss Lois Lavorne Hunter of the music faculty will be the group, with Jan Robbins, Marilyn Boyd as harpists. Mary Goodenough will play the piano and Kathryn Cooke will accompany the group.

Included on the 18-number program are such selections as "Ave Maria," "Angels We Have Heard On High," and Mozart's "Alleluia." English folk songs, an original composition, "A Babe of Bethany," by FSU composer John Vinton, and one of the music faculty with words by Miss Schnoor, a 17th century hymn, "Cantique de Noel" and "Silver Bells" will also be presented.

Soloists will be Joneen James, Melvio, Ellen Knys Simons, Jim Mahaffey, George Mann-Turner and Tom Ewing.

Friday evening at 8:15 in Opperman Music Hall the Collegians FSU's mens' glee club, will perform. Directed by Ramon E. Meyer of the School of Music, the 31-member choral group will open the program with the "Magnificat" by Marc-Antoine Charpentier, followed by selections from the work of three contemporary composers, Norman Dello Joio, Carlisle Floyd and Randall Thompson. The composition, "Death Came Knocking," is an original composition by Carlisle Floyd of the music faculty. Richard Powell, tenor, will be the soloist for this selection.

The second part of the program will be made up of Christmas selections. John Cooksey, tenor, will be soloist for a John Jacob Niles arrangement of "I Wonder As I Wander."

Assisting the glee club will be a string ensemble and organist. The musicians are Ellen Taaffe, violin; Patty Jones, violin; Nancy Hearn, violincello; and Michael Cohen, organ.

CHORAL UNION

Portions from Handel's 'Messaah" will be sung Sunday afternoon, Dec. 17, at 4 p. m. in Westcott Auditorium by the Choral Union Herman Gunter Jr. of the School of Music is the director of the 130-voice group.

Bulletin

The Elections and Appointments committee met late yesterday and approved all cabinet appointees except Ivylyn Frazier nominee for Sec. of Student Events, who's name is being held under consideration for another week.

Two-Fold Program Explained
Future Results Of Trimester

By MILA ARNOLD
Flambeau Staff Writer

A two-fold program concerning the effects of the new trimester system on prospective teachers was presented Wednesday night at Florida State University.

Dr. Samuel T. Lastinger, who introduced the program, explained the double purpose of the meeting was to give information to the students involved and to have those students, in turn, gave the faculty the information necessary for the extensive planning that is still to be done.

The first speaker on the program Dr. Mode L. Stone, was dean of the School of Education. He explained that the serious problem of student over-population in high schools and colleges began after the second world war.

In the 1960 high school graduating classes of Florida there was a total of 30,000 seniors. At the same time there were 70,000 students enrolled in Florida colleges.

By 1970, Dean Stone announced there will be twice as many graduating seniors and over 100,000 college students. This presents a problem of space, equipment, and qualified teachers.

Florida educators foresaw the coming situation and employed a three-point program of preparation as follows:

1. Organization establishment, and activation of junior colleges in the state.
2. Establishment of additional higher education units, such as the University of South Florida.
3. Year round education possibilities through either the quarter or trimester system.

Dean Stone pointed out that through the adapted trimester plan, a student could conceivably obtain his bachelor's degree in two and two-thirds years.

He emphasized the fact that the students hold within their hands the success or failure of the trimester system and that their re-

Honor Court Tries 8 Cases, Acquits 4, Sentences 4

All eight Honor Court cases tried this year, with one exception, have concerned cheating on tests. The last case concerned plagiarism.

The first four cases tried by Honor Court specifically dealt with cheating on the knowledge for College test given to freshman women and transfer students in September. All four persons tried were acquitted and found not guilty because of insufficient evidence.

The next three cases tried concerned cheating on humanities examinations. The persons involved in the first two of these cases were found guilty and subject to immediate suspension.

The individual involved in the last case concerning cheating on a humanities test was also sentenced to immediate suspension, but received a suspended sestence of one year Honor Court probation.

Honor Court's last trial concerned stealing. FSU student was accused of stealing rugs from the Seminole Club. He was found guilty and received a suspended sentence of one year Honor Court probation.

Lord Beadle To Talk Here

Sir Gerald Beadle, retired president of the British Broadcasting Corporation's television network, will deliver the third lecture in the University Lecture Series at 8:15 tomorrow night in Opperman Music Hall.

Sir Gerald's subject will be "The Functions of Television in a Modern Society." A public reception in Longmire Building will follow the lecture.

At 11 a.m. tomorrow he will meet with radio and television majors and all interested students for an informal "question and answer" period in Conradi Theatre. He will also talk to at least one class in radio-television, according to Dr. Bernarr Cooper, associate speech professor and teacher in this field.

Sir Gerald is now lecturing over this country as a representative of both the British government and the BBC in hopes of building interest in international television.

Greek Land Sale Is Set

The University has gotten a bonding for the lands for its soon-to-be-constructed fraternity row, according to Dean of Students R. R. Oglesby.

One hitch has developed in the purchase of behind stadium road. One of the owners of the land does not live in Tallahassee.

A $75,000 sum has been agreed upon for the land. The University will make a $5,000 down payment and then pay ten $7,000 yearly installments.

The 10.6 acres of land, located west of the football stadium road, will serve to fraternities, Dr. Oglesby said.

Flambeau Editorials

No Real Increase

The Board of Control this weekend voted $1,300,000 to make adjustment for the increased teaching load required of faculty members under the new trimester plan. The increase was supposed to make up for the extra amount of time that faculty members will have to teach.

Considering only the number of days more that the faculty will be teaching, the raise works out to be compensating, faculty members will receive an eleven per cent increase for approximately eleven per cent more teaching time.

However, the Board has overlooked one factor. Because of the concentrating nature of the trimester system, more preparation, more research, and more teaching will have to be put into each trimester.

Under this system, the faculty will have to compress more material into each lecture, and each lecture will be longer than it has previously been. This means a longer work day every day and a longer work night in preparation for the next work day. It means less time for personal research and less time to devote to the family. And the Board has given the faculty members no renumeration for this.

It boils down to this. Faculty members have always been underpaid and overworked. This is why so many have left for the more favorite climes of industry. Instead of increasing their pay to a truly just level, the state chooses only to increase the work load.

The nice words about pay increases are pleasing to the public but they are not significant enough to mean any real compensation. Instead the faculty members are getting further and further away from truly just compensation.

'Bathroom Bill' Rejected

Women's Senate rejected the jocular "Bathroom Bill" unanimously last week, a move which provoked laughter from the university's male populace.

THE BILL proposed to ban freshman women from using the bathroom between the hours of 11 p.m. and 12 p.m. without first getting permission from counselors.

The matter would be laughable if the regulation was not being enforced in the freshman dorms on an informal basis. It is with this informal basis that we quarrel.

THE AMOUNT of stringent regulations which have already been imposed upon the women students seems long enough and comprehensive enough without enforcing unwritten laws. There are rules and social standards regulating every social function in which a young lady might indulge. But it is too much to begin regulation of bodily functions as well.

Women's Senate said firmly in effect that they do not wish this particular written law enforced. We feel sure that the women constituents would concur with this stand. Men students, who would counter any such regulation on themselves with definite counter measures, also agree.

IN FACT, it would seem any reasonable individual would consider a college coed capable of using the plumbing at her own discretion. But it seems that certain house mothers and dorm officers feel that the young ladies are not sufficiently house broken. Therefore, they are forced to revert to her grammar school days and ask permission to leave the room.

Off To Faulty Start

Project Awake got off to a faulty start Thursday night when discussion following the film "Communist Encirclement" was cut out due to a shortage of time. This was indeed unfortunate for it cast doubts as to the genuine objectivity of the group which stresses presenting "just the facts" avidly.

AT BEST, the show itself left quite a bit to be desired in objectivity. It gave a factual account of the advance of Communism, but it presented these facts in such a way that the United States seemed almost a partner in this advance.

DISCUSSION, however, could have corrected many of these faults for additional facts might have been presented for discussion.

Let's Get Serious

U.S. Has Golden Opportunity In Albania

By GERRY DOBSON

It looks as if the U.S. has a golden opportunity now that the U. S. S. R. has severed diplomatic relations with Albania. and I'll wager that the administration of our foreign aid program are drooling in anticipation. Albania has now become a focal point in the cold war, and in the battle for men's minds, we must put the jump on the Russkies.

This little Balkan country of about one and one-half million persons must now be influenced, as was Yugoslavia, to come into the fray firmly on the side of the free world. To aid the heroic Albanian people to resist Khrushchev, and hold to their traditional Stalinist line, despite all pressures, we must again be willing to pour out our treasure and friendship in the name of the brotherhood of man and mutual understanding.

Albania is a poor country, and there are many things which we may supply to her in the name of human dignity. For example, there is a great shortage of jet fighters and nuclear reactors in Albania, so we must be willing to supply these necessities to that embattled nation, to show the unbreakable bond of friendship which exists between our two democracies. We can only hope that this most serious split in the communist bloc can be further widened, for if we are successful in enhancing and widening the rift between the U. S. S. R. and Red China, the time may arrive when we will be able to destroy the whole communist bloc. If great tension develops, we must exploit it to the utmost. We must be ever alert in our never-ending struggle to advance the cause of freedom and truth. Perhaps we will be able to use new and imaginative means to ensure the eventual triumph of right over evil. For example, we should, perhaps, send Red China some jet fighters and nuclear reactors too, so she will better be able to stand up to Khrushchev.

Note to those who look this column literally: honest, children, I was only kidding.

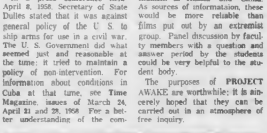
'Project Awake' Good; Can Still Improve

By JEAN HERN

Last week, PROJECT AWAKE, an FSU campus group, presented the film "Communist Encirclement," which was put out by a right-wing organization headed by Dr George S. Benson (See Newsweek cover story Dec 4, 1961 and Time, Dec 8, 1961, issues). This film claims that Socialism is a stepping stone to Communism; this seems rather questionable in view of the fact that the governments of two of our NATO allies, Norway and Denmark, are controlled by Socialist parties, that in Sweden, Israel, and New Zealand Socialist and Labor parties are the leading parties, and that in Great Britain, India and the Netherlands, among others, the Socialist and Labor parties are either the chief opposition parties or are part of coalition governments. Source of information: Encyclopedia Americana.



This film stresses the internal threat of Communism to the U.S.; specifically, it infers that, in the Cuban situation, the U. S Department of State was being pro-Communist when it halted arms shipments to the Batista government in March of 1958. The Batista government is described only as anti-Communist, yet under a reign of terror Cuban citizens were being arrested and executed without trial, just as Castro did later. Batista had very little popular support; the Catholic Church in Hana attempted to mediate but failed.

Many civic organizations in Havana were petitioning for the right to have free elections; these organizations included the National Bar Association, the National Medical Association, the Lions Club, the Knights of Columbus and many other groups. Cuban refugee groups in the U. S. expressed support for Castro and requested that arms shipments to Batista be stopped; it was not known that Castro was a Communist.

In a press conference held April 8, 1958 Secretary of State Dulles stated that it was against general policy of the U. S. to ship arms for use in a civil war. The U. S. Government did what seemed just and reasonable at the time; it tried to maintain a policy of non intervention. For information about conditions in Cuba at that time, see Time Magazine, issues of March 24, April 21 and 28, 1958. For a better understanding of the complexity of the problems facing the State Department, look through the bound volumes of the Department of State bulletins in the Documents Section of the FSU Library.

Films such as this can cause suspicion and mistrust are more harmful than helpful. If PROJECT AWAKE is seeking educational materials, the FSU Film Catalog has many films listed on American government and history, many on other countries whose cultures and economies we, as Americans, need to know more about, and some on Communism in Russia and China. As sources of information, these would be more reliable than films put out by an extremist group. Panel discussion by faculty members with a question and answer period by the students could be very helpful to the student body.

The purposes of PROJECT AWAKE are worthwhile: it is sincerely hoped that they can be carried out in an atmosphere of free inquiry.

Dial 'M' For Magnolia

By BONNIE FREEDMAN

Tallahassee, communications center of the nation . . .

I would wager that Tallahassee has more telephone lines than any other city in the United States. At least, it can get more of them tangled than any other aforementioned domain. The University does its share; calls in the dorms usually take this form:

"After dialing thirty times, with twenty seven busy signals and three cut - offs - before - I - get - a - chance-to-say-anythings."

"FLORIDA STATE University . . ."

"Magnolia Hall, please . . ."

"One moment."

Three moments or more

"HELLO. What party did you want?

"Magnolia Hall, please."

"Thank you." This means little. She always says thank you.

"BUZZ. CRACKLE. Pop. Giggle." Silence.

I dial five more times.

"Florida State University. Thank you"

SILENCE.

I dial five more times.

"Florida State University."

"COULD I PLEASE May Magnolia Hall."

"Thank you."

Magnolia Hall . . ."

"Could I speak to . . ."

"One moment, thank you."

MORE SNICKERS, giggles, a loud pop. Silence.

I DIAL FIVE more times.

I dial five more times.

I dial five more times.

"MAGNOLIA STATE University."

"MAGNOLIA HALL? And no funny business!"

"Thank you." You see? She always says thank you.

"MAGNOLIA HALL."

"Could I speak to . . ."

"I'm sorry. The switchboard is closing in five minutes."

No Stone Unturned?

MR. SANCHEZ:

Leave no stone unturned, right? The power of perverted speech has apparently taken hold of your better judgment. Whether this is a turn for the worse, I don't know. But perhaps I could offer a suggestion to regard to your slightly toxic pen.

Why don't you concentrate your talents on one thing at a time and make a serious attempt at some scholarly criticism? I feel certain that there are readers of this paper who question your experience and intelligence inferred by your recent articles. The opinion of a Churchill may be readily accepted by millions without intensive or complete explanations. But the opinions on important matters of individuals with far less weight if not ability demand exposure of their reasoning leading to such opinions.

In your article, "Tallahasseeans are Propaganda Targets, you labeled Sen. Goldwater as one of the "right-wing extremists of whom the President warned." Perhaps you could qualify that a bit in a later article so as to relieve Mr. Kennedy's anxieties over misinterpretations of the press."

You also mentioned the "discredited propaganda film," "Operation Abolition." Were you of any national reputation, HUAC critics would deem you an ideal committee member: on the basis of your recent sloppy slanders, straightjacking men certainly would not.

These differing examples show how recently you need to settle down and write a decent column for intelligent readers, using much less sensationalism and much more common sense . . . small bites for small people.

TO THE EDITOR:

The initial meeting of Project Awake has been criticized by some because the program was terminated without a discussion of the film presentation.

Although this was done in order to complete the program within the scheduled time, the criticism is warranted and I assume full responsibility for this occurrence. All future meetings will be open for discussion at the conclusion of the program.

Reflections

Would We Like It Any Different?

By LESLIE POWELL

Funny thing about the Florida State University campus. It is a lovely place in terms of physical beauty. The variety of trees, shrubs and flowering plants turn FSU into a garden for parts of the year.

AND AS MUCH as I and many, many other students complain about some of the more antiquated buildings, we'd miss them like crazy should they be torn down any time soon. It just wouldn't be FSU without the wackily stacked History and Science buildings, or without the one-room-schoolhouse simplicity of the Social Welfare building. We have to expect them to go sooner or later because the university is growing but for all the efficiency and usefulness of new buildings, they never really are the fun that the older buildings are.

Take the "A" building for instance. The iron stairs on the outside are rickety and perfectly capable of making you seasick, but where else are there stairs that big-footed people like me have to walk up sideways 'and down in the same manner? Such things are half of what make college memorable.

THIS YEAR WE'VE added an awful lot of new concrete walks which most of us might never have noticed except for the opportunity to walk across them on the fresh pavement. That will take the slips and slides of many a rainy day, but until then we sat down hard in the mud between Longmire and the Library, you really haven't been to FSU. The new walks haven't spoiled the looks of the campus as many of us feared, but have actually enhanced the areas that have been walked grass-free by thousands of hurrying feet. Now, with the new walks and the grass, it will have a chance to grow again in many areas. Once, a few years ago, in an effort to give the grass a chance, students placed sign signs as the one that read "I Yant To Be Alawn." In the strategic cattle-crossing spots.

This fall has been the most dry semester that many of us can recall. Previously it would begin to rain about registration day and continue until Christmas. Then it would start over in Spring and keep up until June. My first year here it snowed to boot. That was fun, but I learned one valuable lesson: never have snowball fights with FSU coeds. They don't play fair. They get out on the sidewalks between the older dorms and drop snow on you . . . worse, they sometimes pack the snow around harder objects like rocks. And the housemothers team up with the girls too, so you can't win.

AND WHILE YOU hear too often that there's nothing to do at FSU, try once keeping up with the various organizations on campus and the many functions which they sponsor and participate in.

There's just about everything from Young Democrats and Republican's clubs to Poetry reading and Soap Box Derbies to Liberal Forum, English Coffee Hour, Coffee Concerts and many, many, many other events that pass relatively unnoticed except by those who attend one or the other function more or less regularly.

THERE ARE PLENTY of us sung people here too, on the various staffs, in the offices, in student activities. Ask any of the Gene Simonds, Merry Moorhouses, Judy Scurs, Georgia Fortins, and many more who do this quietly and without fanfare.

I know that there are awful lot of nice people holding secretarial jobs in Westcott and affiliated areas. I even suspect the Deans to be pleasant people when the opportunity presents itself.

FSU IS A fascinating place. Sure, it has drawbacks, but it is a roling concern in the process of change.

New Christmas Ideas

By BOB FOSS

Deck the halls with broken beer bottles ya la la la la for everyone is stoned. Ah yes, that wonderful time of the year is now upon us. The happiest time of the whole year when even our Christmas cards from people you don't even know. Take for instance last year, I got a Christmas card from one Frobisher Snarf which was frightening most anything because first of all I don't know anyone by that name and second of all, if I did, I certainly would fear that name I most certainly would have remembered him.

Oh yes! The myriads of decorations that adorn everything on the Westcott hall to the broom closet in Longmire. Take for instance that last year on this very campus Gwill Hibler, decked out in her new U. S. Olympic team Bobbish sweatshirt, was attached right in front of the soda shop, and before you could say Jack Dalitate, she was a beautiful friendship tree decorated with all of last year's left over Christmas cards neatly taped to her epidermal covering. This part, as oneno might imagine, made Gwill exubrant with brotherhood and the spirit of Christmas, but alas and alack, the decorating committee had stenciled Merry Christmas right across her Tommy Sands autograph on her left knee shoe. Poor, poor Gwill.

THIS YEAR THE National Society for the Advancement of Creative Christmas Creations and Traditions, has sent out a small but inexpensive handbook to all the club members of which I am one. Due to the lack of these informative handbooks, I have taken it upon myself to reprint a small portion of this classic pamphlet.

"Party ideas: A mass mistletoe burning party where everyone can stand around and sing nasty things about Santa Claus and his nasty little dwarfs.

"A PARTY in which reindeers in effigy and sing typical Christmas carols around Santa Claus and his sleigh filled with final tests. Also, a door to door campaign to properly inform all the neighborhood kids that there is indeed Santa Claus "

Westcott Fountain Is Beautiful . . . Sometimes

By JOYCELYN WARD

What's new in Westcott fountain? That question ca nproduce a variety of answers. . . . This year, everything from dye, in shades from bright green to Georgia mud orange, to fish, sharks, canoes, and of course, people pimped people, plunged people, or just plain un-the-wrong-place-at-the-wrong-time people, have wound up in the pool.

ALL THESE STUNTS are a lot of fun, but just like everything else we have to pay for our fun at the fountain. The department of maintenance estimates that it costs at least $35 in labor alone to drain and clean the pool every time a prankster decides to use the pool for some dye in the clear blue water. An extra $60-75 must be added if the culprit uses really potent dye and the fountain must be repainted.

The Westcott fountain has been a part of the campus for almost 50 years. It originally held goldfish and water plants year round. But shortly after the Westcott construction all the goldfish died. For many years the bill for the fountain was quite small. It was cleaned only about 3 times a year and a touch-up paint job just once a year.

THIS YEAR THE POOL will have to be cleaned an estimated 10 times and it has already been repainted twice this past month At this rate it will cost over $2000 just to keep Westcott clean for one year.

(ED. Since the boys on campus are causing the damage it seems only fair that they pay for it. Perhaps an additional $5 or $10 could be attached to each male entrance fee to cover property damage to the pool and the animal cages, Kellum and Smith Halls.

POOL PARTIES ARE of great concern to the administration because of the potential danger involved. Few swimmers in Westcott fountain have had lessons in life saving before they leave home. Dewey Loucks has stated, "I think students must be more careful at pool parties than we give them credit for. No one to my knowledge has ever been seriously injured at a pool party." He did suggest an alternate that could replace the pool party which is much less dangerous. Instead of being tossed into the pool, the boy of a newly pinned couple would be tied to a large Indian Coins pole conveniently placed on, for example, Landis Green and his girl would have to untie him. In the meantime they would be getting soaked from well placed hoses. The couple would probably not be the only wet students on the Green.

If vandalism should become intolerable, or pool parties too dangerous, the fountain pool might be turned into a flower bed. This according to the Dean of Men would be a last resort measure only.

DEAN LOUCKS feels that if the students themselves realize how much it costs the University to clean up after pranksters, they can prevent these damages to property and appearance.

Westcott fountain is a pleasing addition to the campus and up until the last few years a very undramatic figure. But today you never know what is going to turn up in the fountain next.

AS BUSINESS MANAGER R. K. Sharp put it, "Westcott fountain is beautiful, isn't it? . . . Some of the time."

Suggestion

TO THE EDITOR:

If it has taken us fifteen generations to produce Mr. Sanchez, perhaps Florida is indeed in trouble. In the case of our minor-league Messiah, the mountain has indeed labored and brought forth a mouse.

I suggest that he return to his garret and console himself with back copies of the New York Pool.

Trimester...

sponsibility is to exercise this plan, and by so doing to provide better education far more students.

Dr. Stone also pointed out that the only two facts about the trimester system that are definite at this point are (1) that we will have it, and (2) the calendar has been approved.

A major part of the meeting was devoted to the answering of pertinent questions by student government leaders Sally Byrd, student body president; Ken van Assendorp, student body vice president; Marion Clark, attorney general; Ben Sharp, editor of the Flambeau; and Buddy Hully, presidential assistant.

The first question directed by Byrd to the panel was, "What are the advantages of the trimester system?" The advantages given by the panelists were as follows:

1. In analyzing our own culture we find that much depends upon the educated segment of our population. Because of this, higher education is paramount and imperative for as many people as possible, as soon as possible. The trimester plan is well adapted to fast but thorough education for a greater majority of our high school graduates.
2. There is an increased demand for professionally trained talent integrated with liberal arts. The trimester system provides a push toward a united achievement at both these ends.
3. The trimester system provides for a better utilization of teachers and buildings.
4. Year round operation allows the University to spread finances throughout 12 months and is operate less expensively in the long run.
5. The trimester plan will allow for the increased earning power of instructors.

DISADVANTAGES

Disadvantages mentioned by the members of the panel included the following:

1. Although it would be possible for instructors to earn more under the trimester system, their time spent in research in their own field would be considerably lessened.
2. Under the trimester system there would be a definite and strict requirement on student time, for more work must be accomplished in less time. This, of course, would bring about serious adjustmeats to new academic standards.
3. There will of necessity be fewer vacations under the trimester system.
4. Perhaps the greatest disadvantage is that the extering into a new system automatically presents many questions to be answered and many problems to be solved.

MISCELLANEOUS

Panelists also answered various miscellaneous questions on the newly accepted system.

It was brought out that the Monday, Wednesday and Friday classes under the new system are tentatively scheduled to last 55 to 60 minutes and that the Tuesday and Thursday classes will also be extended to compensate for the shorter amount nf total time in a course.

Students who transfer to FSU nr in out-of-state colleges from FSU will possibly run into difficulties of credits and semesters.

No required Saturday classes are now foreseen, said van Assendorp, but they may possibly be added later for compensation purposes.

The calendar for the trimester program at FSU allows for one day for the Thanksgiving holiday, plus the weekend. One day's classes will also be dismissed for the Fourth of July. The length of the Easter holiday vacation will last for a minimum of 11 days with possible extensions due to exam and registration schedules.

Fees for each trimester are tentatively planned to be the same as the now existing semester fees. Housing and registration will not be changed. Although this brings greater annual expense to the student, it will be less expensive in the long run.

With the increased emphasis on the academic side of college life, many nutside activities, as well as part-time employment will have to be cut to a minimum. Students will be able, however, to attend classes for two trimesters and drop out for one, which will give them a four month work period.

FSU's new plan, which divides the academic year into three periods of fourteen weeks each, will present problems concerning Student Government, sororities and fraternities, honoraries, and almost every other phase of campus life.

FSU Coed Wins National 4-H Title

Laura Ann Higginson, a junior at Florida State University and former Pasco County 4-H Club member, has been named national winner of an $800 home economics scholarship by the Sunbeam Corporation, Miss Anna Mae Sikes, state home demonstration agent, has announced.

Miss Higginson's all-round 4-H club record placed first in the nation. During eight years of 4-H club work she completed projects in electricity, outdoor meals, recreation, junior leadership, home improvement, public speaking, gardening, clothing, canning, frozen foods, and money management. She served as a junior 4-H leader, planning programs, demonstrations, and recreation for meetings. She helped set up exhibits for fairs and achievement days and recruited new members for her club.

She is now majoring in home economics education and home demonstration education.

At FSU she is a member of the Collegiate 4-H Club on the Home Economics Club. Last year she worked as a student assistant in the department of foods and nutrition.

Project Awake is composed of members af the campus community who have become concerned over the threat of international Communism to our American way of life.

As a 4-H club member, she represented Florida as state 4-H achievement winner at the 1959 national 4-H Club Congress in the summer of 1960 she represented Florida as a Danforth fellow in citizenship at Camp Minnewanca, at Stony Lake, Michigan. At the camp she served as religious chairman of the work staff.

Laura Ann comes from a 4-H minded family.

'Operation Abolition' To Be Shown Here Tomorrow Night

Operation Abolition, a film concerning student riots at the University of California and an investigation by the House Committee on Un-American Activities will be shown tomorrow night at 8:15 in Conradi Theatre.

The film will be introduced by Richard O. Mitchell, a member of the House of Representatives from Leon County. It is sponsored by the Project Awake organization on this campus.

The purpose of the film is to show how innocent people can be made dupes of by the Communists," said Duncan Moore, "The members of Project Awake do not necessarily support everything presented in our films, especially one as controversial as this. However, we do hope that people will give an objective judgment of the film. We are merely trying to arouse interest," he said.

Chiefs Trade Boots For Chairs, Baton

By JOYCELYN WARD
Flambeau Feature Writer

As football season ends, the Florida State Marching Chiefs are replacing their marching boots and precision maneuvers to a rapid cadence with concert chairs and precise response to the wave of a baton.

When marching season is over, the members of the Chiefs take their place in either the Symphonic Band conducted by Dr. Manley R. Whitcomb or the Concert Band under Robert T. Braunagel.

The Symphonic Band is made up of eighty-five instrumentalists who are carefully selected for their musical ability. Dec. 5, they presented their first concert of the year and they have performed in Panama City at the invitation of the district band directors as a part of the District Band Contest. In February they will tour south Florida.

The Concert Band is open to all interested students. Its members are drawn from many schools of the university in addition to the School of Music. On Dec. 10, the Concert Band and the Marching Chiefs will present an informal program of Christmas music in Opperman Auditorium.

NOW THAT FOOTBALL SEASON IS OVER, THESE BANDSMEN EXCHANGE THEIR UN forms for a more conservative dress and their marching instruments for those used in the fine phonic and Concert Bands. Pittman displays the tam tam. VanSickle the Concert Brass and Silkenbakken gets ready to lift his sticks to the Concert snare drum.

FellowshipTime Set

All college seniors, graduate and postdoctoral students who are citizens or nationals of the United States and have demonstrated ability and special aptitude for advanced training in the sciences are eligible for the National Science Fellowships.

All applicants will be judged solely on the basis of their ability. Applicants for the graduate awards will be required to take the Graduate Record Examination designed to test scientific aptitude and achievement which will be given on Jan. 20, 1962 at designated centers throughout the United States and certain foreign countries.

All applications for Graduate Fellowships must be received in the Fellowship Office of the National Academy of Sciences by Jan. 5, 1962, and all Postdoctoral applications by Dec. 18, 1961. Fellowships will be awarded on March 15, 1962. Application materials may be obtained from Department Heads.

The annual stipends for graduate Fellows are as follows: $1,800 for the first year; $2,000 for the intermediate year and $2,200 for the terminal year. The annual stipend for postdoctoral Fellows is $5,000. Limited allowances will also be provided to apply toward tuition, laboratory fees, and travel.

Village Vamps

Village Vamp rush will be held today and tomorrow at 7 p.m. in the Large Lounge, Longmire Bldg.

Dr. Garth Blake, director of educational placement and internship, was next on the program. He stated that the department does not envisage any changes in interning during the two trimesters that correspond to our fall and spring semesters. He added that he thought it extremely possible to initiate an internship program for the third trimester if enough students showed a definite interest.

Dr. Gifford G. Hale of upper elementary education pointed out that students attending all three trimesters would still have a month's vacation in August. He also mentioned that an increase of students is becoming more and more evident in his own department already.

Dr. Eugene Boyce, associate dean of the School of Education, concluded the program with a discussion of dividing the college staff over the three periods. He passed out a student questionnaire for the purpose of getting a cross-section of student interest and opinion on the new program to be initiated at FSU next Fall.

Pupils Become Eligible For Division Transfe

The Registrar's Office has announced the list of names of students who have been certified by the Division of Basic Studies for entrance into their major programs.

The requirements for final certification are: a "C" average at the end of this semester, completion of 60 hours of credit, completion of a minimum of 30 semester hours in General Education including English 101-102, Mathematics 101, History 181-182, three hours in the social science area, and the requirement in either biological sciences or physical science completion of one-half the physical education requirement and acceptance by school or college for admission to a degree program.

Any student not on the following list, who thinks he has qualified for certification should report at once to the Division of Basic Studies office in 105 Dodd Hall (Florida School) and request his record.

The following are the students who will become certified:

predecessors of twenty-five years ago, profess to know what specific structure society should have, or what dialectical stages it is destined to go through.

One might almost say that they don't care, so long as the coming society provides the human values they cherish. For the moment they are fascinated by the Cuban revolution—one would gather from their magazines that a city called Berlin does not exist—and many of them see in FIDELISMO the principal of "direct democracy." This appears to them attractive, even though "direct democracy" bypasses such civil processes as free elections.

The impulse toward activism, directness, immediacy gives a certain power to the students of the new life. It is not surprising that under American conditions they should have difficulty in rationalizing and channeling this impulse with a coherent body of ideas. If the campus radicals can evolve an adequate ideology they will become, as they grow older, a strong force in American society. Perhaps they will anyway, ideology or no ideology.

In the past few years, the number of marriages between the ages of 15 and 19 has increased overwhelmingly. Too often juvenile marriage statistics are immediately followed, however, by an increase in divorces, too.
You may find yourselves in the position of having a son or daughter who marries very young. The best thing you can do is to try to make the marriage a success. Teach your youngsters, through strong religious Faith, that marriage is a permanent union based on two people united and working together. Seminoles Post Win Over Fla. 85-71, Tigers 56-52

By BILL CHEEK
Flambeau Sports Editor

The Florida State Seminoles will face Clemson University Thursday night in their second home game at 8 p.m. in Tully Gym.

Clemson won its opener against the Virginia Military Institute 87-84. The Tigers lost in the last two seconds to North Carolina 54-52. They also defeated Virginia in a game which ran into overtime.

Sporting a 1-2 record, the Florida State Seminoles invaded Florida's Gymnasium Thursday and handed the University of Florida an 85-71 defeat.

The win gave Florida State its first victory over the Gators in the Florida gymnasium as well as breaking up a 10-game Florida win streak.

The Seminoles hit sixty per cent of its field goals with Dave Fedor scoring 27 points before 7,000 partisan fans.

The Gators rallied FSU from be opening jump und were able to ut only 38.5 per ent of their hots.

Dave Fedor nd Ray Swain ed the Seminoles to a 16 point adantage early in the game.

Lou Merchant and Tom Barbee were able to partically close the gap by half time to 11 points.

Charlie Long was number two scorer for the evening by putling in 18 points. Ray Swain, who only missed two shots all night sank 17 points. Dale Ricketts also hit in the double digits by firing in 16 points.

Florida's defense was unable to contain the "Seminole Shuffle" and its offense ran into cold shooting spells. FSU scored on outside jump shots and easy lay ups.

Cliff Luyk was Florida's high score man with 17 points. Merchant was second with 15 points.

FROM SEA TO SHINING SEA

America is a great country. America's cities are full of houses, America's forests are full of trees. America's rivers are full of water. But it is not houses and trees and water that make America great; it is curiosity—the constant quest to find answers—the endless restless "Why?" "Why?" "Why?"

Therefore, when I was told that Marlboro was a top seller at colleges from USC to Yale, I was not content merely to accept this gratifying fact. I had to find out why.

I hied myself to campuses in every sector of this mighty land. First, I went to the Ivy League—dressed, of course, in an appropriate costume: a skull-and-bones in one hand, a triangle in the other, a mask-and-wig on my head, a hasty pudding in my chops. "Sir," I cried, seizing an Ivy Leaguer by the lapels, which is no mean task considering the narrowness of Ivy League lapels, but, I fortunately, happen to have little tiny hands; in fact, I spent the last war working in a small arms plant where, I am proud to say, I was awarded a Navy "E" for excellence and soon many friends—"Sir," I cried, seizing an Ivy Leaguer by the lapels, "how come Marlboro is your favorite filter cigarette?"

"I'm glad you asked that question, Shorty," he replied. "Marlboro is my favorite filter cigarette because it is the filter cigarette with the unfiltered taste."

"Oh, thank you, sir!" I cried and ran posthaste to several campuses in the Big Ten, wearing, of course, the appropriate costume: a plaid Mackinaw, birling boots, a Kodiak bear and foot-bitten ears.

Spying an apple-cheeked young coed, I tugged my forelock and said, "Excuse me, miss, but how come Marlboro is your favorite filter cigarette?"

"I'm glad you asked that question, Shorty," she replied. "Marlboro is my favorite filter cigarette because the flavor is flavorful, the flip-top box flips and the soft-pack is soft."

"Oh, thank you, apple-cheeked young coed," I cried and hobbled a curtsey and sped as fast as my little fat legs would carry me to several campuses in the Southwest, wearing, of course, the appropriate costume: chaps, canteen, and several oil heirs. Spying a group of undergraduates singing "Strawberry Roan," I removed my hat and said, "Excuse me, friends, but why is Marlboro your favorite filter cigarette?"

"We are glad you asked that question, Shorty," they replied. "Marlboro is our favorite filter cigarette because we, native sons and daughters of the wide open spaces, want a cigarette that is frank and forthright and honest. We want, in short, Marlboro."

"Oh, thank you, all," I cried and, donning a mun mun, I set sail for Hawaii, because in Hawaii, as in every state where Old Glory flies, Marlboro is the leading seller in flip-top box. On campus, off campus, in all fifty states, wherever people smoke for pleasure in this great land of ours, you will find Marlboro.

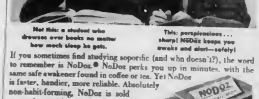
Gymnasts Perform At Meet

The Florida State Gymnastics team participated in the Central Florida Gymnastic Championships Saturday in Leesburg, Fla. This was the first meet for the gymnastics team this season. This year the gymnastics team has undertaken one of its toughest schedules to date.

Georgia Southern College won the meet, but according to Coach Joe Gasie, "We unofficially won senior division."

FSU won the rope climb with Mitch Weinstock placing first, Nobi Stone third; Jim Hampton, fourth. In the men's longhorse division, Mitch Weinstock tied with Jim Hampton for third place.



In the free calisthenics, Ray Schaffer placed second, and Mitch Weinstock placed fourth.

On the sidehorse, Joe Taylor took first place, Mitch Weinstock took fourth and Novi Stone took fifth. Competing on the parallel bars, Joe Taylor placed first, Ray Schaffer took second and Jim Hampton took sixth place.

On the steel rings, Joe Taylor took first; Ray Schaffer took fourth and Mitch Weinstock took fifth.

In the all-around devision Ray Schaffer took second place and Mitch Wenstock took fourth.

FSU Swimmers Score Win Over Southern AAU Teams

By SHIRLEY HARDISON
Flambeau Sports Writer

The Florida State swimming team copped the Southern AAU Invitational meet this weekend in New Orleans as the FSU mermen set five pool records.

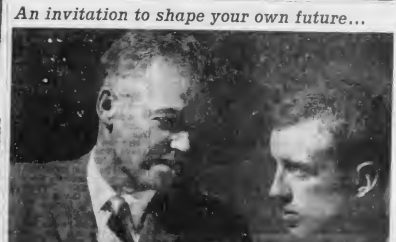
Backed by All-American candidate Paul Thompson, the Seminoles scored 141 points to take their first Southern AAU Championship. Tulane was second with 134 points and the Capital Swim Association was third in the 12 team meet.

Thompson won two individual events, the 200 yard individual medley in 2:13.7 and the 440 freestyle in 4:54.7, setting pool records in both events. He also anchored the freestyle relay team that set a pool record of 1:38.6.

Another double winner for Florida State was sophomore Tom Brandley. Brandley finished with a 55.2 time in the 100 yard freestyle, and a 2:23.0 time in the 220 freestyle. He set the record for the 220 time and was part of the record-setting freestyle relay team along with Thompson, Ned Searcy and Dale Smith.

The last pool record was set by the 200 yard medley relay team, composed of Dick Acosta, Bill Lawrence, Risto Pyykko and Pete Davis. The record time was 1:51.4.

Davis won his individual event the 100-yard breaststroke, with a time of 1:11.5 while Acosta took the 100 backstroke event with a 1:02.8 time.



Florida State also took the first three places in the 220-yard individual medley and the top five places in the 400-yard freestyle event.

The swimming team will be relying on the services of the sophomores this season. The freshmen team last year was the best team FSU had ever had, and the talent will be used this season to put Florida State in the top of the swimming ranks. Five sophomores made the trip in New Orleans; they won four individual events and were part of both the record-breaking relay teams.

Ann Miller Crowned Queen

By GAYLE MOTES
Flambeau Staff Writer

Ann Miller, a Kappa Alpha Theta, was crowned Sigma Chi Derby Queen during the annual field day of events Saturday.

Pi Beta Phi and Sigma Kappa sororities tied for first place in the over-all competition by winning the most events in the competition. Third place trophy went to Delta Delta Delta.

Beauty contest runners-up were Betty Hemrick, a Tri Delt, and Joan Derrick, a Pi Phi.

Other finalists were Dot Harpe of Sigma Kappa and Kitty Miller of Zeta Tau Alpha.

OBSTACLE RACE

In the obstacle race, the first event, each sorority representative had to jump over two large hurdles, crawl through a tire, squeeze through a cardboard box, and jump over a hay stack. Winners were chosen on the basis of their speed. First place went to the Alpha Phi's with a time of 4.2 seconds. Second place in this event went to the Delta Zeta sorority. The Tri-Delts copped third place while the Zeta's came in fourth and the Phi Mu's placed fifth.

The second event was a key-finding contest. One member of each sorority attempted to find her sorority key in a cement mixer filled with flour. The first five coeds who found keys were declared winners. The Kappa Delta's were first place winners. The Pi Phi's placed second. Third place went to Beta Tau Alpha. Alpha Gamma Delta received fourth place and Alpha Omicron Pi came in fifth.

COKE-DRINKING

For the next event three women from each sorority participated in a coke-drinking contest. This contest took the form of a relay race. The AOPi's came in first with a time of 23.6 seconds. Chi Omega placed second and Alpha Xi Delta came in third. Alpha Chi were fourth and Phi Mu fifth.

Mrs. Gayle Blackwell, wife of the Florida State University President, Dean Charles Rovetta of the School of Business, Dr. James Carr, director of financial aid, and Coach Bill Peterson were judges of the next event, the Deck-A-Pledge contest. In this event each sorority "decked" or dressed a Sigma Chi pledge in some type of a costume.

First place went to the A Chi O's and their guardian angel complete with wings and bearing a sign "Our Guardian Angel in the Sky, Bring Us Luck with Sigma Chi." Second place winners were the Sigma Kappa's with a

Angel Flight Taps 19 Coeds

Nineteen coeds were tapped for membership in Angel Flight last Tuesday night when the Florida State University Angels invaded the dormitories and sorority houses.

New members are Vicki Cornelison, Sally Emptage, Sandi Fedorovich, Linda Green, Helen Hatton, Charlene Howard, Linda Kelly, Mary Langford, Rosalie Licata, Dorothy Long, Marilyn Matthews, Ann Mulling, Betty O'Berry, Lois Pepper, Willi Richason, Jean Sauer, Kim Stratton, Patty Warren, and Carolyn Wronske

To apply for membership in Angel Flight, the applicant must be a woman student of at least sophomore classification and have a 2.5 overall average. The members were chosen on the basis of appearance, poise and personality during an interview with the executive board, Arnold Air Society representatives, the Angel Flight sponsor and a representative from the Dean of Women's office.

Those selected for semi-finals held a practice drill pevsed Dec. 3. From this group, the finalists were selected on their ability to learn the fundamentals of drilling, their cooperative attitude and good posture and carriage.

Tuesday, the Angel Flight will help participate in pledging for Arnold Air Society. Next Sunday, Mayor Gross, Angel Flight sponsor, will have a Christmas party for the Angels at his home.

This spring the Angels are planning to march in the Mardi Gras parade in New Orleans and the Gasparilla Parade in Tampa.

Beadle's Dream: International TV

By LANA MURRAY
Flambeau Staff Writer

An international television network that brings live programs from all over the world to viewers in this country.

This is the dream—and goal—expressed Wednesday night by the University Lecture Series speaker, Sir Gerald Beadle, called "the pioneer citizen of broadcasting."

RECENT DEVELOPMENTS

Sir Gerald, immediate past president of the British Broadcasting Company, described recent developments in the field of international television. First actual research along these lines, he said, was done by a coalition of British and French television engineers. From its humble beginning, "Eurovision," as the network is called, expanded to include 17 members.

A similar link-up between Soviet-bloc countries was recently established and termed "Intervision." Limited efforts also have been made he added, to provide a link between these two "international" networks.

Among public events that he mentioned as having already been televised over international hookups are the coronation of Queen Elizabeth, the coronation of Pope John XXIII, funeral of Tom Mboya, a discussion between President Dwight D. Eisenhower and Prime Minister Harold Macmillan, and the Olympic Games in Rome.

LINK UNITED STATE

Discussing possibilities of a trans-Atlantic network to link the United State with the rest of the world, Sir Gerald remarked that previous attempts at such a hookup have been unsuccessful because the trans-Atlantic cable cannot carry images across the ocean at a practical rate.

The solution to this problem, he said, may be the use of communication satellites. At a distance of 3,000 miles above the earth, the satellite would receive TV broadcasts from one side of the Atlantic and retransmit them to the other side.

Stressing the value of an international network, Sir Gerald declared that it would develop a sense of world citizenship. "The most important function of television is to act as man's window on the world," he declared.

DESCRIBED SYSTEM

Sir Gerald described also the system under which British television operates and the problems that confront it. He said that while almost all networks in the U. S. are commercial, all except one in Europe are government-owned. The one exception, the Second British Network, is prohibited from having sponsors for its programs to prevent any agency from influencing editorial opinion too much. Advertising space is sold only for time between programs.

For the government-operated BBC, each household with a television receiver is assessed $3.50 per year, a fee which is collected by the post office.

Answering charges that the BBC is subject to too much governmental control, he pointed out that although the government is empowered to instruct the BBC to broadcast or to refrain from broadcasting certain things, these instructions are openly announced by the network itself. This governmental power has been invoked only four times in the history of the BBC, he added.

CONTRAST IN PROGRAMMING

Contrasting TV programming in the U. S. and Great Britain, Sir Gerald noted that: 1) in Great

SIR GERALD BEADLE, CENTER, WHO WAS WITH THE BRITISH BROADCASTING CORPORation from 1923 to June, 1961, when he retired as president of BBC-TV, was the University Lecture Series speaker at Florida State University Wednesday. Earlier he answered questions of television and radio students and conferred with Dr. Bernard Cooper, left, and Dr. Wayne Nesnick of the Speech Department.

Senate Takes Step On Illegal Actions

By HOWARD DENSON
Flambeau Staff Writer

A "letter writing" resolution, which would prompt National Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges to strike the names of two students from Florida State University students from the Who's Who list, was approved by Student Senate Wednesday afternoon.

Student President Bobby Byrd, President of Senate Ken van Assendelp, and Dean of Students R. R. Oglesby were asked to write letters to the officials.

REPLACEMENTS

The resolution also requested that Who's Who has insert two replacements for the students being removed. The students being removed are Byrd and Jack Ascherl, president of the Senior Class.

After Sen. Arnie Gibbs urged support of the resolution, Sen. Joe Ferraro said this is the last step in the Who's Who controversy and encouraged them to take the necessary measure to get the issue off the Senate's mind.

Only one person, Dr. Oglesby, needs to sign the letter, however, Sen. Joedy Smith said.

The student body has given the Senate a mandate and some students say Student Government is going to become a farce if the names are removed, he added.

Sen. Joedy Smith called for the repeal of the previous Who's Who Statute and pointed out the merits of the two seniors.

HONOR COURT

He said he told the Honor Court Sunday that there were not two students in the room more deserving of the Who's Who honor than Byrd and Ascherl.

A visitor at the meeting, Duke Scott, said he couldn't believe such a stunk would be caused by the Who's Who violations. He confessed he didn't know the legal ruling and couldn't tell which side was right, but the Senate has made a joke of the matter.

"I have the highest respect for these two students . . . and if these two aren't let on the list, then this is a joke . . . I have not talked to one senior on the Who's Who list who said he didn't feel these two didn't deserve to be on the list," Scott said.

"This thing has been carried too far . . . you ought to leave the names on," he concluded.

Sen. Jim Johnson said the Honor Court has ruled the names illegal and the Senate has a responsibility to remove the names. Sen. Jeannie Ferlita pointed out that Secretary of Public Relations, Bill Greenwood and Sen. Joedy Smith were contradicting each other one asked the Senate to ignore personalities, the other asked them to consider them.

Men's Vice-President Carl Kutcher said that the two individuals have been punished because they were leaders and their grade averages were exposd He said the

Oglesby Speaks On Who's Who

Florida State University's Dean of Students R. R. Oglesby, reported yesterday that he had not yet been officially notified of the Honor Court action on the Who's Who committee.

Notification of authorities will not be made until an official statement from the Honor Court reporting their ruling of the illegality of the committee's action, is received by his office, Dean Oglesby stated.

"I have no feeling either way. I will follow out the wishes of the students," he said. He reported that all the knowledge he had of the Honor Court decision, was that which he had read in the paper.

When he does learn, officially, of the ruling, Dean Oglesby will notify the national committee of Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities and request the removal of the names of Jack Ascherl and Bobby Byrd from the list.

Rocket Society Gets Charter

The Florida State University Rocket Society, which has been organizing on campus for the past year, has now completed all requirements to become a regular student chapter of the American Rocket Society.

This organization was to have received its charter Tuesday night from Col. Prentice Peabody, deputy ballistic missile officer of the air force test wing at Cape Canaveral. However, bad weather forced the cancellation of Col. Peabody's flight.

The presentation of the charter has been rescheduled for Jan. 10, at which time Col. Peabody will give a talk on the "Air Force Missile and Space Testing at Cape Canaveral."

The FSU Rocket Society has 30 members. Their primary interest, according to their president, Marlow Henne, is not in firing small rockets. However, they intend, at a later date, to participate in such experiments if they can be shown to be scientifically valuable.

The major objectives of the organization, said Henne, are to keep students informed of new developments in the missile and space technology fields through films, lectures, discussions, field trips and national publications of the society.

The only requirement for student membership is an interest in learning about the missile and space fields. Current officers in the organization are: Marlow Henne, president; John Gander, vice president; Mary Grossenbacher, secretary; and Beverly Kenemuth, treasurer.

Interested students should contact any of the officers of the society about further information.

Four Day Break!

Registration for second semester will be held Jan. 29, 30 and 31, said Dr. Murray Krauss, registrar. Final exams from first semester end Jan. 24.

Procedures will be the same as they were in the fall, said Dr. Krauss. Graduating seniors will receive the first appointments and other students will be given appointments by random selection, he stated.

The registrar's explanation for abandoning the register-by-class method was that, "It didn't work."

Those taking only evening classes may register from 6:30 to 8 p.m. Jan. 30 or from 8:30 a.m. until noon Feb. 3.

Grades from first semester are due in the registrar's office Thursday, Jan. 25, four days before registration. Students will have their grades before registration "if humanly possible," he said.

CoedAppearedWithHope

Carol Harr, Florida State University coed and Orange Bowl Queen, appeared on the first Bob Hope Show of the season Wednesday.

Talented American youth were spotlighted on this first special of the year which also featured Danny Thomas, Nancy Kwan and James Garner. David Rose and his orchestra supplied the musical accompaniment.

The Look Magazine All-America Football Team, selected annually by the editors of the magazine, was presented to the viewing public along with a quintet of beauty queens who will reign over five of the major Bowl Games on New Year's Day. They were Miss Hair, Orange; Sharon Brown, Sugar; Sandra Hall, Liberty, Lithona Rozier, Gator, and Eva Gayle Maxey, Cotton.

Other guests in addition to the All-America team and the queens were the Hollywood Deb Stars, a dozen filmland beauties selected annually by the Makeup Artists and the Hair Stylists of Hollywood. In the past, Hope has introduced Delores Hart, Kim Novak, Tuesday Weld, Anita Ekberg, Carol Lynley, Myrna Fahey, Letitia Roman and Paula Prentiss as Deb Stars.

Housing Fees Due Jan. 15

The Housing Office has announced that housing fees for the second semester will be due on or before Jan. 15.

The Housing Assignment-Invoice will be mailed to the student's campus address by Jan. 2. The student must bring or mail this Housing-Invoice with the remittance to the Housing Office. There is a $5 fee for late payment.

Any student planning to pay housing fees from student or NDEA loan funds should make application for this loan before going home for Christmas if it has not already been approved. Students whose loans have been approved should go to the Financal Aid Office to sign the note for release of these funds early in January.

Church Of Christ Is Opened On Call St.

The Call Street Church of Christ, newly established religious group in close proximity to the FSU campus, had its opening services Sunday.

The church is located at 525 W. Call Street, and is the second group of this denomination in Tallahassee.

The group located the church near the campus to serve the religious needs of the 75 students who list the Church of Christ as their religious preference.

Three University faculty members are deacons of the new church. They are Dr. Elston Roady, Government Dept.; Capt. Herman O. Thomson, Air Force R.O.T.C.; and Dr. James F. Carr, director of financial aid. Many other University personnel attend as part of the congregation.

The minister, James Lee Mcdonough, is a graduate student working for his doctoral degree.

Schedule of services is as follows:

10 a.m.—Sunday School.
10:50 a.m.—Worship.
6 p.m.—Worship.

NEW CHURCH OF CHRIST

Waldby Goes To Chingchi School

Dr. Odell Waldby will take leave from the faculty of Florida State University Feb. 1, for an 18-month State Department assignment in Formosa where he will help set up an Institute of Public Administration at Chingchi University.

Waldby is professor of government and acting dicoor of the Institute of Governmental Research at FSU. He and a colleague helped set up a similar public administration institute at the University of the Philippines. Waldby going there in 1953-54 and Dr. Malcolm Parsons a year later.

As a visiting professor at the university in Taipei, Dr. Waldby will establish a curriculum of courses, interview Chinese graduate students for study in the country to become faculty members, help select staff members, start in-service training courses and teach some courses himself.

The University of Michigan, under contract with the State Department Agency For International Development, is setting up the Chingchi University institute. To establish the institute Michigan selected the FSU professor, a specialist in public administration, state and local government.

Mrs. Waldby, and their 10-year-old daughter Debbie will accompany him to Taipei by plane Mrs. Waldby lacks two hours and a thesis toward a master's degree in English and she expects to complete her thesis in Formosa.

The University of Philippines institute is probably the most successful of several recently set up in Southeast Asia. A textbook Waldby wrote while he was there, Philippine Public Fiscal Administration, still is used there.

Although he has been at FSU since 1951 the research books for which he is best known have been done outside of Florida in addition to the Philippine book, published in 1954, these are The Patronage System In Oklahoma (1950) and Problems of Financial Management in Cuyahoga County (Cleveland) (1953).

Waldby received his B.A. degree in political science from the University of Oklahoma in 1940 and his M.S. in public administration from Oklahoma State University in 1941. His Ph.D. in political science was warded by the University of Michigan in 1950. He came to FSU after holding teaching positions at Oklahoma State, University of Michigan and University of Oklahoma

'Harper's' Question: 'What Is The Place Of God In The Universities?'

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article entitled, "God In The Colleges," by Michael Novak is the last in the series which have been condensed by FLAMBEAU special writer Ann Carroll. This article has been taken from the October issue of HARPER'S MAGAZINE.

The present essay pretends to no special statistical wisdom; its material has been gathered from a long-time interest in religion and the university. Undoubtedly, the reader has fuller relevance for the liberal-arts college: I have hardly broached the problem of religion in the scientific and technological schools. In the smaller colleges and the huge state colleges, the focus may be somewhat different.

Although the colleges pride themselves on the awakening of young minds, on the asking of the Big Questions of life . . . it is soon clear to college students that their questions don't count either in academic standing, or in later life, or to research grants.

In the first place, the standing assumption is that ultimate questions are in principle unanswerable, and hence not worth asking seriously. This assumption may not discourage freshmen, but over a four-year period it is pretty well driven home. In the second place, nobody is much interested in students' answers to such questions, or deems them worth putting in competition with anybody else's. Even among the professors it is assumed that ultimate questions are non-intellectual, personal, and if matters of supreme importance and self-commitment, nevertheless not matters for passionate academic dispute . . . The Anglo-American university has committed itself to all that is "objective," countable, precise, publicly verifiable. Though this commitment suits the middle-class temper especially, it stifles religion almost to death.

Not only religion is stifled. More fundamentally, it is possible—it is even common—for a student to go to class after class of sociology, economics, psychology, literature, philosophy, and the rest, and hardly become aware that he is dealing with issues of life and death, of love and solitude, of inner growth and pain. He may never fully grasp the fact that education is to be much information and technique as self-confrontation and change in his own conscious life."

This dilemma of eduction has always been to combine merely mental skills with personal experiencing and growth. The educational currents in American colleges tend to oscillate from one pole to the other; and at present the attention in college to the formal and the public easily leaves the inner life of the student untouched.

. . . If a student wishes to commit himself in answers to ultimate questions (by commitment to some personal synthesis, or to traditional religion or ethics, or anything), he may do so—is even encouraged to do so—but not publicly, nor officially, not in his daily work. He will do well to keep his answers to himself. In term papers and on tests they will not be welcome; there he is obliged to prove rather that he knows facts and correlations, and can run, seeking, as well as anyone else. No one in OFFICIAL university life seems to care about his convictions.

Although it is not clear what constitutes religious "strength," it is clear that if the student's faith goes through a personal trial-by-fire, that is his affair. There are few courses in critical theology, few in modern critical Biblical theory, few in the theory and practice of organized religion, to help him explicity and formally to mature his theological intelligence. In the view of some religious men, this is a good thing, religion, after all, is not something that can be formally taught. It is a living commitment to be enkindled from person to person, a life to be lived rather than lessons to be learned. Besides, formal theological studies imply a living content of religious experience; but it is precisely this living content which in our day most men no longer possess. If religion is to enter the university, it must enter first at the most elementary level; in experience, in awareness, in slow and gradual exploration. The traditional words are not relevant. To the present religious development of most students these are sub-, not only post-, religious. The institutionalized forms of religion did not originate in modern life, and modern science and technology have grown up outside them. The two worlds of religion and modernity are strangers to each other. Were there to be merely formal courses in theology at the university, genuine religious life would fare hardly better than at present. As the New Criticism has said, so is critical theology to religious awareness. Theology, like the New Criticism, has a rule to play, but it is neither necessary nor sufficient for religious life.

. . . the greatest contribution to the religious life of the university could come from teachers and scholars—formally religious or not—who could lead the student to the profound human experiences lying below the surface of the academe curriculum.

Large and unsettling personal questions arise from these experiences. And it is by their answers, explicit or implicit, that men finally differ from one another; how they react to achievement, to pride, to love, to suffering, to feeling of life and energy, to death . . .

. . . the student on the secular campus works on his religion for himself. Often his previous religious background will have been uncritical, informal, and unsophisticated . . . His grasp of religious concepts like faith, hope, love may well be far less precise and intellectually defensible than it ought to be; his university career will offer him very little formal help in clarifying and criticizing them. It is possible that college life may be for him, then, a period of searing but private examination . . . But the chances are—in most schools and among most students—no such honest and fruitful personal critiques will occur, at least of any lasting depth. Where they do seem to occur, experienced religious men are pleased . . .

What, then, is the place of God in our colleges? The basic human experience of the university is not found man that is a machine, and not merely a temporary one in a technological civilization, are not fostered within the university God is as irrelevant in the universities as in business organization . . . Religion can thrive only in a personal universe religious faith, hope and love are personal responses to a personal God. But how can the immense question of a personal God even be posed and made relevant when fundamental questions about the meaning and limits of personal experience are evaded?

"God is dead . . . What are these churches if they are not the tombs and sepulchers of God?" Nietzsche asked. But much of Western humanism is dead too. Men do not wander under the silent stars, listen to the wind, learn to know themselves, question, "Where am I going? Why am I here?" They leave aside the mysteries of contingency and transiotoriness, for the certainties of research, production, consumption. So that it is nearly possible to say: "Man is dead . . . What are these buildings, these tunnels, these roads, if they are not the tombs and sepulchers of man?"

God, if there is a God, is not dead. He will come back to the colleges, when man comes back.

We Need Old Ones Too

The Florida State Legislature has a definite hand in the welfare of this University. It not only decides how many and what kind of new buildings will be built on the campus, but they may well also decide how long the present buildings will remain here.

DUE TO AN INSUFFICIENCY of funds, at least one of the buildings on campus has no fire alarm system as such, and some others have inadequate systems. The major building of concern is Westcott. Although Westcott contains many students, faculty members, administrators, and a great deal of invaluable records and material, and is basically the center of all of the University's activities, there is no sound fire alarm system in the building.

The need for such a system became especially evident last Tuesday, when parts of the building were filling with smoke. Fire equipment was called out, and parts of the building were evacuated; but many persons in the building, especially the art students on the fourth floor, did not know anything was happening until after it was all over.

IT IS TRUE that there was no actual fire. The smoke was produced by a down-draft in the incinerator. It there had been a fire, though, several lives could have been endangered if not lost because of inadequate equipment.

W. H. Watson, FSU safety coordinator, stated that there is a system in use in Westcott, but "it is certainly not as effective as a regular fire alarm system." Through telephones, the offices are notified of the fire, and they in turn are to notify all persons in their vicinity.

WATSON ALSO SAID that a request has been made to the Legislature for funds to increase the adequacy of the fire alarm system throughout the campus; and that these systems will be installed as soon as the money is allocated for them.

Therefore, once again, we find ourselves depending upon the State Legislature to make a wise decision in determining the safety and welfare of this University and its students, faculty members and administrators. We sincerely hope that the Legislature will not be so engrossed in new buildings that they will neglect this needed safety improvement in our present buildings.

A Wonderful Little Lady

"I paint from the top down. First the sky, then the mountains, then the hills, then the trees, then the houses, then the cattle and then the people."

THESE ARE WORDS from the wonderful old lady we knew as Grandma Moses. Maybe in the brief quoted paragraph above, Grandma Moses got nearer the way the world runs than most of us can ever expect.

We aim for the stars, yes, but we are still some distance away from that goal, and we are further yet from understanding them and whatever they signify. Grandma Moses started "at the top" and painted down to the things that, so far as we are concerned, really make the earth go around . . . the people about us.

HER PAINTING WAS called primitive. That was nothing more than a label. She painted the peaceful life that we all wish for. Call her paintings colorful or imaginative or shallow or whatever your own tastes and sophistication dictate; just remember Grandma Moses as a little old lady who painted for the pure joy she received from it. Her canvases sold from three dollars at one time and later jumped to the $4,000 price range. We doubt she cared about the prices involved.

At the ripe age of 101, Grandma Moses died as peacefully as she painted. Maybe her paintings won't live in posterity; that is for the experts to decide. It is for the public to decide. But her example of how to grow old gracefully; how to grow old and retain balance and humor and a feel for the world about you is more than noteworthy. Whether you liked Grandma's paintings or not, you must admit that she not only was a legend in her lifetime, but a living portrait of much that we like to think of as basically American in a most genuine sense.

The Wrong Connotations

By ALLAN DERMOTT

One of the grave faults of Americans is that they often use big words with the wrong connotations. When I say that, I especially have three words in mind: communism, socialism, and what I call Communism (spelled with a capital C). No two of these words are synonymous. They may overlap in meaning, but this does not mean they can be used interchangeably.

THE WORD COMMUNISM is defined by the Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary as "any system of social organization in which goods are held in common."

Lenin added to this in his The State and Revolution, when he stated that with the coming of communism there will be a "complete withering away of the state." Since, socialism, in practice, is based on government or state ownership (not of everything, of course), communism and socialism can not be synonymous.

THE WORD COMMUNISM, on the other hand, is defined in two steps. 1) Communism is based on the ideology or doctrine of the Communist Party. (I have described this ideology, in part, my five-part series on Communist Ideology, which was run in November. The Party also claims that communism is their ultimate goal.

2) Communism is also based on the economic, social, and foreign-policy programs that the Communist Party follows. Include in dustry, agriculture, social security, housing projects, foreign aid, and so forth. The programs also may vary from each individual Communist country to the next. For example, in one state, collective farming may work better than private farming, and vice versa in another Communist controlled land.

ONE MAY ASK, "Aren't the programs part of the ideology?" In one sense they are, but Communist ideology is usually thought of as the collection of the basic ideas and concepts of the Party. The substance of the programs, on the other hand, is nothing but adjustments for the purpose of best fulfilling the need of the economy, social demands, and foreign policy, that is, the programs are designed to put the ideology into action.

No one—that I know of—confuses communism and Communism, but others do not see socialism interchangeably with Communism. The fallacy is that people think that since the Communist countries are socialistic, communism is socialism and vice versa. But if one were to say Great Britain is socialistic, he would not draw the same conclusion.

WHY IS THIS SO? When one thinks of England, he does not think of a world-conquering country. When one thinks of the Soviet Union or any other Communist country, he soon has many conclusions flying around, about socialism and Communism, before real reasoning can be put into gear. These three terms as synonyms, he or she knows not what he is talking about.

The next time one starts to use any two of should stop to remember their differences in meaning. Maybe other people will then begin to know what he is talking about.

Reflections

Holiday Approach Brings Reflections

By LESLIE POWELL

Now the holidays are fast approaching. There aren't many people left capable of carrying on any conversation other than their plans for the days between December 21 and January 3.

THE PRESIDENT'S TREE has been lit. Downtown has, of course, had it's tomato catsup and powder blue Christmas trees tied on lampposts for weeks. And my own personal favorite sign of Christmas coming on the local scene . . . the light strung on the front of Westcott. It makes it look like there might be a festive feeling in the vicinity.

THROUGHOUT LONGMIRE Building festive decorations are the order of the day. At the rate we've gone this year, we'll need a door-judging committee next year complete with expense paid trips to Timbuctu, Arizona, and other prizes.

Miss Adams has done it again in her first floor lounge. Every year she somehow manages to have a beautiful tree and plenty of Christmas music. This year it's maybe even better than before plus having done some very nice things to the great mantel shelf and the large, open fireplace. I don't know for sure who all worked with Miss Adams but whoever they were they have done Longmire proud.

THE LONGMIRE LOUNGE opened Tuesday afternoon to the melodies of Yuletide songs and the gentle clatter of cups and tongues.

For me the opening was interesting in that many of the students had just arrived back from a luncheon with Florida's Governor, Farris Bryant. I am glad to see that a busy man, especially the chief executive of this state took the time to talk to a group of students . . . not BMOC students, but the garden variety for the most part. I've long thought that one thing we need most at FSU is more opportunity for students to at least meet and know our administrative figures by sight. It would go a long way toward dissipating the unrest and, sometimes, unhappiness at FSU. That policy would be like a year-round Christmas gift, for an entire campus. Timely baubles are fine, but we need a more substantial goodwill.

The World Of Miriam V.

By ROBERT SANCHEZ

MIRIAM V. is a bright, alert woman. She is a graduate of Florida State College for Women and has a Master's Degree from the University of Florida. In 1946, Miriam V. became ill and entered the Florida State Hospital at Chattahootchee. She is still there.

FOR THE LAST nine years she has not had a visitor. Only occasionally does she receive as much as a post card. Usually there is no interruption in her monotonous routine.

THE WORLD OF Miriam V. and 1500 other women in the White Female Ward, housed in an ancient building long termed inadequate. Her domain is a bed, scarcely a foot from the beds on either side, and a locker for her few belongings. Her routine consists of attending three meals a day, seven days a week, 52 weeks a year, year in and year out. In warm weather she may watch television. But generally the same monotonous routine prevails, and probably will until Miriam V. dies, for it is unlikely that she will ever be discharged as cured.

IT WOULD BE ASKING too much of the half-dozen or so trained psychiatrists at the hospital to expect positive treatment or personal attention for the 9000 patients there, especially on the meager budget allotted the institution. Even if cure were affected, the law requires that someone be willing to take custody of Miriam. Not uncommonly, out of a misguided sense of shame or for more selfish reasons, relatives are unwilling to do so. Thus Miriam exists, without hope. She is serving a life sentence in a terrible isolation. Her crime was being ill. But she was also guilty of the misfortune of living in the United States: being a non-affluent citizen in a so-called free society. Had Miriam been wealthy and able to afford the care which medical science knows how to offer, she would probably be a healthy, happy citizen today.

Not being wealthy, however, she had to depend upon the provisions of society for the mentally ill. And society has responded with a false economy. Surely it would be wiser financially to spend two dollars a day, the current expenditure, and cure the patient than to spend the accumulated amount and have them remain institutionalized for life in an atmosphere which would destroy the mental adjustment of even the sanest citizen. Even ignoring the obvious financial arguments, surely there is a moral obligation of the society which drives people to mad ness to care for those whom it drives.

THE FAULT for the predicament of Miriam V. and those like her certainly does not lie with the dedicated and underpaid staff at Chattahootchee. It would be difficult to find a more sincere and devoted group of people anywhere. The fault lies with those makers of the social lag, the conservative ruling clique of Florida, who insist upon the minimum effort in every field of social service. Thus, Miriam V. lies buried in a living hell, a sacrifice to the politics of a no-party state.

There may be some hope, however. Newspaper investigations have brought some odious publicity to Florida's mental health program. A legislative investigation has been underway, and has come up with some recommendations. The recommendations will cost money to put into effect, but surely the only way out will try to water down or ignore the program. That is when an aroused public opinion should demand action. It is public apathy which permits evil situations to develop. It is public conscience which will cure them, if your conscience needs a boost, visit Chattahootchee sometime.

Student Opinion Asked On Series

The Artist Series is due for some changes in the near future, but Director of Special Events Kay Vernon is not exactly sure what they will be. The effects of the trimester switch are extending into this realm, as they have seeped into every area of the university.

At present, students and administrators working on the Series realize that many students never have the opportunity to appreciate the visiting artists, due to heavy schedules. The Series presentations are educational in themselves, as are many of the guest lectures appearing on campus, but when there are papers to be written and texts to be read, outside educational sources must be foregone.

This is regrettable indeed. Educators speak about the values of a well-rounded education and the artist series are selected in keeping with this philosophy. Yet only a small percentage of the student body is able to attend these events.

The situation as it exists now was nothing compared to tight schedules which will be mandatory under the new plan. Compressing the same material into shorter time will require the student to buckle his academic belt and leave but little room for outside activity—even if this activity is educational in nature.

This may mean one thing. Artist Series productions will have to be reduced along with other university activities . . .

But this is not the only problem that the Artists Series is facing Mrs. Vernon and the Artist Series Committee are mulling over the possibilities of changing the starting time from 8:15 p.m. until 8:30 p.m.

This would be done to avoid conflicts with the great multitude of night classes which the university has scheduled to get more use of classroom space.

Late comers to the production have caused such a disturbance in crawling over people getting to their seats that they are now being stopped at the door until the first intermission.

Moving the production opening would help solve both problems.

Mrs. Vernon, however, does not want to make the change without hearing what the students feel on the matter. Nor does she want to suggest any trimester changes until the rank-and-file student has his say.

"I think the calendar committee would like to conform with the student body in deciding which would be the better time."

"I do think that it will be important for students to keep abreast of their subjects under the trimester system. It's going to be necessary for students to evaluate their extracurricular activities carefully. It will be up to each student to weigh the Artist Series against intramurals or the value of a theatre production against campus sing. I would like to know what students feel about Artist Series."

Students would be free to express their opinions on this issue. Too seldom are students consulted on services designed for them. They should take advantage of the opportunity.

Senator Asks Dorm Union

By JOSEPH FERRARO
Senator, West Hall

Considering the problems that the male residence halls have had in the same with elections and elections procedures, Men's Senate, in its last meeting, formed a committee to study the problems connected with bringing the male residence halls under the student body statutes.

THE MALE RESIDENCE halls receive all the benefits of Student Government, but yet when a conflict arose, as at the beginning of the semester concerning a contested election, the Honor Court could render only an advisory decision due to the lack of jurisdiction over the men's living quarters.

This is not a new problem, but in the past the necessity for bringing male dorms under the Student Body Statutes has not been so great. Now, considering the growth of the campus and the student population, it is important that all branches of student government be able to work together in a tightly knit, single organization.

EACH MALE DORM has two senators representing it in the Student Senate. This gives them a noticeable voice in all that senate does. The money they receive to carry on their social activities comes from an allocation made by Student Government.

To be included under the Student Body Statutes would not destroy the right of the dorm governments to govern themselves. On the contrary, it would greatly increase their effectiveness and efficiency by giving them a firm base on which to work and build.

I realize, of course, that there are many views from which the committee that has been set up must study the question. However, I am sure that once the complications have been smoothed out, the men's residence halls will find it to be beneficial to be included under the Student Body Statutes.

Christmas In Mexico

By SAMUEL SALDIVAR

EDITORS NOTE: Mr. Saldivar is an international student from Mexico. He writes that he "already enjoying the Christmas Celebration in this country," and he feels that it would be of interest to American students to have an idea of how Christmas is celebrated in his country.

Christmas In Mexico is a gay season. Mexico, as other countries, has its own particular ways and traditions of celebrating the birth of Christ.

THE CHRISTMAS SEASON in Mexico runs through about the tenth of December until the sixth of January. One of the first signs of Christmas to appear during about the beginning of the holiday season is the coming of the Mexican Indians from their villages to the cities bringing their burros laden with clay pots for piñatas, and skillfully done figures of the men, woman and animals associated with the nativity. Street markets and sidewalk shops are flooded with such colorful clay figures in great variety.

In cities, Japanese lanterns appear at night, hanging in the doors and windows of shops and homes. Now the Christmas atmosphere is floating in the air.

AT THIS TIME most families have set up creches using the Indian made nativity figures to inspiring and picturesque effect. I remember how much I have enjoyed going from home to home in our neighborhood observing them. Often the creches seem almost real. By moonlight one could take me to the very fields of Bethlehem; the manager of the Christ Child's birth. In poor homes nativity scenes done in spanish moss and humbly lit with a candle in a dark corner seemed more significant than Christmas trees with hundreds of flashing lights, red brick chimneys and other mechanical devices.

Posadas time marks the beginning of the festivities. These begin the traditional pre-Christmas parties in Mexico. Posadas consist of party goers going from home to home in procession, bearing lighted candles and singing traditional songs. And the Posadas. The songs of the Posadas dramatize the story of Joseph and Mary seeking lodging for the night. The householders along the way respond like the innkeeper of ancient Judea. At last, all rooms is taken. The group moves on until finally they reach the home of the woman where the party begins. Formerly Posadas were for the enjoyment of the children, but now they have become fun for older persons to make new acquaintances and renew old ones.

THESE CHRISTMAS PARTIES are highlighted by the breaking of the piñata, a beautifully decorated clay pot. They may take the form of birds, clowns, cows or other shapes. It is filled with candy and fruit. The piñata is suspended in a way "that allows the manipulator to move it as he wishes. Many party goers are blindfolded, and furnishing many laugh filled moments, try to break the piñata with a stick after being spun around until he is dizzy. The crepe paper attached to the piñata allows the manipulator to lead each participant by bringing the piñata near enough that he can hear the rattle of the paper. Eventually someone does break the piñata and everyone rushes to gather the candy and fruit that spills out. The lucky one to break the piñata receives a prize. . . sometimes a doll for a girl, or for he also gets half the pot square on the head! Then the bole follows, which is more candy and fruit for everyone.

While Santa is popular in the cities of Mexico, Saint Nicolas and Quetzalcoatl are also popular Christmas characters. All three bring gifts but Santa is the favorite. The Aztec Indian hero, Quetzalcoatl, generally takes the place of Santa in the villages south of Mexico City.

CHRISTMAS EVE finds hardly anyone going to bed. Parties and dances last until sunrise. Christmas day is filled with more parties and family gatherings.

Foods typical to Christmas day in Mexico are mole, a meat dish with sauce; guajolote (turkey), tamales, enchiladas tacos, and of course a traditional salad containing orange, peanuts, lemons, beets, almonds, lettuce, apples and other fruit.

NEW YEAR'S EVE does not end the gay season. Epiphany, on January 6, is the occasion of more piñatas and presents for the children. Epiphany celebrates the day on which the Kings return. Children put their shoes outside the door at bedtime so that the kings will put presents in them.

The season ends then with the creches being packed away and everyone looking forward to more piñatas and posadas at the next Christmas season.

Emily Post Vs. Humming

By BONNIE FREEDMAN

It became painfully evident with the power failure the other day . . . we are dependent upon the Hum.

EIGHT O'CLOCK CLASSES Wednesday were filled with empty faces; that is, absent faces: that is, empty desks and absent people. That is, the condition was not the usual.

Anyway, it appears that the low attendance was caused in part by the fact that everything was too quiet. The regular hum of alarm clocks was hushed, the sleepers droned on.

ON NORMAL DAYS, everything hums. In the dorm, the elevator hums, the wind-conditioners hum, the address system hums. The house managers hum.

I even have a humming roommate. Sometimes I say, "Would you solve this equation for unique roots by varying the parameter, a?" and she merely substitute a couple of good approximations?"

"HUM," SHE SAYS.

Heading across campus, I hear continuous hums. There is the hum of the motor in the traffic "Hum. Hum. Screech. Hum."

There is the humming of the wild life. "Hum. Buzz. Whirl. Hum." There is the humming of the water sprinkler Continuous humming.

IN SPITE OF EMILY Post's rules of vocal conduct, one of which is "Thou Shalt Not Hum" Except in Church, people hum. The cafeteria hums. The Post Office hums. And the buildings hum.

There is one saving force: the Home Economic building does not hum—it jingles!

SG Appointments

Student Body President Bobby Byrd announced the appointment of two new presidential assistants.

Duncea Moore will serve as assistant to the campus vice secretary, Doug Shank..

The other newly appointed assistant, Johnny Herring, will handle relations for the Governor's office in conjunction with President Byrd and Secretary of Public Relations Bill Greawood.

Moore served last year as secretary of student welfare.

Herring, a graduate, earlier was a financial advisor to last year's student body president.

Meteorologist Hess Studies Martian Cloud Circulation

Mars, according to Dr. Seymour L. Hess, Florida State University Meteorology Department Head, has an atmospheric circulation very similar to that of the earth but apparently much simpler.

The red planet, suddenly brought close at hand by space age technology, should soon be providing a guide to the understanding of a puzzling old problem on earth, the complicated circulation of the atmosphere.

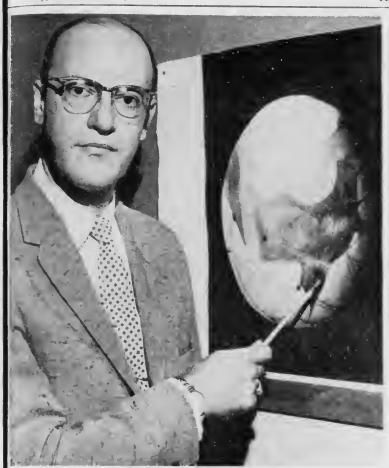
CLOUD STUDY

The only way this circulation can be gauged from the earth, however, is by a study of the Martian clouds, which are infrequent and shortlived. A new opportunity for study is opened, however, by instrument-bearing space vehicles.

Dr. Hess, who has been studying the planet Mars and its atmosphere for 13 years is one of three scientists involved in FSU's new research program in space biosciences for which the National Aeronautics and Space Administration has provided an initial grant of $780,000.

The FSU scientist describes some of the problems of "Mars as an Astrological Objective" in a chapter in Vol. 3 of Advances in Space Science and Technology, edited by Frederick I. Ordway III and just published by Academic Press. In this book and in an interview Dr. Hess, who has served as a consultant to NASA on Mariner B (the Mars fly-by!, said. The first fly-by effort is now scheduled to be made late in 1964. Whether instrumented packages can be placed on Mars at that time is "problematical," he added. If not, another try cannot be made until 1966, when Mars is again within striking distance for a brief time."

INSTRUMENT PACKAGES



It should be possible within a few years, he said, to drop instrumented packages. With these it will be possible to gather synchronized data on pressure, temperature, wind speed and wind direction.

Since a reconnaissance by satellite ultimately will be made of the planet for other purposes, he said, it will be possible with a minimum of additional effort to record these atmospheric conditions. This is surely one of the more important tasks to be assigned to space probes when they become operational," he said.

Mars "has certain intriguing resemblances to the earth. The chief of which is the near equality of the two axial rotation periods," he said, "bodies with the same rotation period have marked similarities in atmospheric circulation.

"The differences are largely in the direction of making the Mars system more simple. For example there are indications that the solid surface has less relief than on Earth, there are no oceans, and the lesser frequency of clouds means that incoming and outgoing radiation should be more regular in time than on Earth.

Indeed, the Martian general circulation ought to be a less complex version of the terrestrial situation and the hope exists that a good understanding of the Mars circulation is attainable and that this can be helpful in elucidating the more complex terrestrial problem."

OCEANLESS, MOUNTAINLESS MARS, WHICH HAS ABOUT THE SAME ROTATION PERIOD AS the earth, may soon provide a kind of model for a study of the more complicated atmospheric circulation of the earth. Dr. Seymour Hess, Florida State University meteorologist who also is one of three scientists participating in a new space biosciences program supported by a grant from National Aeronautics and Space Administration, says it should be possible within a few years to drop instrumentated packages on Mars which will pick up data on pressure, temperature, wind speed and direction, providing a picture of the Mars atmosphere not now available. A student of the Mars atmosphere for 13 years, Hess here is shown with drawing of the planet.

Career Cues:

"This age of specialization opens special opportunities for the well-rounded man!"

Robert Saudek, President
Robert Saudek Associates, Inc.

"The more specialists society creates to cope with its complexities, the easier it can be for a non-specialist to achieve success.

If that seems paradoxical, look at it this way: the more men who go out for specific positions on the ball club, the more chance you have to wind up as manager!

Today's world — in government, business, the arts, even science — needs the well-rounded man. He's the man who can see the entire picture...the man who can draw on a broad background of knowledge, evaluate the problem, then assign the details to specialists.

The world of entertainment may seem somewhat special, but it's a case in point. These days, it demands more of its people than ever before. Today's musical comedy score is often as sophisticated as grand opera. Drama draws heavily on psychology and history. Television productions are concerned with nuclear science and political science. If you've ever watched 'Omnibus' you may have seen how our productions have run the gamut of a wide range of man's interests.

So I suggest to you that even though you may concentrate on one special field of interest, keep your viewpoint broad. Keep your college curriculum as diversified as possible. Attend lectures and concerts, the theatres and museums. Above all, read and read, and listen and listen! But pay scant heed to the oracle who says there's no route to the top but that of specialization. I don't believe it!"

14 Demo's Return From Miami Meet

Fourteen Florida State University students attended the National Young Democrats Convention in the Deauville Hotel in Miami this past weekend.

Approximately 1,500 voting delegates from the entire nation were present.

Representing FSU as official delegates were Betty Gunn and Bob Barber. They were part of a quota of 26 delegates attending officially from Florida.

President John F. Kennedy and many U.S. and state congressmen and cabinet members were among the notables present. James Quigley, assistant secretary of health, education and welfare, was permanent chairman for the convention.

Main speaker was Ed Bailey, chairman of the National Democratic Party. Democratic Party vice chairman Mrs. Margaret Price was present throughout the convention.

The convention was held in Miami Beach, delegate Miss Gunn reported, so that national officials in attendance might investigate the possibility of holding the National Democratic Convention there in 1964.

Other FSU students attending the convention were: Nancy Arnold, Jane Hoakland, Gail Williams, Bob Delack, Mary Jo Gerenius, Linda Lehman, Ricki Rayner, Mary Appelberg, Ross McVoy, Ann Kenly, Ann Gray and Henry Rollins.

Chinese Talk To Be Given

"Chinese Characters and Calligraphy" will be the subject of a demonstration-lecture by Dr. and Mrs. George Lensen of the Florida State University faculty, in the University Gallery, Monday.

At the lecture, which will begin at 8 p.m., Dr. Lensen will trace the development of Chinese characters from the early pictogram to its present form. Mrs. Lensen will demonstrate with oriental brush and ink how the characters are written by the master calligraphers.

Dr. Lensen is director of the Asian Studies program and is the author of several books dealing with Japan and the Far East. Mrs. Lensen teaches courses in Chinese at FSU.

The Japanese calligraphy exhibition and sculpture of Ralph Hurst which has been on display this month will remain in the University Gallery until Dec. 20.

Cagers Take On Vols

By BILL CHEEK
Flambeau Sports Editor

The Florida State Semi-oles will invade the Ten-essee Armory field house tomorrow night at 8 p.m. (EST) to play the Univer-y of Tennessee.

The Vols have lost their first games on the road. North olina State and South Caro-lina both defeated the Volun-teers.

This is the first home game for the Tennes-see team. The Vols beat FSU last year in an overtime 79-68.

Last year the Tennesseans finished with a 10-14 overall season record. The University of Tennessee turned up a 4-10 conference record which is the poorest Southeastern Conference play in Vols modern history.

Bill Cheek

The Volunteers use a single post offense in combination with a fast-break style offense.

The type defense is uncertain as the Vols usually use a zone type defense; they may switch to a man-to-man type for the Seminole Shuffle.

Two Tennessee stars, Dick Fisher and Eddie Test, were caught up on the nation-wide investigating of point shaving last spring and are no longer in school. There is no way to tell how much the point shaving affected the Vols' seasonal record.

Coach John Sines of Tennessee said these scandals which rocked the University earlier this year will make his 1961-62 basketball team a tighter unit but won't compensate for a lack of outstanding talent.

The Volunteers will rely on Orbie Bowling of Sandy Hook, Ky., 6-10, the tallest man ever to play for Tennessee. John Martin is the only regular returning to the team. Martin, a 6-3 senior from Watseka, Ill., will start as a forward.

Other probable starters will be Phil Brintnall, 6-3 forward, from Bryson City, North Carolina; Jerry Parker, 6-2 guard, from Campbellsville, Ky.; J. H. Dyer, 6-0 guard, from Knoxville, Tennessee.

"Things don't look so good," said Coach John Sines of Tennessee, "from a standpoint of experience, but sometimes a young eager team can come along and provide a few surprises.

"Our biggest concern is getting Orb Bowling some help in rebounding, and developing some scoring punch in the front line," stated the Coach.

Coach Bud Kennedy stated that the team would be facing a "real battle from a veteran team." "We will have to play," said Kennedy, "as well as in any game we have played this year."

The Seminoles played the Clemson Tigers last night in Tully Gymnasium.

The Tigers have won three out of five of the Seminole encounters. Clemson now has a 2-2 record with wins from VMI and Virginia. Top-ranked Duke and North Carolina both downed the Tigers.

Assistant Coach High Durham stresses the point, "We have been going against the strongest teams in the nation and the South, and have been able to out-rebound them even though we have been out sized two-three inches."

Clemson used a three out--two in type double post rotating offense.

The Clemson line up was Mahaffey, Gary Burnisky, Don Mahaffay, Jim Brennan and Mike Bohonak

The results of the game are not available as the game was played after our press deadline.

Mat Men Enter Meet

The 1961-62 Florida State University Wrestling Club begins action this week in the Annual Jay-cee Individual - Inter - collegiate Wrestling Tournament to be held in Chattanooga, Tennessee, this weekend.

"We are honored to have been invited to compete in this annual event. Oklahoma and Oklahoma State are potential national champions, and will be expecting to rate high on the score. We hope to gain a great amount of experience, competing against the biggest and toughest of the men in wrestling.

"This tournament is known to provide a high calibre of competition from schools with established wrestling programs and should prove to be a very valuable experience for the team."

Fourteen boys will be representing Florida State in Chattanooga. The following nine will be entered as a team entry to vie for the team championship: Andy Otyan (123 pounds) Errol Greene (130 pounds) Joe Wilder (137 pounds) Steve Baum (147 pounds) Scott Burn (157 pounds) Ron Yersak (167 pounds) Paul Russak (177 pounds) Gary Neal (191 pounds) and Tom Cook (147 pounds) in the unlimited divisions. Jim Russell (137 pounds) John Hennigson (147 pounds) John McCotter (157 pounds) Virgil Scott (167 pounds) and Joe Baker (177 pounds) will be entered independent to vie for individual honors. Only six of the fourteen are returning members of the 1961 Florida AAU Championship team.

Travel arrangements have been made with the basketball team to travel with them and to compete against the same school in wrestling prior to the basketball games. The first dual meet of this nature is scheduled for January 31 with Alabama.

Seminole Signs Tribe Contract

For the first time in Florida State University's history, a "full blooded" Seminole Indian will wear the Garnet and Gold colors for FSU next year.

Don James of the football coaching staff has announced the signing of Harry Billie to a football grant-in-aid.

The 5-11, 180 pound Seminole Indian attended high school at Naples High School in Naples, Florida.

He played football only during his senior year in high school. He became famous rapidly, however, because the first two times Billie ran the ball he went for touchdowns. Unfortunately, these runs were nullified by penalties.

Billie also excels in basketball where he received All-State acclaim last year. In addition to this, he is an outstanding baseball player, being sought after by several major league teams.

Coach James says, "Billie shows good running ability and balance."

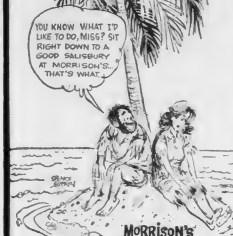
Garnet And Gold Swimming Meet To Be Held Tonight

By SHIRLEY HARDISON

The annual Garnet and Gold swimming meet will be held tonight in Montgomery Gym, at 8 p.m. The varsity team, fresh from capturing the Southern AAU Championship, will be out to defeat the freshmen in intra-squad battle.

Unable to rely upon experience, the freshmen are competing against such standouts as Paul Thompson, Tom Brandley, Risto Pyykko, and teammates, who set five pool records at Tulane last Saturday.



According to Coach Bim Stults the meet is "always interesting to watch. We try to put the right boys in each event, so that we can gain the best experience possible for him." Anticipating a good showing from the freshmen, coach Stults feels that the meet offers experience for both teams, especially so for the freshmen since they have had not meets to date.

The team schedule is one of the best in several years. The first meet will be January 10 in Montgomery Gym. The freshmen will compete at 7, while the varsity's meet is at 8 p.m. Meeting such teams as the University of the South, Ohio, Miami, Florida and Tulane, the varsity team hopes to perfect the 5-1 records of 1960-61 in dual competition.

The Garnet team is composed of the varsity team members, while the freshmen make up the Gold squad. Members of the Garnet team are as follows: 100 yard freestyle, Smith, Roles, and Searcy; 200 yard backstroke Davis and Acosta (first heat) and Richardson, Pepper and Langston (second heat); 400 yard freestyle, Dahl and Bissland. 200 yard breaststroke Lawrence and LaSanta (first heat) and Richardson, Gonzalve, Descombs (second heat); 400 yard freestyle relay, Searcy, Smith, Brandley, and Thompson compose the first team and Ray, Parks, Brown and Mew the second team. In the 400 yard medley relay Asocta, LaSanta, Combes and Searcy swim against teammates Davis, Lawrence, Pyykko, and Smith; 200 yard freestyle Dahl and Roles (first heat) and Brandley and Bissland (second heat), 50 yard freestyle, Parks, Ray, and Brown. 200 yard individual medley, Pyykko, Davis, Mew and Lawrence; Diving, Owen, Montgomery, Fix, and Hall; 200 yard butterfly, Pyykko, Thompson and Brandley (first heat) and Combs, Dewait, and Brown (second heat), 100 yard freestyle, Paks, Mew and Pvendeergast (first heat) and Thompson and Bransford (second heat).

The Gold team, composed of the freshmen squad, are as follows: 100 yard freestyle, Tarvle and Cohen; 200 yard backstroke Mullally and Kowals (first heat) and Casper and Sympson (second heat); 400 yard freestyle, Tubbs, and Durocher 200 yard breaststroke Henderson, Kingler and Foster (first heat) and Davis, Greene and Busse (second heat); 400 yard freestyle relay the first team of Tandy, Cohen, Dayton, and Wannenberg compete with teammates Gallagher, Quayle, Paugh and Mullally. In the 400 yard medley relay the Gold teams are composed of Mullally, Krupler, Wannenberg and Tandy, Casper, Henderson, Roth and Quayle. In the first heat of the 200 yard freestyle will be Dayton and Tubbs, the second will be Cohen and Durocher Swimming the 50 yard freestyle will be Gallagher and Paugh while Kowals and Greene will be swimming the 200 yard individual medley Flavin and Allen will be the freshmen divers. The 200 butterfly entrants are Wannenberg and Benson in the first heat and Durocher and Roth will be in the second heat. Entering the first heat of the 100 yard freestyle will be Quayle Paugh and Tubbs while Dayton and Gallagher will compete in the second heat.

Jongeleurs Act Old Yule Play

The Nativity and The Second Shepherds' Play will be presented by Les Jongleurs, Florida State University's dramatic honorary, Monday and Tuesday evenings in the Conradi Theatre.

The performances, which will begin at 8 p.m., are free and open to the public.

MEDIEVAL PLAY

The Nativity is a medieval play from the York Cycle about the birth of Christ. A modern interpretation is given to the classic.

The cast includes narrator, Lorraine Nelson; Virgin Mary, Sally Moure; Joseph, Mary Byrd; the angel Gabriel, Reville Slayden; Herod, Pal Howard; Herod's son, Debbie Patterson; Herod's adviser, Linda Markgraff; the shepherds, Ruth Trammell, and Karen Goldworthy; wise men, Janine Chapman, Betty McConnell and Jackie Turner, and the guard, Abbie Mualem.

Richard Fallon is director of The Nativity and Jimmy Rayfield is assistant director.

WAKEFIELD-TOWNLEY CYCLE

The Second Shepards' Play is from the Wakefield-Townley cycle. Harlan Shaw is the director.

The cast includes Coll, Ken Richart; Gib, Stanley DeHart; Daw, Carl Stewart; Mac, Sam Baker; Jill, Lorraine Nelson, the angel, Reville Slayden, and Mary, Sally Moure.

This medieval play is a mixture of the religious and secular of that period.

Bill Valle designed the scenes for both The Nativity and The Second Shepherds' Play.

The Second Shepherds' Play so named because there was another shepherds' play being presented at the same time in England. The play shows the tendency of Medieval playwrights to stage plays with both secular and religious portions in order to satisfy the churchmen as well as the common folks.

One of the comic scenes includes three of the shepherds singing a Christmas Carol—about Adam.

Bill Valle designed the scenes for both The Nativity and The Second Shepards' Play.

TWO CHRISTMAS PLAYS OF 14TH AND 15TH CENTURY ENGLAND, "THE YORK NATIVITY" and "The Second Shepherd's Play," will be presented Monday and Tuesday, Dec. 18 and 19 at 8 p.m. in Conradi Theatre. Here members of Les Jongleurs, Florida State University dramatic honorary which is presenting the plays rehearse a scene from "The Second Shepherd's Play." Senate Acts . . .

Flambeau should never have printed the names of the students.

Kuttler paralleled the present action to a person seeing a railroad warning at the curve of a highway; normally such stress is not made. He said the Senate should have given more warning that such a rule would be enforced.

He said the Who's Who committee was acting on precedent, which admittedly was illegal. The men's vice president said a company once fired an employee for breaking a rule which was never enforced: the union ruled that the company should have posted a warning and required that the employee be rehired.

The resolution passed 25 to 11 with one abstention.

EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

Executive appointments were approved by the Student Senate Wednesday afternoon to eliminate a bill requiring the Student Body President to submit the names.

Appointments included the following: Attorney General Marion Clark, Secretary of Elections Nancie Sill, Secretary of Finance Wayne Edwards, Secretary of State Marianna Girtman, Secretary of Welfare Tom Schultz, Secretary of Student Events Ivylyn Frazier, Secretary of Public Relations Bill Greenwood, Secretary of Intercollegiate Affairs Scatlett Pogue, Secretary of Campus Communications Dorie Chazal, Secretary of Campus Union Doug Shank, and presidential assistants Bill Baker, Duncan Moore and Buddy Holley.

All but one of the appointments was confirmed without comment. The lone exception was Secretary of Elections Nancie Sill, whose appointment was confirmed over the objections of Sen. Gerry Dobson.

Controversy had been antiticipated over the appointment of Ivylyn Frazier, secretary of student events, who actung in that capacity had been involved in the Who's Who controversy. However, there was no comment on the Senate floor concerning her appointment.

The secretary of elections issued election certificates to candidates who had not submitted financial statements, Sen. Dobson said.

He also asked why the names of seniors and graduates were separated on the Who's Who ballot. Sen. Dobson also implicated Miss Sill with poorly-run Summer Government and the fall election foul-up.

Several senators spoke in her behalf. Sen. Joedy Smith pointed out that the Who's Who names were submitted so separate sheets of paper and the committee made an arbitrary decision to separate them on the ballots. Myra Champion, the women's vice president, said the head of the national testing program also Miss Sill of causing the fall up. She also did not have anything to do with Summer Government, a senator added

Inn At Bethlehem Still Has No Room

There's still no room at the Inn in Bethlehem where the first Christmas took place, according to Mrs. Olive Cross of the Florida State University faculty who will speak at the English Coffee Hour today.

"In fact, there is now no inn in Bethlehem," said Mrs. Cross, assistant professor of English who taught for two years in Damascus and spent Christmas in Bethlehem in 1959. "There was a little Arab hostel where I stayed," she said, adding, "it has since been closed down and two or three small places rent rooms."

Most of the tourists stay in the big hotels in Jerusalem, according to Mrs. Cross who will speak on "Christmas in Bethlehem" at the Coffee Hour in the Westminster House.

The lecture, which is open to the public, will be illustrated by color slides of Bethlehem, Jerusalem, Jericho, Bethany, the Dead Sea and other well-known Biblical places.

Christmas in Bethlehem has not yet become commercialized, according to Mrs. Cross, and the decorations are simply paper stars hoisted to the top of the one cedar tree in the town square.

"Over the manger where the Christ Child was laid," said Mrs. Cross, "there now stands the famous Fifth Century Justase Church, called Church of the Nativity. The lowest floor of the Church was once the Holy Stable and there a large silver star on the floor marks the spot where the people of the area believe the Child was born. On Christmas, the Archbishop of Jerusalem holds two services, one at high noon Christmas eve and a midnight mass. In this church began the custom of the midnight mass to celebrate the Holy birth.

Villagers from little towns all over Jordan come to watch the great procession wind through the town and into the Church. Headed by a military band of Jordanian soldiers, followed by a hundred robed choir boys, priests, and finally the Patriarch, the marchers all duck low to go through the door of the ancient stone Church, cut low to keep out camels and horses."

Military Group Has Initiation

New members of Company M-6 of The National Society of Pershing Rifles will be initiated Tuesday evening.

This pledge class is the largest group of men ever to be initiated since the founding of the company in 1954. Within the past nine weeks the original pledge class of sixty-five men has been trimmed down to forty-two men by the pledgemaster, Second Lt. George D. Shea, and the Operations and Training officer, Second Lt. Paul M. Roberts.

The successful candidates will pledge themselves to maintain the highest standards in their military and civilian lives, and to seek inspiration in the exemplary standards of their founder, General of the Armies, John J. Pershing.

In addition to the many qualifications and written examinations, the pledges were subjected to a week of hazing by the active members. Many activities occurred during the week and a rigorous inspection was held. The events included a square meal (a type of West Point hazing designed to develop discipline) a showing of the film Attack in the Pacific, to commemorate the attack on Pearl Harbor; standing a tour at formal guard duty at each of the women's dormitories; and a military field maneuver with the pledge class combatting the combined forces of the active members and members of Scabbard and Blade.

INITIATES

The men being initiated include: J. S. Becker, P. F. Fagan, A. R. Carcausa, J. P. Carroll, D. R. Combs, A. T. Davis, R. V. Dean, T. S. Duke, W. M. Durham, R. J. Erickson, R. F. Federspiel, M. D. Group Attempts To Nullify SG Act

A petition is being circulated by a group of students to nullify the "letter writing" resolution passed by the Student Senate last week.

The "letter writing resolution would prompt National Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges to list the names of two Florida State University students in their Who's Who list. The two students, Student Body President Bruce Byrd and Senior Class President Jack Ascherl, were picked on the list although they did not have the minimum 2.5 grade average.

Byrd, President of the Senate Evan Assenderp, and Dean of Students R. R. Oglesby were asked to write letters to the Who's Who officials requesting the removal of the names.

The petition faction felt that the two seniors met the most important of criteria set forth by the campus nominating committee as "the students' scholarship, their participation and leadership in academic and extracurricular activities, their citizenship and service to the school, and the promise of future usefulness."

The petition stated that National Who's Who does not require any grade average. Others, however, have pointed out that Who's Who says that scholarship is one of the most important characteristics which nominees should have.

The Honor Court did not state that these names should be taken off the list although they did rule that the names were illegally placed on the ballot by the nominating committee.

BEST INTEREST

However, the Honor Court said it believed "Though the action was illegal, it had been done in the best interests of the students and no attempt was made to deliberately disregard or defy the rules."

The petition faction also feels that the "letter writing" resolution passed by the Senate does not legally bind these letters to be written. Considering this, there is also the question whether or not the Senate had the authority to either remove or leave the names of the two students on the list, the group said.

"These students have given outstanding service to Florida State University and have character beyond question," the petition stated.

If Who's Who would be a farce if these two names did not appear," it stated.

The petition base stated that the undersigned requested that the Dean of Students not send a letter to Who's Who and that the undersigned confirmed the selection of the two students by the committee and the Senior Class.

The name of Dr. Oglesby would be the only name acknowledged.

Who's Who officials told Ben Sharp, Flambeau editor, in a recent telephone call.

Dr. Oglesby stated that he would follow the wishes of the students in regard to the matter, although he had not been officially notified of the Honor Court ruling.

Sen Joedy Smith, a member of the petition faction, commented that the student body seems to want to leave the names on the list.

Three Religious Leaders To Help On REW Events

Three prominent religious leaders will come to Florida State University for the annual Religious Emphasis week in February.

"The Search for Value" will be the central theme of the week to be Feb. 18 to 21.

Dr. George Buttrick, preacher to the university, Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass.; Dr. Douglas Steere, professor of philosophy at Haverford College, Haverford, Penn.; and Mrs. Catherine Marshall (LeSourd), widow of the late Dr. Peter Marshall, chaplain of the U. S. Senate; will speak at convocations, lectures, luncheons, panel discussions and breakfasts during the week.

Dr. Buttrick was head of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church in New York for 27 years before he went to Harvard. He was the chief editor of the 12 volume commentary called The Interpreter's Bible.

Dr. Steere is a Quaker and will be the Harry Emerson Fosdick Visiting Professor at Union Theological Seminary in New York City.

Mrs. Marshall (LeSourd) is the author of A Man Called Peter, a biography of her life with Peter Marshall.

STEERING COMMITTEE

Plans for the week are being made by a steering committee and a general committee.

Jan Dougherty is student chairman of the steering committee and Dr. Robert Lawton, faculty chairman. Other members of the steering committee are Chaplain John Carey, Dr. Grover Rogers, Dr. Raymond Schultz, Reverend Roger Kornbauer, Ken van Assenderp, Susie Workuser and Jim Fredericks.

Members of the general committee are; Debbie Ridkets, breakfasts; Merry Morehouse, panel discussions; Sandy Asher, convocations; Walter Richards, mikes and props; Linda Stearns,

Christmas Trees: A Tale Of College Holiday Spirits

By MARY ELLEN HARRIS
Flambeau Feature Editor

Christmas trees, like Santa Claus and reindeer and mistletoe, are usually considered to be the holiday symbols of Christmas. They make their annual appearance anytime between the last of the third week of December and Christmas Day and disintegrate into trash piles and paper packing around the tent of January.

Most Christmas trees are of the traditional sort and inhabit people's homes and fraternity and sorority houses and libraries and public buildings and offices and hospitals. They serve as the focal point for much of the holiday festivity.

On the Florida State University campus, however, a Christmas tree often takes unusual form. For example, in the news bureau in Westcott, a eucalyptus-like tree constructed from newspaper graces one of the desks. Its "branches" are adorned with assorted bits of red and green construction paper interspersed with angels and bells and snowflakes of the same material.

According to Toni DiCarlo, student assistant in the news bureau, the tree was made from a "Tallahassee Democrat and the combined efforts" of the people in the bureau with some added inspiration. The decision to make such a tree was influenced by a lack of trees and the Miss DiCarlo.

Another unusual Christmas tree is the annual "do-it-yourself" tree in the main hall of the Music Bldg. A large, thickly-branched tree is flanked with a table bearing construction materials from which decorations are made by the students.

HUMOROUS DECORATIONS

These decorations range from conservative shapes cut from metallic paper to signs bearing pertinent remarks concerning the Music Dept. and faculty. Typical of the type of inscriptions are "We Three Kings of Orient Are" and "Oh Come Let Us Sedore Him" as well as the one about the three wise men who "Gunter Bethlehem."

The tree has had the same angel on its top for 10 years, the time the custom of the "do-it-yourself" tree has been in existence.

JEWELRY-LADEN TREE

Dormitories decorated Christmas trees in a traditional manner in the parlors and in a more unconventional style in the various rooms. The "Tiffany Tree" in lower Magnolia Hall is typical of these. Decorated by six coeds, the tree is adorned with jewelry of all description, hence its name.

Rumors of a tree decorated entirely with beer cans and metal icicles crept out of Smith Hall last week. Nameless sources remarked that the Christmas-decorated containers were surprisingly effective although somewhat unusual.

WHAT BETTER CHRISTMAS DECORATION FOR THE NEWS BUREAU AT FLORIDA STATE University than a Christmas tree made of newspapers? Posing with their creation, which also includes a sleigh pulled by one tiny reindeer and an oversized elephant in a red hat are, left to right, Barbara Hadlock, typist for the News Bureau; Judy Dodd, receptionist for the Public Relations Office; and Toni DiCarlo, student assistant in the News Bureau.

SG Officials Plan 1962 Work Agenda

Work on the "monster rules" that the [illegible] will occupy much of Student Government's attention [illegible] semester, it was announced yesterday.

All of these three items will [illegible] on the agenda for both the executive and two branch and Student Senate, according to Student Body President Bobby Byrd and Senate President Ken van Assenderp.

Adjustments of the individual budgets will then be considered, Byrd said. Some groups will need more and some less money in the trimester system.

In connection with the budget Byrd is going to try to get [illegible] representation in the executive branch for graduate and married students, which [illegible] groups have budgets but have no vote in Student Government, to advise the committee on these budgets. The married students have never had representation and since the Graduate Student Council folded this group does not have representation either, Byrd commented.

INTERNATIONAL STUDENTS PROGRAM

The International Students Program will be a campaign to make them feel more at home on campus," Byrd said. "We will call on sororities, fraternities and other campus committees to invite the students to dinner with them and to other activities.

[illegible] students program will [illegible] the new year.

Byrd commented.

Other Student Government plans [illegible] include a second radio program on a Tallahassee station, he said. One program is currently carried by a local station.

Completion of plans for the new student union is also on the agenda for the new year, Byrd said. "We must leave our plans early when the funds are made available or the building will be [illegible] delayed," he added. The final plans are now being studied by the Board of Control [illegible], he said.

TICKETS

A student-faculty committee appointed by Florida State University President Gordon W. Blackwell is also going to begin study of the use of I. D. and ID cards on the purchase of tickets to University sponsored activities.

"There have been numerous complaints about these methods," Byrd commented.

Another activity for the new year will be the institution of a lecture series on Student Government at meetings of the Council Committee. The group which meets twice a week is made up of representatives of the residence halls who are responsible for presentation of the ideas and goals of Student Government in those areas.

"During the first semester a lot of time has been wasted, while new officers and committee members became accustomed to their duties, now during the second semester the real functions of Student Government may be more efficiently accomplished, Byrd concluded.

Parkinson To Speak

Special speaker at the University Lecture Series Jan. 11 will be C. Northcote Parkinson.

He will be speaking at 8:15 in Westcott Auditorium. The title of his lecture will be "Professor C. Northcote Parkinson explains Parkinson's Law."

Parkinson a prominent historian and educator, has taught at Indiana University, in Harvard's Graduate School of Business and has held the Raffle Chair of History at the University of Malaya in Singapore.

The guest lecturer has written [illegible] main field of interest is shistory and political subjects, in regard to the evolution of political thought.

The law formulated by Parkinson states in paraphrase that "the larger you build an empire or the more people you hire on your business, the larger still your empire will grow and the more people you will hire—of necessity."

Library Gives Holiday Hours

(Classes resume)

Chiefs Give Bowl Show In Mobile

Florida State University's Marching Chiefs and the Mississippi Southern College Band will share the spotlight in pre-game and halftime activities at the 13th annual Senior Bowl Game in Mobile, Alabama on Jan. 6.

This all-star game will be a contest between outstanding seniors from the South battling top-notch seniors from the North. The game will be played in Mobile's Ladd Memorial Stadium and will be nationally televised.

The Marching Chiefs received the invitation to participate in the ceremonies from Rea Schuster, vice president and general manager of the Senior Bowl Association.

HALF TIME SHOW

In the halftime production, The Chiefs will perform songs following the theme of "The Sound of Music Along the Gulf Coast." Among the numbers they will play will be "Sound of Music" and "Do Re Mi" which they presented to the Homecoming audience. They will also offer "Stand over the Sea" and "By the Sea" among other favorites.

Mississippi Southern Band will follow the theme of "Weapons of War" throughout their halftime proceedings.

Dr. Manley R. Whitcomb, director of bands at FSU, said that all 170 members, representing 15 states would make the trip. Approximate cost of the trip will be $100 per member.

The Seminole majorettes, under the leadership of head majorette Jo Ann Beazley of Atlanta, will accompany the band. Performing in the corps will be: Barbara O'Neill, Sister Warwick, Lyn McClaren and Judy McCracken.

Added sparkle will be provided by the Garnet and Gold Girls, Linda Hamilton and Beverly Calvert. They have just completed their third year as soloists with the Marching Chiefs.

Yule Concert Given Tonight

A Christmas variety concert will be presented by the Concert Band, directed by Robert T. Braunagel, and the Marching Chiefs, directed by Manley Whitcomb, at Florida State University tonight.

The concert will be at 8:15 in Opperman Music Hall. The public is invited and there is no charge for admission. Included on the program will be a medley of Christmas music.

This variety concert will be the first performance of the Concert Band this fall. It will open the program with "Jesu Joy of Man a Desiring by Bach and will also play "Folk Song Suite by Vaughn Williams and "Mannin Veen" by Haydn Wood.

After the Concert Band's performance the Marching Chiefs will take the stage to provide a slightly different type of entertainment than is presented on the football field. The band will bring reflections of the 1961 football season as the outstanding drum section, known as the "Big 8", present the pre-game sequence. "Echoes of Dixie Campbell Stadium" will be heard in the music of "Indian Summer", "One Fine Day", "The Sound of Music" and "Do Re Mi".

The Seminole majorettes and the Garnet and Gold Girls will also perform.

One Thing That Is Yours

All the glitter, all the multi-colored strings of lights and the bright cut-outs of angels, santas, shepherds, all the hoopla and boisterous fun are very much a part of Christmas as we know it. There's not point in denying this, because most of us don't know any other kind of Christmas.

YET, LOOKING AT all the cuteness and at the occasional bit of tasteful loveliness, you can too often be aware that none of it touches you. It simply mingles and merges with traffic lights and neon ads into one kaliedoscopic morass of color that doesn't mean a thing.

Someone here at Florida State University said that it's too bad Christmas can't last the year around, not because of the glitter and gifts, but because something about the season seems to make a difference in people. Even the hurried shoppers and the harried clerks appear to make a genuine effort to be civil in their dealings.

EVERY YEAR CHRISTMAS is debated, defended and denounced. People vie for the honor of announcing to children that there is no Santa Claus. Others, of course, counter-attack with more statements that there is a Santa Claus.

The commercial aspects of Christmas have been discussed to meaninglessness. Some nations don't celebrate Christmas because it has no meaning for them. They are not degrading one of our cherished and customary holidays; they simply do not have any season designated Christmas. It all boils down to what Christmas means to you as an individual. You love Christmas or you do not.

THE REASONS CHRISTMAS is celebrated are basic. We need something greater than ourselves to believe in. Maybe Christmas comes nearest being the perfect definition for all the ambiguous terms we use so freely: freedom, equality, love, peace, rights, and many more. Certainly to many of us it means generosity, reunion, and perhaps beginnings and endings.

Christmas isn't really decorations and gift wrappings or greeting cards and eggnog. It isn't cardboard mangers or lip service Biblical quotations. There is nothing material about Christmas. It's in minds and hearts. It's in thought and words, dreams and reflections on ideas and matters not quite within the realm of human capture. It is an air that pervades wherever it is let in. It's there if you want it, in the poorest quarters. It can be Christmas on a subway as easily as in a cathedral. Christmas is yours; you can have it if you want it and it can mean and be what you wish it to be. Christmas doesn't need us particularly, but most of us need Christmas.

MAYBE THE BEST thing about Christmas is that it can be a healing time. Maybe it does last the year around if we want it to. Christmas is one indescribable something that was never really meant to be packed away for most of the year. It should be with you whenever you need it. Whatever it is, it's yours. LP

Christmas Due To Change

Christmas as we have known it in the past, is a vanishing holiday at Florida State University. For next year the sobering fear of final examinations will dim the glitter of the season and add tenseness to the December air.

This is saddening in a way. The weeks preceding the Christmas break are sometimes more satisfying than the actual vacation. There is a definite appeal in anticipation and the spirit of the season runs rampant as the holiday draws near.

On December 19, 1962, FSU will be in the midst of finals. Electricity now used for Christmas lights will be used in study lamps. Energy now spent to decorate will be consumed in course review. The haggard look of sleepless nights will have replaced the Christmas smile.

ITS A CHEERLESS prospect, but there is one saving grace. After the week before Christmas, the holidays will be welcomed with a deeper appreciation. There will be no tests staring the student in the face, no papers to be done over the holidays, no reading to get caught up. There will only be the sincere blessing of being out of school.

After the rigor of a concentrated academic program, we can trek home to rest. We will have a satisfied feeling that our efforts will have been spent on positive achievement rather than sheerly for our own personal pleasure.

The trimester system will bring many changes. Not the least of these will be the changes of the Christmas season.

We live in a tough, hard world these days. There seems to be less and less time for sentimental pleasures. We must be prepared to sacrifice for higher education. That sacrifice will be demanded soon.

Christmas In Albany

The sound of Negroes praying and singing for equality intermingled with Christmas carols in Albany, Ga., this past week. The nation watched as they quietly and peacefully made their plea.

LOCAL CITIZENS handled themselves commendably. They exhibited a restraint and calmness that outsiders might consider impossible in south Georgia. This restraint will keep Albany from being classed with McComb, Miss., Little Rock, Ark., and New Orleans, La., as centers of race hatred.

Possibly, the white citizens of Albany realized the sincerity of the Negro plea. We like to think so. Now we hope that they will encourage city officials to listen reasonably to requests by their fellow citizens.

STEPS TAKEN toward lowering racial barriers have been nil in Albany. Peaceful negotiations in the spirit of the Christmas season could make great strides towards reducing these inequalities.

Officials should not be allowed to hide behind statements that the demonstrators were trying to cause trouble and should not be listened to. Almost two thousand years ago a baby was born into the world that was destined to cause "trouble." We now commemorate His birth.

STEPS TAKEN to bring about equality of man, one of His teachings, would be stunningly appropriate at the Christmas season.

Christmas Story

And it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree from Caesar Augustus, that all the world should be taxed.

And this taxing was first made when Cyrenius was governor of Syria.

And all went to be taxed, every one into his own city.

AND JOSEPH ALSO went up from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth, into Judea, unto the city of David, which is called Bethlehem; because he was of the house and lineage of David.

To be taxed with Mary his espoused wife, being great with child.

And so it was, that, while they were there, the days were accomplished that she should be delivered.

AND SHE brought forth her firstborn son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn.

And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night.

AND, LO, THE ANGEL of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them: and they were sore afraid.

And the angel said unto them: fear not, for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord.

And this shall be a sign unto you; Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes lying in a manger.

AND SUDDENLY THERE was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying,

Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.

AND IT CAME TO PASS, as the angels were gone way from them into heaven, the sheperds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us.

AND THEY CAME with haste, and found Mary, and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger.

AND WHEN THEY had seen it, they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning this child.

And all they that heard it wondered at those things which were told them by the shepherds.

BUT MARY KEPT all these things, and pondered them in her heart.

And the shepherds returned, glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen as it was told unto them.

Where Are They Now?

By LESLIE POWELL

Right now it's difficult to see beyond the twenty-first of December . . . Witness the happy singers rioting in Longmire to the strains of "four more days and we'll be gone" (at this writing). Same singers have been caroling joy to the world Bob Byrd is come when the harrassed head of student government tries to enter his office unobstrusively. Don't feel too badly President Byrd . . . if it ain't one railroad it's another!

OR MAYBE THAT'S an erroneous statement, though meant in jest. Maybe it's just one airline after the other, for beginning yesterday at the latest a great many students were already winging it out of town for the holiday. It's just as well that New Year's follows Christmas so closely, otherwise our population on campus would dwindle to the point that nobody would need to build a junior college: they could just move in and set up shop right here. That way FSU would have gone full cycle: Men, Women and Children. FSCW, FSU, FSJC. Gad, what a muddle for later campus historians, not to mention the Board of Control and practically everybody else in the state.

THE ANNUAL MISTLETOE ambush has gotten well under way on east campus. Any coed that stands in a doorway is considered obvious at the outside. Those caught under light fixtures are considered subtle and the rest are considered dumb if they won't stand still anywhere. Christmas only comes once a year, or at least mistletoe is tolerated only once a year. Mostly I guess because it's hard to find the rest of the time. Looks like some florist would recognize a gold mine and look into mistletoe culture. Lucrative it would seem.

FOR THOSE INTERESTED persons who remember Clandia Thonnard from her student days here, she'll be in town over the holidays but briefly. Miss Thonnard won first poetry prize in last year's edition of The Legend here, and has had a new poem accepted by a New York publication whose correct name has slipped my mind.

And Flora Zbar, another of the fine female writers on campus has had her poem from the 1961 Legend, Phoenix Love, picked up and reprinted by the Sigma Tau Delta national English honorary magazine, The Rectangle.

FOR THOSE OF YOU who might wonder where the confusion went, Leslie Lowell is working in Atlanta as is Bonnie Perry, former Flambeau feature editor. Miss Lowell was editor of the 1961 Legend and was a co-founder of that publication in 1958. Both FSU graduates are employed by advertising-promotion firms in Atlanta.

Flambeau's former editor, Deanna Morris is working with the San Juan Star in Puerto Rico. We've temporarily lost track of the soldiering Bucky Cannon's Rose Nell Wilson), but when last heard from they were in Wisconsin

CAY CRANFORD is reputed to be housekeeping in Australia. Bill Trotts was writing last during a typhoon on Okinawa, and Linda Reams is expecting to return to FSU possibly this spring to do graduate work Mary Ellen Fisher cut her famous long red hair and is living in Massachusetts now as Mrs. Jim Dichard. Mark Austin is in the Sarasota area, Frank Coffee is with the Army in Europe (and it often looks like we may have a campus reunion there)

Isa Cohea Davidson is working in New York city and was seen here recently on a Route 66 segment. Betty Chazzara is in Miami or Chicago now. Patty Pachler is a grad student at Florida. Sue Lowell was last heard from via Hawaii via Australia via Japan. Pat Senn was on her way to the Philippine Islands at last word and Claude and Carolyn Rhea of the School of Music here are in New Orleans. Paul Smith was in Israel (he did a small part in Exodus) when the last stage stopped here with the news. Playgoers at FSU will remember Paul from The Hairy Ape.

We've lost track of Virginia Delavan and would be most interested in hearing of or from her. Georgianne Fry is back but it's Georgianne Bateman now.

And always we want to know: Where is Molly Kelley?

He Doffs His Hat To Kappa Alpha

By ROBERT SANCHEZ

When my colleague, Gerry Dobson, wrote an excellent satirical column recently on the Soviet-Albanian split, he felt obliged to append a note lest any readers take the article literally. Editors Note: The note appended to Mr. Dobson's column was appended by editorial request since we are aware of the number of literal Flambeau readers who only read words). It was indeed a wise precaution, for he, I, and many others who write for an FSU audience have long since discovered, it is futile to expect any modicum of maturity in the reactions of readers. Perhaps it is because we write what has been termed "provocative" columns. But there is no choice.

WE HAVE THE PROBLEM of an Arkansas farmer who purchased a mule from a dealer who advised him that the animal responded best to kindness and gentleness. When the farmer, after a period of weeks, could not get the mule to do so much as move, he returned the beast to the dealer, who demonstrated his technique Smashing the animal over the head with a heavy board, he said, "I forgot to tell you that you have to get her attention first."

Lest I receive irate letters from campus mule-lovers, I should state forthwith that there is no intention to compare the FSU reading public to a mule pack. Nevertheless, there is a certain apathy which necessitates getting the reader's attention The Flambeau has been urged to carry "serious, scholarly" treatises on the topics of the day. The trouble with that is that nobody reads them. The best ideas cannot be communicated unless there is someone on the receiving end. That does not mean that a journalist must sacrifice truth for readership; rather it involves "attention getting," followed up with reporting

Scholarly writing simply would not be read, even if any of our writers were capable of it, and subtle writing is misunderstood as often as not. Thus we have "provocative writing." It is nothing new. Mencken, Pegler, and others practiced the art for years on a far higher level. What is disappointing is the reaction of the readers who take disagreement on principle as a personal matter and seek to attack and vilify those with whom they disagree

I know of no instance in which any Flambeau columnist has attacked any person as a person. Columnists have criticized political views of individuals, often in strong language. They have taken a dim view of the acting, art, foreign policy views or philosophy of others, but have never made it a personal quarrel. In this respect, the letters to the editor in response to various columns have been disappointing . . . not because they disagree, but because they resort to emotional personal attacks upon columnists rather than an explanation of differing views. Such reactions are contrary to the tradition of tolerance in American democracy under which, for example, Herbert Hoover and Harry Truman have been both close personal friends and political enemies for years

PERSONS INTRODUCED to Flambeau columnists often react as though they had expected to meet some sort of ogre. They find it hard to believe that Mr. Dobson and I, for example, are both sober graduate students who even manage to share without violence the same home town. And they certainly do not subscribe to the ancient dictum that "I may disagree with what you say, but will defend your right to say it." Their emphasis is on suppression of "wrong" or "different" ideas, rather than logically answering such ideas In this respect, "liberals" seem to be as guilty as the conservatives.

IN ALL OF THE gloomy [illegible] straint, common sense, and go[illegible] there was one bright spot [illegible] that I doff my hat to the Order of Kappa Alpha. It seems that the gentlemen of that fraternity took exception to a column [illegible] mine In responding they presented a rational exposition of their views, pointing out where and why they differed. That is in the best tradition of American democracy. Let us hope [illegible] other writers of letters to the editor may receive in their Christmas stockings some of the [illegible] cession of emotional responses, taste which they have heretofore sadly lacked

Prexy's Plea: Take Care

DEAR FELLOW STUDENTS:

On behalf of the President of the Student Body's cabinet may I wish you a very Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. We of student government hope that your Christmas vacation will be spent in a very enjoyable manner.

In order that your vacation is completely enjoyable, please exercise extreme care if you plan to drive home The Florida Highway Patrol has advised us that homeward-bound students are in great danger unless they drive with the utmost caution.

Thousands of motorists will be on the highways this week Many of these drivers will be students like yourself, hurrying home to the many activities common during the Christmas season. The Florida Highway Patrol predicts that some students will never arrive home for Christmas They state that Christmas traffic accidents will take the lives of many drivers

So that you will not be included in the tragic toll of holiday traffic deaths, please drive carefully. Some tips we would reiterate are: (1) Drive at a reduced speed, it's better to arrive late than not at all, (2) Never drive when you become tired, pull over and rest for awhile, (3) Never mix driving and drinking, it's worse than a bomb, (4) Watch out for the other driver, he may not be watching out for you

We of student government hope that you will heed these suggestions. By doing so, you can more certainly assure yourself of arriving home in your care and not in a coffin.

Again, have a fun-filled holiday and make safe driving a part of your Christmas plans.

BOBBY BYRD
Student Body President

Up Standard

TO THE EDITOR:

This letter is addressed to the student body of our school. It is concerning the basketball game played in Tully Gymnasium December 14, against Clemson.

I was proud of the conduct displayed by our team, coach, and student body except for the one incident when some students rushed out on the court. They were supposedly showing school spirit by lowering themselves to the standards of Clemson University.

By controlling themselves at such moments, the students could help establish a reputation for our school that we would all be proud of.

The best way to display your school spirit is by conducting yourselves in a manner that you would not be ashamed of

A Messiah Comes

Submitted by MRS. GLOVER L. KEMP
PROPERTY CUSTODIAN

In the fullness of time, [illegible] long looked for day arrived [illegible] time for the Incarnation of the Son of God had come As the angels of glory received the mysterious message for earth they gladly withdrew from the shining courts of heaven. These celestial messengers spread their vast [illegible] very wings and with the speed of lightning they left behind them the golden streets, the palatial mansions, the emerald walls, and the pearly gates of the heavenly Jerusalem. It did not take them long to reach the end of their delightful journey.

With their countenances a[illegible] glow with angelic joy and radiant beauty they descended softly through the hazy air like falling stars as they most gracefully lowered themselves to earth, near the little town of Bethlehem where they found the shepherds watching sheep by night, and announced to them the glorious message of the Incarnation of the long expected Messiah. Their celestial song flooded the air and rolled over the hills and filled the valleys with the richest strains and sweetest melodies of heaven [illegible] in their angelical throng they changed in rapturous joy "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth, peace and Good will toward men."

"And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass which the Lord hath made known to us. And they came with haste, and found Mary, and Joseph and the Baby lying in a manger. And when they had seen it, they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning the Child."

Tribe Defeats Vols

Auburn, OCU Next

By BILL CHEEK
Flambeau Sports Editor

The Florida State Seminoles for a return bout with the Au- in Tigers here in Tallahassee.

Bill Cheek

The Seminoles won their first encounter with the Tigers earlier this year by defeating them 56-52.

The Tribe will be seeking their second win from the Tigers in an eight game series. Auburn has won six of the ten games already played.

FSU uses a similar type offense to that of Auburn. Both teams use a variation of the "shuffle."

In the first game this year Layton Johns was the high scorer for the Tigers and Dave Fedor was top man for the Seminoles. Starting off the New Year with Oklahoma City University, the Seminoles will play the Chiefs in Montgomery Gymnasium and in Tallahassee.

OCU will rely on fast breaks and speed to offset a lack of skill.

The Oklahoma team will participate in the 29th annual All-College Tournament. Other teams entering the meet will be: Wichita, Utah State, Bowling Green of Ohio, the University of Seattle, Houston, Texas Christian and Texas A&M.

FSU has won two out of the three encounters and Texas A&M three encounters with the Chiefs. The Seminoles defeated OCU 52-37 in 1958 and 103-75 in 1959. Florida State lost the second encounter with the Oklahoma team in 1960, 98-84.

A probable starting line up will be Larry Jones, 5-11 senior and returning starter; Gary Hill, 6-4 junior and returning starter; Manuel Heusman, 6-3 junior; Bud Koper, 6-5½ sophomore and Gary White, 6-6 junior.

The Florida State Seminoles tangled with the Clemson Tigers Thursday night and got clawed 82-72. Bud Kennedy's quintet lost the services of All-American candidate Dave Fedor when he received a bad charley horse of the thigh during the early part of the second half of the game. The injury was the result of an apparently deliberate attempt to put Fedor out of the game. Tom Mahaffey, a 6-7 senior forward from La Grange, Georgia, aimed at Fedor who was in a defensive position downcourt and ran full speed into the 6-6 senior. The action was termed unsportsmanlike by several fans.

With only minutes to go, the Tigers gained a 69-68 lead. Dale Ricketts was awarded two free throws with only two seconds remaining in the game. Ricketts missed the first but connected on the second and tied the game 69-69. The game then went into an overtime.

Woody Mortan put two foul shots in for Clemson. Ricketts sank one for the Tribe, extending the game into a second overtime.

FSU took an early lead 75-73, but Clemson jumped ahead 79-75 on three straight shots.

Ashworth sank a field goal to bring the Tigers lead down to 77-79. Morgan sank a field goal and an extra point to end the game 81-79

The Tigers now have a season-al record of three wins and two losses. Clemson now has scored victories over VMI and Virginia, and lost to Duke and North Carolina.

Nick Milasnovich led Clemson with 20 points on 21 attempts.

Clemson led all statistical fields hitting 46.5 of the field goals, 78.5 per cent of the foul shoots and cropped 47 rebounds

Ray Swain was high man for the Tribe with 18 points. Fedor, though he only played the early minutes of the second half, was second with 14 points. Dale Reeves hit in the double figures with 11 points.

The Seminoles cropped their third Southeastern Conference victory of the season when the University of Tennessee went down in defeat 69-62

FSU had four players hitting in the double column. Charlie Long was leading scorer with 18 points, Ray Swain was second with 17 points, Dave Fedor was third with 15 points and Jack Davis was fourth with 11 points.

Tennessee now stands with three straight losses for the season. The Seminoles now boast a 2-0 Southeastern Conference record and a 4-3 overall record.

Orb Bowling was the Vols high scorer with 16 points, Jerry Parker was second high with 14 points and Howie Moss was third with 10 points. Florida State trailed 30-33 at the half time but bounced back in the second half to win 69-62.

FSU hit fifty-two percent of its field goals, while Tennessee was only able to hit 42.2 percent. The Vols outrebounded the Seminoles, 47-28.

Head Basketball Coach Bud Kennedy said Jack Davis had the best night in years.

This was the first win for the Seminoles over Tennessee. Before the game the series stood at 0-2.

The Seminoles lost their first encounter to Ohio State 75-57. Taking on the University of Wisconsin the Tribe was defeated 64-63. Traveling to Florida the Tribe defeated the Gators 85-71.

Varsity Swimmers Win Tournament

The Garnet and Gold swimming meet, held Friday night in Montgomery Gym took spectaters by surprise as the freshmen squad claimed the lead in the first three events of the meet. The varsity, off to a slow start, caught fire and defeated the yearlings 57-48 in the intra-squad rivalry.

The freshmen jumped to an early lead in the first three events, but the experienced varsity gathered forces to hold the freshmen to one place in the next four events. Neither team had double winners for the night, but 23 of the team members participated in the intra-squad water fray. None of the times were officially recorded.

Coach Bim Stults feels that the team has a lot of room for improvement although he feels that the team as a whole is no farther than he expected. Because they have been in the water only a month, the men are not in shape, and definitely have a long way to go before they will be up to par with good swimming standards. "This meet usually shows us about how much work needs to be done in each event, both for the freshmen and varsity teams," stated Stults and he feels that the team will be ready for Georgia on Jan 10.

Coach Dee Eddington, the freshman coach, stated that he was very pleased with the results of the meet and "overly satisfied" with the freshmen efforts as a team.

Frosh Cagers Cop Five Wins Consecutively

By SHIRLEY HARDISON
Flambeau Sports Writer

Florida State's freshmen basketball team opened their season against Central Florida Junior College, winning the game 78-44 and began a climb to the top ranks of the unbeatable teams.

With five game behind them, the freshmen still remain in the unbeaten ranks, scoring wins over such teams as Pensacola Junior College, Chipola Junor College plus their last win over the combined team efforts of all the Navy bases surrounding Pensacola

Jerry Shirley a 6-5 forward from Mobile, Ala. has been one of the leading scorers for the team this season Ross Winters and Bob Gemming have also been hitting consistently for the Baby Seminoles during the climb to unbeaten ranks

In the Pensacola Junior College-FSU game Shirley tossed in 21 points to lend a hand in the 86-61 victory by the Seminoles. In this game, three of the Seminoles hit the double scoring column.

The Chipola Junior College and Florida State fray was played in Tully Gym, before more than 8,000 fans. Although they were behind 8-0 at the start, Chipola rallied several times to tie the game or come close to the FSU score. Pete Gonzales finally put the yearlings in front for the rest of the game with a layup shot, the score standing 56-54

The last victory for the freshmen team was over the Navy bases which surround Pensacola. Ross Winter tipped in 24 points and led the Baby Seminoles to a 79-60 final score. The FSU team was trading by three points at halftime, but went into a zone defense to stop the Bob Hyland, a 6-8 forward for the Goshawks' and limited him to three buckets the last half.

You need not walk alone

When was the last time you woke up in the morning and said to yourself "It's a great day to be alive"?

When was the last time you tossed a cheery "good morning" to your bus driver . . . or smiled at a stranger on the street?

When was the last time you felt that the world was really for you—helping you celebrate the good days and standing behind you when things were not so smooth?

You need not walk through life alone and annoyed with it. The strong companionship of deep religious Faith can be yours through regular weekly worship—with others who believe as you do.

In the peace of your church or synagogue, in the ritual of the service, in the quiet assurance of prayer you'll find the way to whatever is missing in your life.

Physical Fitness Being Studied For Comparison

The physical fitness of 371 Florida boys, aged 6 to 18, will soon be laid on the line against that of their counterparts in Europe and South Africa.

Dr. Marcel Hebbelinck, a visiting research associate at Florida State University who has been gathering data on the boys, all enrolled in the Leon County peephets some tag in physical skills will be found in favor of the boys in Europe and South Africa.

The Tallahassee boys, who are considered a good representative American sample, have performed rather better, however, than other youth in the United States who have taken similar tests.

The results of these first physical fitness tests came after a few years ago showed American youth were "softer" than those in Switzerland, Austria, and Italy (Kraus-Weber test of Minimum Muscular Fitness) and recently to Japan, Great Britain and Denmark (Physical Fitness Tests).

The alarm expressed included strong statements by President Dwight Eisenhower and later by President John F. Kennedy, on the need for more physical fitness.

Hebbelinck, who is from Belgium, thinks American "automation cars and T.V.—all implying a kind of "let's you do it" physical posture—are to blame. He sees the need for more methodology in physical education programs and more "educational" exercises.

Dr Hebbelinck thinks the emphases on fitness may be having some effect. At any rate the University School boys turned in good performances on all tests—the broad jump, high jump, 50-yard dash, hand grip, sit-ups, pull-ups and lung tests of vital capacity and especially good performances on throwing a softball.

INTEREST IN BASEBALL

The last is the one skill in which American youths have been found to exceed Europeans, an indication, he says, of the interest in baseball in this country. During the University School tests some fabulous performances were recorded, one 16-year-old throwing the ball 280 feet.

Hebbelinck's studies dug into a somewhat younger age group than previous American studies, which have concentrated on children 10 to 18. He added two tests also—the hand grip and vital capacity. In addition to recording physical performance with a series of tests given on the athletic field he also has recorded body anthropometric measurement and, in the case of elementary school children, has obtained IQ scores for correlation.

The next step is processing some 1,500 correlations on FSU's new IBM 709 computer. After this information is in hand next month Hebbelinck will write a paper on some phases of the study for the Research Quarterly of the American Association of Health, Physical Education, and Recreation and the Magazine Child Development.

Later he'll compare the Tallahassee group with youngsters in Belgium, Norway and in South Africa. He already has obtained data on these.

Dr. Hebbelinck has been making tests of the kind for about four years but at FSU he put to use for the first time several new pieces of equipment in the recently activated Research Laboratory in Tully Gymnasium, directed by Dr. Harry Campeys of the Physical Education and Recreation Dept.

In collaboration with Dr. Peter Everett of the department another series of tests will be completed using a sample of 60 college physical education majors. Two women graduate students soon will be put to work on the physical fitness of girls in the University School and of college women physical education majors and minors.

LEAVING TOMORROW

Hebbelinck himself is leaving the campus tomorrow after four months here. After visiting some 20 universities in the East and Midwest he will return to Belgium, where his permanent assignment is with the University of Ghent as research fellow of Belgium's National Foundation for Scientific Research.

He received all three of his degrees from Ghent including his doctorate last year, and he has been on the faculty for four years as a research associate in pharmacodynamics. He has studied also at the Universities of Oslo and Helsinki and for the four months before coming to FSU he was an exchange scholar in South Africa. His travel to the United States was paid for with a Fulbright grant.

Hebbelinck is an expert at rowing. He was a member of the rowing team which for three years held the national championship in Belgium. His wife, an elementary school teacher on leave, has helped him with some of the research undertaken at FSU.
